

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. You can search through the full text of this book on the web at <http://books.google.com/>

PREFACE

RECENT census returns for the United States, Austria, Brazil, Colombia, Denmark, Germany, Japan, Panama, and Switzerland are included in this, the fifty-eighth, issue of the YEAR BOOK. All the sections have received the usual revision; the information respecting Russia has been furnished from official Soviet sources. Since last year Montenegro has disappeared as an independent entity, while, on the other hand, Fiume is now one of the States of the world. Of these there are at present 64, counting the British Empire as one. Since the last edition of the YEAR BOOK was published, Esthonia, Georgia and Latvia have received complete recognition, and have therefore been placed in their proper alphabetical order in the YEAR BOOK. Other States without de jure recognition (e.g. Lithuania), or where Treaty arrangements have not yet been completed (e.g. Mesopotamia and Palestine), it has been thought best to retain for the present under the countries of which they were formerly part.

The "Additions and Corrections" contain information which became available too late for inclusion in the text. The Introductory Tables give the usual general surveys, a complete list of the Treaties of Peace, and data concerning the League of Nations. The maps show the New Baltic States and the Slesvig addition to Denmark.

Once more we have to express our thanks to Mr. A. D. Webb for his revision of the sections of the British Empire, to General Sir Frederick Maurice for his revision of the Army sections, to Mr. John Leyland for his revision of the Navy sections, and to numerous friends all over the world for valuable co-operation greatly appreciated.

IX.—FINANCE AND COMMERCE OF VARIOUS COUNTRIES.

The following statistics relating to the financial and commercial condition of various countries have been put together for convenience of reference, not for the purpose of comparison. Revenue and expenditure, which in some States are raised and expended by local authorities, are in others included in the national accounts. Debt in some countries is incurred for the sake of profitable investment, while in others it is unproductive and burdensome. With respect to trade, the figures in general show the special imports (or those for home consumption) and the special exports (or those of home produce and manufacture). Specie and bullion are generally excluded.

The statistics are for the most part for the calendar year 1920, or the financial year 1920-21.

Personnel: The following figures show the number of officers and men voted for the Royal Navy, the United States Navy, and the Imperial Japanese Navy for 1921-22, the numbers for 1914-15 being given for purposes of comparison—Great Britain, number voted 123,700. This was a maximum, to be reduced to 121,700 as soon as practicable, which latter figure includes 3,250 Coastguard, 5,100 boys, and 624 cadets, none of them available for manning. United States, the number to be voted had not yet been finally approved, but would probably be the same as last year—namely, 150,800, made up of 120,000 enlisted men, 9,800 officers, 1,000 Marine officers, and 20,000 Marines (rank and file)—all available for manning. Japan, the number borne on January 19, 1921, was 76,600, made up of approximately 7,000 officers and 69,600 men, all available for manning. The figures for 1914-15 were:—Great Britain, 151,000; United States, 67,644; and Japan (number borne at end of 1914), 55,712.

XII.—THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS.

(1) THE COVENANT.

In order to promote international co-operation and to achieve international peace and security by the acceptance of obligations not to resort to war, by the prescription of open, just and honourable relations between nations, by the firm establishment of the understandings of international law as the actual rule of conduct among governments, and by the maintenance of justice and a scrupulous respect for all treaty obligations in the dealings of organized peoples with one another, the High Contracting Parties agree to this Covenant of the League of Nations.

Article I.—The original members of the League of Nations shall be those of the Signatories which are named in the Annex to this Covenant and also such of those other States named in the Annex as shall accede without reservation to this Covenant. Such accession shall be effected by a Declaration deposited with the Secretariat within two months of the coming into force of the Covenant. Notice thereof shall be sent to all other Members of the League.

Any fully self-governing State, Dominion or Colony not named in the Annex, may become a Member of the League if its admission is agreed to by two-thirds of the Assembly, provided that it shall give effective guarantees of its sincere intention to observe its international obligations, and shall accept such regulations as may be prescribed by the League in regard to its military and naval forces and armaments.

Any Member of the League may, after two years' notice of its intention so to do, withdraw from the League, provided that all its international obligations and all its obligations under this Covenant shall have been fulfilled at the time of its withdrawal.

Article II.—The action of the League under this Covenant shall be effected through the instrumentality of an Assembly and of a Council, with a permanent Secretariat.

Article III.—The Assembly shall consist of Representatives of the Members of the League.

The Assembly shall meet at stated intervals and from time to time as occasion may require at the Seat of the League or at such other place as may be decided upon.

The Assembly may deal at its meetings with any matter within the sphere of action of the League or affecting the peace of the world.

At meetings of the Assembly each Member of the League shall have one vote, and may not have more than three Representatives.

Article IV.—The Council shall consist of Representatives of the Principal Allied and Associated Powers, together with Representatives of four other Members of the League. These four Members of the League shall be selected by the Assembly from time to time in its discretion. Until the appointment of the Representatives of the four Members of the League first selected by the Assembly, Representatives of Belgium, Brasil, Spain, and Greece shall be members of the Council.

With the approval of the majority of the Assembly, the Council may name additional Members of the League whose Representatives shall always be members of the Council; the Council with like approval may increase the number of Members of the League to be selected by the Assembly for representation on the Council.

The Council shall meet from time to time as occasion may require, and at least once a year, at the Seat of the League, or at such other place as may be decided upon.

The Council may deal at its meetings with any matter within the sphere of action of the League or affecting the peace of the world.

Any Member of the League not represented on the Council shall be invited to send a Representative to sit as a member at any meeting of the Council during the consideration of matters specially affecting the interests of that Member of the League.

At meetings of the Council each Member of the League represented on the Council shall have one vote, and may not have more than one Representative.

Article V.—Except where otherwise expressly provided in this Covenant, decisions at any meeting of the Assembly or of the Council shall require the agreement of all the Members of the League represented at the meeting.

All matters of procedure at meetings of the Assembly or of the Council, including the appointment of Committees to investigate particular matters, shall be regulated by the Assembly or by the Council and may be decided by a majority of the Members of the League represented at the meeting.

The first meeting of the Assembly and the first meeting of the Council shall be summoned by the President of the United States of America.

Article VI.—The permanent Secretariat shall be established at the Seat of the League. The Secretariat shall comprise a Secretary General and such secretaries and staff as may be required.

The first Secretary General shall be the person named in the Annex; thereafter the Secretary General shall be appointed by the Council with the approval of the majority of the Assembly.

The secretaries and staff of the Secretariat shall be appointed by the Secretary General with the approval of the Council.

The Secretary General shall act in that capacity at all meetings of the Assembly and of the Council.

The expenses of the Secretariat shall be borne by the Members of the League in accordance with the apportionment of the expenses of the International Bureau of the Universal Postal Union.

Article VII.—The Seat of the League is established at Geneva.

The Council may at any time decide that the Seat of the League shall be established elsewhere.

All positions under or in connexion with the League, including the Secretariat, shall be open equally to men and women.

Representatives of the Members of the League and officials of the League when engaged on the business of the League shall enjoy diplomatic privileges and immunities.

The buildings and other property occupied by the League or its officials or by Representatives attending its meetings shall be inviolable.

Article VIII.—The Members of the League recognize that the maintenance of peace requires the reduction of national armaments to the lowest point consistent with national safety and the enforcement by common action of international obligations.

The Council, taking account of the geographical situation and circumstances of each Member of the League, shall formulate plans for such reduction for the consideration and action of the several Governments.

Such plans shall be subject to reconsideration and revision at least every ten years.

After these plans shall have been adopted by the several Governments, the limits of armaments therein fixed shall not be exceeded without the concurrence of the Council.

The Members of the League agree that the manufacture by private enterprise of munitions and implements of war is open to grave objections. The Council shall advise how the evil effects attendant upon such manufacture can be prevented, due regard being had to the necessities of those Members of the League which are not able to manufacture the munitions and implements of war necessary for their safety.

The Members of the League undertake to interchange full and frank information as to the scale of their armaments, their military and naval programmes, and the condition of each of their industries as are adaptable to warlike purposes.

Article IX.—A permanent Commission shall be constituted to advise the Council on the execution of the provisions of Articles I. and VIII. and on military and naval questions generally.

Article X.—The Members of the League undertake to respect and preserve as against external aggression the territorial integrity and existing political independence of all Members of the League. In case of any such aggression or in case of any threat or danger of such aggression the Council shall advise upon the means by which this obligation shall be fulfilled.

Article XI.—Any war or threat of war, whether immediately affecting any of the Members of the League or not, is hereby declared a matter of concern to the whole League, and the League shall take any action that may be deemed wise and effectual to safeguard the peace of nations. In case any such emergency should arise the Secretary General shall, at the request of any Member of the League forthwith summon a meeting of the Council.

It is also declared to be the friendly right of each Member of the League to bring to the attention of the Assembly or of the Council any circumstance whatever affecting international relations which threaten to disturb international peace or the good understanding between nations upon which peace depends.

Article XII.—The Members of the League agree that if there should arise between them any dispute likely to lead to rupture, they will submit the matter either to arbitration or to inquiry by the Council, and they agree in no case to resort to war until three months after the award by the arbitrators or the report by the Council.

In any case under this Article the award of the arbitrators shall be made within a reasonable time, and the report of the Council shall be made within six months after the submission of the dispute.

Article XIII.—The Members of the League agree that whenever any dispute shall arise between them which they recognize to be suitable for submission to arbitration and which cannot be satisfactorily settled by diplomacy, they will submit the whole subject matter to arbitration.

Disputes as to the interpretation of a treaty, as to any question of international law, as to the existence of any fact which if established would constitute a breach of any international obligation, or as to the extent and nature of the reparation to be made for any such breach, are declared to be among those which are generally suitable for submission to arbitration.

For the consideration of any such dispute the court of arbitration to which the case is referred shall be the court agreed on by the parties to the dispute or stipulated in any convention existing between them.

The Members of the League agree that they will carry out in full good faith any award that may be rendered and that they will not resort to war against a Member of the League which complies therewith. In the event of any failure to carry out such an award, the Council shall propose what steps should be taken to give effect thereto.

Article XIV.—The Council shall formulate and submit to the Members of the League for adoption plans for the establishment of a Permanent Court of International Justice. The Court shall be competent to hear and determine any dispute of an international character which the parties thereto submit to it. The Court may also give an advisory opinion upon any dispute or question referred to it by the Council or by the Assembly.

Article XV.—If there should arise between Members of the League any dispute likely to lead to a rupture, which is not submitted to arbitration as above, the Members of the League agree that they will submit the matter to the Council. Any party to the dispute may effect such submission by giving notice of the existence of the dispute to the Secretary General, who will make all necessary arrangements for a full investigation and consideration thereof.

For this purpose the parties to the dispute will communicate to the Secretary General, as promptly as possible, statements of their case with all the relevant facts and papers, and the Council may forthwith direct the publication thereof.

The Council shall endeavour to effect a settlement of the dispute, and if such efforts are successful, a statement shall be made public giving such facts and explanations regarding the dispute and the terms of settlement thereof as the Council may deem appropriate.

If the dispute is not thus settled, the Council either unanimously or by a majority vote shall make and publish a report containing a statement of the facts of the dispute and the recommendations which are deemed just and proper in regard thereto.

Any Member of the League represented on the Council may make public a statement of the facts of the dispute and of its conclusions regarding the same.

If a report by the Council is unanimously agreed to by the members thereof other than the Representatives of one or more of the parties to the dispute, the Members of the League agree that they will not go to war with any party to the dispute which complies with the recommendations of the report.

If the Council fails to reach a report which is unanimously agreed to by the members thereof, other than the Representatives of one or more of the parties to the dispute, the Members of the League reserve to themselves the right to take such action as they shall consider necessary for the maintenance of right and justice.

If the dispute between the parties is claimed by one of them, and is found by the Council, to arise out of a matter which by international law is solely within the domestic jurisdiction of that party, the Council shall so report, and shall make no recommendation as to its settlement.

The Council may in any case under this Article refer the dispute to the Assembly. The dispute shall be so referred at the request of either party to the dispute, provided that such a request be made within fourteen days after the submission of the dispute to the Council.

In any case referred to the Assembly all the provisions of this Article and of Article XII. relating to the action and powers of the Council shall apply to the action and powers of the Assembly, provided that a report made by the Assembly if concurred in by the Representatives of those Members of the League represented on the Council and of a majority of the other Members of the League, exclusive in each case of the Representatives of the parties to the dispute, shall have the same force as a report by the Council concurred in by all the members thereof other than the Representatives of one or more of the parties to the dispute.

Article XVI.—Should any Member of the League resort to war in disregard of its covenants under Articles XII., XIII., or XV., it shall ipso facto be deemed to have committed an act of war against all other Members of the League, which hereby undertake immediately to subject it to the severance of all trade or financial relations, the prohibition of all intercourse between their nationals and the nationals of the covenant-breaking Member of the League, and the prevention of all financial, commercial, or personal intercourse between the nationals of the covenant-breaking Member of the League and the nationals of any other State, whether a Member of the League or not.

It shall be the duty of the Council in such case to recommend to the several Governments concerned what effective military or naval force the Members of the League shall severally contribute to the armed forces to be used to protect the covenants of the League.

The Members of the League agree, further, that they will mutually support one another in the financial and economic measures which are taken under this Article, in order to minimize the loss and inconvenience resulting from the above measures, and that they will mutually support one another in resisting any special measures aimed at one of their number by the covenant-breaking Member of the League, and that they will take the necessary steps to afford passage through their territory to the forces of any of the Members of the League which are co-operating to protect the covenants of the League.

Any Member of the League which has violated any covenant of the League may be declared to be no longer a Member of the League by a vote of the Council concurred in by the representatives of all the other Members of the League represented thereon.

Article XVII.—In the event of a dispute between any Member of the League and a State which is not a Member of the League, or between States not Members of the League, the State or States not Members of the League shall be invited to accept the obligations of membership in the League for the purposes of such dispute, upon such conditions as the Council may deem just. If such invitation is accepted, the provisions of Articles XII. to XVI. inclusive shall be applied with such modifications as may be deemed necessary by the Council.

Upon such invitation being given the Council shall immediately institute an inquiry into the circumstances of the dispute and recommend such action as may seem best and most effectual in the circumstances.

If a State so invited shall refuse to accept the obligations of membership in the League for the purposes of such dispute, and shall resort to war against a Member of the League, the provisions of Article XVI. shall be applicable as against the State taking such action.

If both parties to the dispute when so invited refuse to accept the obligations of membership in the League for the purposes of such dispute, the Council may take such measures and make such recommendations as will prevent hostilities and will result in the settlement of the dispute.

Article XVIII.—Every treaty of international engagement entered into hereafter by a Member of the League shall be forthwith registered with the Secretariat and shall as far as possible be published by it. No such treaty or international engagement shall be binding until so registered.

Article XIX.—The Assembly may from time to time advise the reconsideration by Members of the League of treaties which have become inapplicable and the consideration of international conditions whose continuance might endanger the peace of the world.

Article XX.—The Members of the League severally agree that this Covenant is intended as abrogating all obligations or understandings inter se which are inconsistent with the terms thereof, and solemnly undertake that they will not hereafter enter into any engagements inconsistent with the terms thereof.

In case any Member of the League shall, before becoming a Member of the League, have undertaken any obligations inconsistent with the terms of this Covenant, it shall be the duty of such Member to take immediate steps to procure its release from such obligations.

Article XXI.—Nothing in this Covenant shall be deemed to affect the validity of international engagements such as treaties of arbitration or regional understandings like the Monroe Doctrine for securing the maintenance of peace.

Article XXII.—To those colonies and territories which as a consequence of the late war have ceased to be under the sovereignty of the States which formerly governed them and which are inhabited by peoples not yet able to stand by themselves under the strenuous conditions of the modern world, there should be applied the principle that the well-being and development of such peoples form a sacred trust of civilization and that securities for the performance of this trust should be embodied in this Covenant.

The best method of giving practical effect to this principle is that the tutelage of such peoples should be entrusted to advanced nations who by reason of their resources, their experience or their geographical position, can best undertake this responsibility, and who are willing to accept it, and that this tutelage should be exercised by them as Mandatory powers on behalf of the League.

The character of the mandate must differ according to the stage of the development of the people, the geographical situation of the territory, its economic conditions, and other similar circumstances.

Certain communities formerly belonging to the Turkish Empire have reached a stage of development where their existence as independent nations can be provisionally recognized subject to the rendering of administrative advice and assistance by a Mandatory until such time as they are able to stand alone. The wishes of these communities must be a principal consideration in the selection of the Mandatory.

Other peoples, especially those of Central Africa, are at such a stage that the Mandatory must be responsible for the administration of the territory under conditions which will guarantee freedom of conscience or religion, subject only to the maintenance of public order and morals, the prohibition of abuses such as the slave trade, the arms traffic and the liquor traffic, and the prevention of the establishment of fortifications or military and naval bases and of military training of the natives for other than police purposes and for the defence of the territory, and will also secure equal opportunities for the trade and commerce of other Members of the League.

There are territories, such as South-West Africa and certain of the South Pacific Islands, which, owing to the sparseness of their population, or their small size, or their remoteness from the centres of civilization, or their geographical contiguity to the territory of the Mandatory, and other circumstances, can be best administered under the laws of the Mandatory as integral portions of its territory, subject to the safeguards above mentioned in the interests of the indigenous population.

In every case of mandate, the Mandatory shall render to the Council an annual report in reference to the territory committed to its charge.

The degree of authority, control, or administration to be exercised by the Mandatory shall, if not previously agreed upon by the Members of the League, be explicitly defined in each case by the Council.

A permanent Commission shall be constituted to receive and examine the annual reports of the Mandatories and to advise the Council on all matters relating to the observance of the mandates.

Article XXIII.—Subject to and in accordance with the provisions of international conventions existing or hereafter to be agreed upon, the Members of the League

- (a) will endeavour to secure and maintain fair and humane conditions of labour for men, women, and children both in their own countries and in all countries to which their commercial and industrial relations extend, and for that purpose will establish and maintain the necessary international organizations ;
- (b) undertake to secure just treatment of the native inhabitants of territories under their control ;
- (c) will entrust the League with the general supervision over the execution of agreements with regard to the traffic in women and children, and traffic in opium and other dangerous drugs ;
- (d) will entrust the League with the general supervision of the trade in arms and ammunition with the countries in which the control of this traffic is necessary in the common interest ;
- (e) will make provision to secure and maintain freedom of communications and of transit and equitable treatment for the commerce of all Members of the League. In this connexion, the special necessities of the regions devastated during the war of 1914-1918 shall be borne in mind ;
- (f) will endeavour to take steps in matters of international concern for the prevention and control of disease.

Article XXIV.—There shall be placed under the direction of the League all international bureaux already established by general treaties if the parties to such treaties consent. All such international bureaux and all commissions for the regulation of matters of international interest hereafter constituted shall be placed under the direction of the League.

In all matters of international interest which are regulated by general conventions but which are not placed under the control of international bureaux or commissions, the Secretariat of the League shall, subject to the consent of the Council, and if desired by the parties, collect and distribute all relevant information and shall render any other assistance which may be necessary or desirable.

The Council may include as part of the expenses of the Secretariat the expenses of any bureau or commission which is placed under the direction of the League.

Article XXV.—The Members of the League agree to encourage and promote the establishment and co-operation of duly authorized voluntary national Red Cross organizations having as purposes the improvement of health, the prevention of disease, and the mitigation of suffering throughout the world.

Article XXVI.—Amendments to this Covenant will take effect when ratified by the Members of the League whose Representatives compose the Council and by a majority of the Members of the League whose Representatives compose the Assembly.

No such amendment shall bind any Member of the League which signifies its dissent therefrom, but in that case it shall cease to be a Member of the League.

II. PROTECTION OF MINORITIES.

Provision is made in all the treaties for the protection of minorities, in these terms:— Nationals who belong to racial, religious or linguistic minorities shall enjoy the same treatment and security in law and in fact as the other nationals. In particular they shall have an equal right to establish, manage and control at their own expense charitable, religious and social institutions, schools and other educational establishments, with the right to use their own language and to exercise their religion freely therein.

The King's legal title rests on the statute of 12 and 13 Will. III. c. 3, by which the succession to the Crown of Great Britain and Ireland was settled on the Princess Sophia of Hanover and the 'heirs of her body being Protestants.' By proclamation of May 9, 1910, under the Royal Titles Act, 1901, the title of the King is declared to be 'George V., by the Grace of God of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland and of the British Dominions beyond the Seas King, Defender of the Faith, Emperor of India. By proclamation of July 17, 1917, the Royal family became known as the House and Family of Windsor.

By Letters Patent of November 30, 1917, the titles of Royal Highness and Prince or Princess are (except for existing titles) to be restricted to the Sovereign's children, the children of the Sovereign's sons, and the eldest living son of the eldest son of the Prince of Wales.

The Regency Act, 1910 (10 Edw. VII. and 1 Geo. V., ch. 26) appoints Queen Mary to act as regent in the event of the demise of the King and his succession by any of his children under the age of 18 years.

Provision is made for the support of the Royal household by the settlement of the Civil List soon after the commencement of each reign. (For historical details, see YEAR BOOK for 1908, p. 5.) By Act of 10 Ed. VII. and 1 Geo. V. c. 28 (August 3, 1910), the Civil List of the King, after the usual surrender of hereditary revenues, is fixed at 470,000*l.*, which 110,000*l.* is appropriated to the privy purse of the King and Queen, 125,800*l.* for salaries of the Royal household and retired allowances, 193,000*l.* for household expense 20,000*l.* for works, 13,200*l.* for alms and bounty, and 8,000*l.* remains unappropriated. The same Civil List Act of 1910 also provides for an annuity of 70,000*l.* to Queen Mary in the event of her surviving the King. Should the Prince of Wales marry, the Prince of Wales will receive an annuity of 10,000*l.*, and should she survive the Prince of Wales this annuity will be raised to one of 30,000*l.* Further, there is to be paid to trustees for the benefit of the King's children (other than the Duke of Cornwall) an annual sum of 10,000*l.* in respect of each son (other than the Duke of Cornwall) who attains the age of 18 years, and a further annual sum of 15,000*l.* in respect of each such son who marries, and an annuity of 6,000*l.* in respect of each daughter who attains the age of 21 or marries. The First Commissioner of the Treasury, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, and the Keeper of the King's Privy Purse are appointed the Royal Trustees under this Act. Queen Alexandra, the Queen-Mother, receives the annuity of 70,000*l.* provided by the Civil List Act of 1910. Civil List pensions may be granted, but are not chargeable on the sum paid for the Civil List. All these payments are charged on the Consolidated Fund, into which the surrendered hereditary revenues are carried. The King has paid to him the revenues of the Duchy of Lancaster, the payments made therefrom in 1920 being 43,000*l.* for His Majesty's use.

On the Consolidated Fund are charged likewise the following sums allowed to members of the royal family:—25,000*l.* a year to the Duke of Connaught; 6,000*l.* to H.R.H. Helen Augusta Victoria; 6,000*l.* to Princess Louise, Duchess of Argyll; 6,000*l.* to H.R.H. Beatrice Mary Victoria Feodore; 6,000*l.* to the Duchess of Albany; and 6,000*l.* to each of the late King's daughters.

The Heir Apparent has an income from the revenues of the Duchy of Cornwall, the payment in 1920 on his account being 10,000*l.*

Constitution and Government.

I. IMPERIAL AND CENTRAL.

The supreme legislative power of the British Empire is vested in Parliament. Parliament is summoned by the writ of the sovereign issued out of Chancery, by advice of the Privy Council, at least twenty days previous to its assembling.

The annual session used to extend from the middle of February to about the middle of August, and only occasionally later, but since 1914 the sittings of Parliament have been interrupted only by comparatively short intervals. Every session must end with a prorogation, and all Bills which have not been passed during the session then lapse. A dissolution may occur by the will of the sovereign, or, as is most usual, during the recess, by proclamation, or finally by lapse of time, the statutory limit of the duration of any Parliament being five years. The life of the last Parliament, beginning in November 1910, should have ended in January, 1916, but was, owing to the war, extended by successive Acts to November, 1918, nearly eight years' duration.

Under the Parliament Act, 1911 (1 and 2 Geo. V, ch. 13), all Money Bills so certified by the Speaker of the House of Commons), if not passed by the House of Lords without amendment, may become law without their concurrence on the royal assent being signified. Public Bills, other than Money Bills or a Bill extending the maximum duration of Parliament, if passed by the House of Commons in three successive sessions, whether of the same Parliament or not, and rejected each time, or not passed, by the House of Lords, may become law without their concurrence on the royal assent being signified, provided that two years have elapsed between the second reading in the first session of the House of Commons, and the third reading in the third session. All Bills coming under this Act must reach the House of Lords at least one month before the end of the session. Finally, the Parliament Act limited the maximum duration of Parliament to five years instead of seven (but the duration of the last Parliament was specially extended, as stated above).

The present form of Parliament, as divided into two Houses of Legislature, the Lords and the Commons, dates from the middle of the fourteenth century.

The House of Lords consists of peers who hold their seats—(i) by hereditary right; (ii) by creation of the sovereign; (iii) by virtue of office—Law Lords, and English archbishops (2) and bishops (24); (iv) by election for life—Irish peers (28); (v) by election for duration of Parliament—Scottish peers (16). The full house would consist of about 726 members, but the voting strength (in January, 1921) was about 709.

The House of Commons consists of members representing County, Borough, and University constituencies in the three Divisions of the United Kingdom. No one under 21 years of age can be a member of Parliament. Clergymen of the Church of England, ministers of the Church of Scotland, and Roman Catholic clergymen are disqualified from sitting as members; Government contractors, and sheriffs, and returning officers for the localities for which they act, are also among those disqualified. No English or Scottish peer can be elected to the House of Commons, but non-representative Irish peers are eligible. Under the Parliament (Qualification of Women) Act, 1918, women are also eligible, and the first woman member took her seat in December, 1919.

In August, 1911, by resolution of the House of Commons, provision was first made for the payment of a salary of 400*l.* per year to members, other than those already in receipt of salaries as officers of the House, as Ministers or as officers of His Majesty's household. Payment began as from April 1911. This provision does not extend to the House of Lords.

Under the Representation of the People Act, 1918, the franchise was revised and extended, several million women and new male voters being enfranchised. Male electors must be of full age (twenty-one years), and have resided, or occupied business premises of an annual value of not less than ten pounds, in the same parliamentary borough or county, or one contiguous thereto, for six months ending on January 1 or July 15 (in Ireland the latter date alone applies). A woman voter must be thirty years of age, and entitled to be registered as a local government elector (or, as regards Scotland, deemed to be so registered) in respect of the occupation of premises of a yearly value of not less than five pounds, of a dwelling house; or she must be the wife of a husband entitled to be so registered: lodgers in unfurnished, but not furnished, rooms can vote if otherwise qualified. There is also a University franchise, to be qualified for which a man must be twenty-one years of age, and a woman thirty years, and each must have taken a degree, or, in the case of a woman, have fulfilled the conditions which would entitle a man to a degree. In Scotland and Ireland other scholastic attainments are admitted as qualifications. Male persons who served in the war are entitled to be registered at the age of nineteen years, if otherwise qualified.

No person may vote at a general election for more than two constituencies for one of which, in the case of a man, there must be a residence qualification, and, in the case of a woman, a local government qualification, her own or her husband's. The second vote must rest on a different qualification.

Disqualified for registration are (among others) infants, peers, idiots and lunatics, aliens, bankrupts; and, for five years after the war, conscientious objectors who have not fulfilled certain conditions as to the performance of war work or other work of national importance. Receipt of poor relief or other alms no longer counts as a disqualification.

Two registers of electors must be prepared each year, one in the spring, and the other in the autumn, except in Ireland, where only one is required; and the authorised expenses are met by local and State funds in equal parts. University registers may be made up as the governing bodies decide, and a registration fee not exceeding 1*l.* may be charged.

In university constituencies returning two or more members the elections must be according to the principle of proportional representation, each elector having one transferable vote. At a general election all polls must be held on the same day, except in the case of Orkney and Shetland, and of university elections. Provision is made for absent electors to vote, in certain cases by proxy.

Under the same Act the seats in Great Britain were redistributed on the basis of one member of the House of Commons for every 70,000 of the population. By a separate Act, redistribution in Ireland was made on the basis of one for every 43,000 of the population. The total membership of the House of Commons was thereby raised from 670 (as established in 1885) to 707.

The number of persons qualified for registration as parliamentary electors under the Representation of the People Act, 1918, was in 1920 about 21,776,000 (nearly one-half of the population). Women numbered 8,856,000. Prior to this Act the number qualified was about 8,350,000 (all males).

The following is a table of the duration of Parliaments called since the accession of Queen Victoria (for heads of the Administrations see p. 10.)—

The executive government of Great Britain and Ireland is vested nominally in the Crown, but practically in a committee of Ministers, called the Cabinet, whose existence is dependent on the support of a majority in the House of Commons. In November, 1918, the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland set up an advisory Council of seven members to advise on matters affecting Ireland.

An Act to establish a separate Parliament in Ireland was passed in 1914, but never came into force. In 1920 this was repealed and a new Act passed, the Government of Ireland Act, 1920, under which two Parliaments are to be established, one for "Northern Ireland" (comprising the parliamentary counties of Antrim, Armagh, Down, Fermanagh, Londonderry, and Tyrone, and the parliamentary boroughs of Belfast and Londonderry), and one for "Southern Ireland" (the rest of the country). Each Parliament will consist of a Senate and a House of Commons, and will have power to legislate for their respective areas except in regard to (1) matters of Imperial concern, and (2) certain matters concerning Ireland which are temporarily "reserved" to the Imperial Parliament (police, postal service, Post Office and Trustee savings banks, designs for stamps, registration of deeds, Public Record Office, land purchase). Certain funds derived from Irish taxation will be allocated to the two Irish Exchequers, after deduction of (1) a contribution towards Imperial liabilities and expenditure (temporarily fixed at £18,000,000 a year) and (2) the cost of "reserved" services, while the Parliaments are given certain powers of independent taxation. The executive power is vested in the Lord Lieutenant (appointed for six years), advised by ministers responsible to the respective Parliaments. The Senate of S. Ireland will consist of 3 ex-officio, 17 nominated, and 44 elected persons; that of N. Ireland, of 2 ex-officio and 24 elected persons. Senators will hold office for a fixed term of years. The House of Commons of S. Ireland will consist of 128 and that of N. Ireland of 52 elected members, and the Houses will continue for five years, unless sooner dissolved. Money Bills must originate in the Commons, and the powers of the Senates with respect thereto are limited. Disagreement between the two Houses is to be settled by joint sittings. The qualifications for membership of the Parliaments are similar to those for membership of the Imperial House of Commons. Ireland will continue to return 46 members to the latter.

There is also to be established a "Council of Ireland," consisting of 40 persons elected in equal numbers by the two Parliaments. This Council will administer the railways and fisheries, Diseases of Animals Acts, and any powers delegated to it by identical Acts of the two Parliaments, and it may consider any questions bearing on the welfare of Ireland and make suggestions in relation thereto to the two Parliaments. The latter may establish by identical Acts, in lieu of this Council, a Parliament for the whole of Ireland, consisting of two Houses, and so bring about Irish Union. This Parliament will take over the powers of the two Parliaments, except as otherwise provided, and will also control certain of the services temporarily "reserved" to the Imperial Parliament.

The Act is to come into force generally on May 3, 1921.

The Cabinet, prior to December, 1916, consisted of the political chiefs of the principal Government Departments, and exceeded twenty in number. With the formation of Mr. Lloyd George's Government at that date, the Cabinet was reduced to about six in number. This Cabinet became known as the 'War Cabinet,' and, as occasion required, was expanded into an 'Imperial War Cabinet' by the inclusion of the Prime Ministers, and other representative ministers, of the various parts of the Empire. The constitution of the 'Imperial War Cabinet' in 1917 may be taken as a formal recognition of the equality of status between the various responsible governments of the Empire. Continuity in the work of this Cabinet was secured by giving in July, 1918, the Prime Minister of each Dominion the right to nominate a Cabinet Minister, either as a resident or a visitor in London, to represent him at the meetings of the Cabinet held between the plenary sessions.

A meeting of Prime Ministers has been summoned for June, 1921, to act on the lines of the Imperial War Cabinet, to deal with urgent problems of common interest.

In June, 1918, a 'Standing Committee of Home Affairs' was formed from among the political heads of Departments, whose function was to consider questions of internal policy and such domestic questions as required the co-operation of more than one Department, or were of such importance that they would otherwise have called for the consideration of the War Cabinet. Its decisions were circulated to, and, when necessary, revised by, the War Cabinet.

In October, 1919, the 'War Cabinet' and the Home Affairs Committee were dissolved, and a full Cabinet of about twenty members re-constituted.

The head of the Ministry is the Prime Minister, a position first constitutionally recognised, and special precedence accorded to the holder, in 1905. No salary is attached to the office of Prime Minister, as such, and it is usually held in conjunction with some other high office of State, generally that of First Lord of the Treasury. His colleagues in the Ministry are appointed on his recommendation, and he dispenses the greater portion of the patronage of the Crown.

The present Government (appointed January, 1919) consists of the following members :

(a) THE CABINET.

II. LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

England and Wales.—In each county the Crown is represented by H. M. Lieutenant for the county, who is generally also custos rotulorum, or keeper of the records. The recommendation of persons for appointment by the Lord Chancellor as justices of the peace rests with the Lieutenants, but local advisory committees are set up, as and when required, to advise the Lieutenants and the Lord Chancellor on these appointments. The Lieutenants are the presidents of the County Associations formed under the Territorial and Reserve Forces Act, 1907, and their duties as such relate to the organisation, equipping and maintenance of the Territorial Forces. Otherwise their duties are almost nominal. There is also a sheriff, who represents the executive of the Crown, an under-sheriff, a clerk of the peace, coroners, who are appointed and paid by the County Councils, and other officers. The licensing of persons to sell intoxicating liquors, and the administration of the criminal law—except that which deals with some of the graver offences—are in the hands of the magistrates.

For the purposes of local government England and Wales are divided into sixty-two administrative counties, including the county of London, differing in area from the old geographical counties, which, except for historical purposes, do not now exist. The new counties are administered by the justices and by a popularly-elected Council, called a County Council, which co-opt a prescribed number of aldermen, either from their own body or from outside it. Aldermen are elected for six years, half of them retiring every third year. A councillor is elected for three years. Women are eligible. The jurisdiction of the County Councils includes all the administrative work formerly performed by the justices and many new powers conferred by recent Acts of Parliament, the principal items being the making of county and police rates; levying of duties on licences for carriages, armorial bearings, guns, dogs, killing and dealing in game; borrowing of money; licensing of houses for music and dancing, and of racecourses; maintenance and management of pauper lunatic asylums; maintenance of reformatory and industrial schools; management of bridges and main roads; regulation of fees of inspectors, analysts, and other officers; coroner's salary, fees, and district; Parliamentary polling districts and registration; contagious diseases of animals; allotments, weights and measures, sale of food and drugs. Under Acts of 1902, 1903, and 1918 the County Councils are also the local education authorities, and other recent acts have in minor matters extended their jurisdiction. The control of the county police is vested in a standing joint committee composed of an equal number of magistrates and members of the County Council. The London Metropolitan police are, however, under the control of the Home Secretary.

The administrative counties, with the exception of the County of London, are subdivided into 'County Districts' which are either 'Urban' or 'Rural,' as the case may be. Generally speaking, an urban district comprises a town or a small area more or less densely populated, and a rural district takes in several country parishes. Women may be elected to these District Councils. The District Councils administer the Public Health and Highway Acts, and also exercise powers under the Housing Acts. Urban District Councils may also take over main roads from the County Councils; provide burial grounds, allotments, baths and washhouses, libraries, open spaces, museums, isolation hospitals, &c.; exercise powers under Provisional Orders or Private Acts for gasworks, tramways, electric light and power works, &c. Any urban district with 20,000 inhabitants may also be a local education authority. The Rural District Councils may also provide allotments, cemeteries, &c.; make arrangements for an adequate water supply; and exercise any 'Urban powers' conferred on them by the Local Government Board.

In every civil parish in a 'rural district' there is a Parish Meeting, at which every parochial elector may attend and vote. In such parishes of over 300 inhabitants there is in addition a Parish Council. Women are eligible for election. Parishes of less than 300 inhabitants may have Parish Councils if authorised by the County Council. To these Parish Councils have been transferred all the civil powers of the old Vestries, including the election of overseers, and in addition very considerable powers over charities, allotments, and other public matters. Where there is no Parish Council some of these powers, including the appointment of the overseers, are exercised by the Parish Meeting. Urban District Councils can, by petitioning the Local Government Board—which is the supreme Local Government authority—obtain part or all of the powers of a Parish Council. Only Parish Meetings may have power to adopt the Public Libraries Acts, the Baths and Washhouses Acts, the Lighting and Watching Acts, the Burials Acts, and the Public Improvements Acts.

The main central authority in London, the capital of the Empire, is the County Council, created by the Local Government Act of 1888. It has considerable powers in regard to public health, housing, bridges and ferries, asylums, street improvements, parks, main drainage, fire brigade, sanitary control, education, and numerous other matters. It is also the tramway authority for the county. The City Corporation have powers respecting sanitation, police, bridges, justice, &c., in the City of London. London comprises the ancient city with an area of one square mile, and an area 118 square miles beyond the city, which is divided into 28 metropolitan boroughs, under the London Government Act, 1899, each with a mayor, aldermen, and councillors (women are eligible). The Councils have powers in regard to public health, highways, rating, housing, education, &c., but they are not boroughs in the statutory sense as in the rest of the Kingdom. The County Council has certain powers of control over them. It sanctions loans, approves the construction of sewers and the carrying out of local improvements, and has considerable public health duties in connection with the boroughs.

In all the great towns, local business is administered by a municipal Corporation, which derives its authority from charters granted by the Crown as modified by the Great Municipal Corporations Act of 1837, and the Act of 1882. There are three kinds of boroughs, county boroughs, quarter session boroughs, and small boroughs of special and generally ancient jurisdiction. The County Boroughs are outside the jurisdiction of the County Councils but in other Municipal Boroughs these Councils have certain powers and duties. A municipal Corporation consists of the mayor, aldermen, and burgesses, and acts through a Council elected by the burgesses—practically by the ratepayers. The councillors serve for three years (women are eligible) one-third retiring annually; the aldermen are elected by the Council, and the mayor, who serves for one year, also by the Council. A municipal Corporation has practically all the powers of an urban district council, and in some cases municipal boroughs have a separate commission of the peace and maintain their own police force. As to Poor Law and Education administration, see 'Pauperism' and 'Instruction.'

Scotland.—By the Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1894, a Local Government Board for Scotland was constituted. It consists of the Secretary for Scotland as President, the Solicitor-General of Scotland, the Under-Secretary for Scotland, and three other members nominated by the Crown. The Local Government Act which was passed for Scotland in 1889 followed in its main outlines the English Act of the previous year. The powers of local administration in counties formerly exercised by the Commissioners of Supply and Road Trustees were either wholly or in part transferred to the new Councils, which took over their duties and responsibilities in 1890. The Act of 1894 provided that a Parish Council should be established in every parish to take the place of the Parochial Boards and to exercise powers similar to those of the Parish Councils in England. Municipal bodies exist in the towns of Scotland, as in those of England, with bailies and provosts instead of aldermen and mayors. There are in Scotland five kinds of burghs—(1) Burghs of barony; (2) Burghs of regality (no practical distinction between these two); the councils of these two classes of burghs ceased to exist in 1893 by statutory enactment; (3) Royal Burghs, representatives of which meet together annually in a collective corporate character, as the 'Convention of Royal Burghs,' for the transaction of business; (4) Parliamentary Burghs, which possess statutory constitutions almost identical with those of the Royal Burghs; (5) Police Burghs, constituted under general or local Police Acts, in which the local authority is the Police Commissioners. These two latter burghs, by Acts passed in 1879 and 1895, are enabled to send representatives to the convention.

Ireland.—The principal county authority for local government used to be the grand jury, appointed under the Act 6 & 7 Will. IV. c. 116; but, by the Local Government (Ireland) Act, 1898, provision was made for the establishment of popularly elected Councils for counties and rural districts. Under the Local Government (Ireland) Act, 1919, the councillors are ected for three years, on the system of the single transferable vote. The Council of each county and rural district, immediately after any triennial election, may choose additional members to hold office till the next triennial election. The administrative business formerly managed by the grand juries and presentment sessions has been transferred to these Councils. The Act of 1898 gave them the assessment and collection of the rates, except in urban areas, the maintenance in part of asylums and infirmaries, and the appointment of Coroners. They have functions also in respect of many other matters, such as technical instruction, school attendance and medical inspection of school children, regulation of motor car traffic, collection of licence duty on mechanically-propelled vehicles, treatment of tuberculosis and venereal disease, and the alteration of Parliamentary Polling Districts and Places. The general business relating to public health and labourers' cottages, formerly vested in the Board of Guardians, now devolves on the Rural District Council. The administration of the poor relief Acts is exercised by Boards of Guardians. Each Board comprises the councillors of each rural district in the union, together with specially elected representatives of each urban district in the union. The cities of Dublin, Belfast, Cork, Limerick, Londonderry, and Waterford are county boroughs, and they, together with five other corporate boroughs, have a mayor, aldermen, and councillors, whose powers are regulated by 3 & 4 Vict. c. 108. The ordinary affairs of the borough, such as lighting, paving, and cleansing, are administered by the Council, which has power to levy rates for these purposes. The County Boroughs, Corporate Boroughs, and other populous centres are Urban Districts, and their Councils are the local authorities for the purposes of the Public Health, Local Government and Housing Acts. In the absence of any other form of incorporation, the Urban District Council, and not the town itself, is the body corporate. In a few small towns, the local affairs are administered by a body of Commissioners appointed under the Towns Improvement Act, 1854, who have powers to discharge certain municipal functions, and are empowered to levy rates to defray the cost of administration. Towns must have 1,500 inhabitants to enable them to obtain municipal government under this Act, and any such town may be constituted an Urban District.

Under the Local Government Act of 1898 and the Local Authorities (Ireland) (Qualification of Women) Act, 1911, women are eligible for election as members of all local government elected bodies in Ireland, in the same manner and on the same conditions as men.

The proportion of male to female births in Ireland in 1920 was 1,061 to 1,000.

2. Emigration and Immigration.

In the thirty-eight years 1815-1852, the total number of emigrants from the United Kingdom was 3,463,592. Up to 1852 the emigration returns made no distinction between British subjects and foreigners. From 1853 to 1920 inclusive, the number of passengers of British origin, to places out of Europe, was 14,140,000; and the number of foreigners, to such places, was 5,880,000, total, 20,020,000. Figures of the passenger traffic to and from non-European countries in recent years are given as follows:—

	Outward			Inward			Balance outward

A revised form of passenger list adopted since April 1, 1912, shows that the number of British emigrants (excluding persons only temporarily absent from the United Kingdom) to places out of Europe was about 390,000 in 1913, 215,000 in 1914, 77,000 in 1915, 53,000 in 1916, 10,000 in 1917, 10,600 in 1918, 147,000 in 1919; 285,000 in 1920; and the immigrants of British nationality about 86,000 in 1913, 104,000 in 1914, 92,000 in 1915, 58,000 in 1916, 12,000 in 1917, 8,800 in 1918, 93,000 in 1919; 86,000 in 1920.

The destinations of British subjects leaving the United Kingdom for non-European countries in 1920 were mainly the United States (90,429), British North America (134,079), Australasia (49,357), British South Africa (29,019), India and Ceylon (19,326). The bulk of the aliens travelled to the United States (61,224 in 1920).

The passenger movement between the United Kingdom and European countries (including all ports in the Mediterranean and Black Seas) in recent years is given as follows:—

The number of Irish who emigrated from Ireland was in 1913, 30,960; 1914, 20,314; 1915, 10,659; 1916, 7,302; 1917, 2,129; 1918, 980; 1919, 2,975. The total number from May 1, 1851, to the end of 1919 was 4,322,660.

Religion.

1. England and Wales.

The Established Church of England is Protestant Episcopal. Civil disabilities on account of religion do not attach to any class of British subjects. Under the Welsh Church Acts, 1914 and 1919, the Church in Wales and Monmouthshire was disestablished as from March 31, 1920. Wales has been formed into a separate Archbishopric. Property belonging to the Church in Wales, and a sum of 1,000,000*l.* provided by Parliament, have been assigned to a temporary body not exceeding three persons, called the Welsh Commissioners, for distribution to a body representing the Church (called the Representative Body), and to certain other authorities including the University of Wales.

The King is by law the supreme governor of the Church in England, possessing the right, regulated by statute, to nominate to the vacant archbishoprics and bishoprics. The King, and the First Lord of the Treasury in his name, also appoint to such deaneries, prebendaries, and canonries as are in the gift of the Crown, while a large number of livings and also some canonries are in the gift of the Lord Chancellor.

There are 3 archbishops (at the head of the three 'provinces' of Canterbury, York and Wales) and 43 bishops, and 39 suffragan and assistant bishops in England and Wales. Each archbishop has also his own particular diocese, wherein he exercises episcopal, as in his province he exercises archiepiscopal jurisdiction. Under the bishops are about 30 deans and 100 archdeacons. Under the Church of England Assembly (Powers) Act, 1919, there is a National Assembly, called 'the Church Assembly,' in England consisting of a House of Bishops, a House of Clergy, and a House of Laymen, which has power to legislate regarding Church matters. The first two Houses consist of the Convocations of Canterbury and York, which in turn consist of the bishops (forming an Upper House), archdeacons, and deans, and a certain number of proctors, as the representatives of the inferior clergy (forming the Lower House). The House of Laymen is elected by the lay members of the Diocesan Conference. Parochial affairs are managed by a Parochial Church Meeting and Church Council. Every measure passed by the Church Assembly must be submitted to an Ecclesiastical Committee, consisting of fifteen members of the House of Lords nominated by the Lord Chancellor, and fifteen members of the House of Commons nominated by the Speaker. This Committee reports on each measure to Parliament, and the measure becomes law if each House of Parliament passes a resolution to that effect.

The number of civil parishes (districts for which a separate poor rate is or can be made) at the census of 1911 was 14,614. These, however, in most cases, do not coincide with ecclesiastical parishes, which have lost their old importance. Of such parishes there were (1911) 14,387, inclusive of the Isle of Man and the Channel Islands. Each parish has its church, presided over by an incumbent or minister, who must be in priest's orders, and who is known as rector, vicar, or perpetual curate, according to his relation to the temporalities of his parish. Private persons possess the right of presentation to about 8,500 benefices; the patronage of the others belongs mainly to the King, the bishops and cathedrals, the Lord Chancellor, and the universities of Oxford and Cambridge. In 1918 there were about 13,000 beneficed clergy, and 6,500 curates, etc. The voluntary offerings in the Church of England in 1915 amounted to 8,853,000*l.*

Of 33,682 churches and chapels registered for the solemnisation of marriage at the end of 1919, 16,114 belonged to the Established Church and 17,568 to other religious denominations. Of the marriages celebrated in 1919, 59.7 per cent. were in the Established Church, 5.2 per cent. in the Roman Catholic Church, 11.5 per cent. were Nonconformist marriages, 0.04 per cent. were Quaker marriages, 0.5 per cent. Jewish, and 23.1 per cent. civil marriages in Registrar's Office.

The following summary of statistics of Nonconformist churches (England and Wales, Channel Islands, and Isle of Man) in 1915 is taken from the 'Church Year-Book' for 1916. It only claims to present an approximation of the actual condition. Figures relating to the Anglican Church are appended.

The Unitarians have about 350 places of worship, the Catholic Apostolic Church about 80, the New Jerusalem Church about 75. The Salvation Army, a religious body with a semi-military organisation, carries on both spiritual and social work at home and abroad, and had (December, 1919) about 24,600 officers and employés, 11,170 corps and outposts, and 71,400 local officers; the places of worship in the United Kingdom have about 550,000 sittings. There are about 260,000 Jews in the United Kingdom with about 200 synagogues.

Roman Catholics in England and Wales are estimated at 1,900,000. There are (1920) four archbishops (of whom one is a cardinal), thirteen bishops, and one archbishop and three bishops-auxiliary; about 3,900 priests (not officiating); and about 1,920 churches, chapels, and stations.

2. Scotland.

The Church of Scotland (established in 1560 and confirmed in 1688) is presbyterian, the ministers all being of equal rank. There is in each parish a kirk session, consisting of the minister, and of several laymen called elders. There are 84 presbyteries (formed by groups of parishes) meeting frequently throughout the year, and these are grouped in 16 synods which meet half-yearly and can be appealed to against the decisions of the presbyteries. The supreme court is the General Assembly, which consists of over 700 members, partly clerical and partly lay, chosen by the different presbyteries, royal burghs, and universities. It meets annually in May (under the presidency of a Moderator appointed by the Assembly, the Sovereign being represented by a nobleman known as Lord High Commissioner), and sits for ten days, any matters not decided during this period being left to a Commission.

The number of parishes is 1,461, and the number of churches, chapels, and stations about 1,700. Under regulations enacted by the General Assembly, the parishioners choose their own ministers. The entire endowments of the Church from all sources, including manse and glebes, amount to about 392,000*l.* per annum. The voluntary contributions of the congregations for religious and charitable purposes in 1919 amounted to 643,589*l.* The number of communicants in 1919 was about 728,000; ministers, about 1,800; lay missionaries, 105; Sunday scholars, 192,500.

On October 31, 1900, the Free Church of Scotland and the United Presbyterian Church of Scotland (formed by secessions at various times from the Church of Scotland) constituted themselves into the United Free Church of Scotland. A minority, representing 26 congregations, regarding themselves as the Free Church of Scotland, claimed all the property and endowment funds. A Royal Commission reported that the Free Church was unable adequately to carry out all the trusts of the property. The Churches (Scotland) Act, 1905, was passed for the apportionment of the Church property between the Free and the United Free churches by an Executive Commission of five, and the result was that funds amounting to 659,469*l.* were allocated to the Free Church (310,000*l.* for general provision and the remainder for College provision and various other purposes). The United Church's foreign mission was extended in 1918 to the oversight of the Basel Mission (formerly under German domination) in the Gold Coast. The foreign mission agents (including natives) number 5,017, and income 395,000*l.* The United Church had, on December 31, 1919, 1,489 congregations, and 39 preaching stations; 528,000 members, besides adherents; 2,050 Sunday schools, with 21,647 teachers and 201,000 children in attendance. The Church courts are the General Assembly, 12 synods, 64 presbyteries, and 292 local presbyteries. Annual revenue from free-will offerings is over a million sterling. The Church has three theological colleges (at Edinburgh, Glasgow and Aberdeen) with 19 professors and lecturers. The Free Church had in 1919, 150 congregations and stations, 89 ministers and probationers, and one college. Contributions to schemes amounted to 18,437*l.*, and the income to 24,022*l.* There are in Scotland some small outstanding Presbyterian bodies and also Baptists, Congregationalists, Methodists, and Unitarians. The Episcopal Church in Scotland has 7 bishoprics, 416 churches and missions, 320 clergy, and 56,000 communicants.

The Roman Catholic Church had in Scotland (1920) two archbishops, six bishops and one bishop-auxiliary; about 600 priests, 454 churches, chapels, and stations, and about 546,000 adherents.

The proportion of marriages in Scotland according to the rites of the various Churches in 1918 was: Established, 88·5 per cent.; United Free, 11·6; Roman Catholic, 11·0; Episcopal, 3·6; others, 7·1; irregular, 17·2.

3. Ireland.

The principal religious professions in Ireland, as recorded at the census of 1911, are as follows:—

	Leinster	Munster	Ulster	Connaught	Total
Roman Catholics . . .	990,045	973,805	690,816	588,004	3,242,670
Protestant Episcopalians	140,182	50,646	366,778	19,010	576,611
Presbyterians . . .	12,866	4,180	421,410	2,069	440,525
Methodists . . .	8,068	4,175	48,816	1,323	62,382
Other Professions . . .	10,883	2,689	53,881	578	68,031
Total . . .	1,162,044	1,035,495	1,581,696	610,984	4,390,219

The Roman Catholic Church in Ireland is under four archbishops, of Armagh, Cashel, Dublin, and Tuam, and 24 bishops, besides one bishop-auxiliary. On a vacancy the clergy of the diocese nominate a successor and whose favour they postulate or petition the Pope. The bishops of the province also present the names of two or three eligible persons to the Pope. The new bishop is generally chosen from this latter number; but the appointment virtually rests with the cardinal. The emoluments of a bishop arise from his parish, which is generally the best in the diocese, from licences of marriage, &c., and from the cathedraticum, a small contribution paid by incumbents of parishes. The incomes of all classes of the Roman Catholic clergy of Ireland arise partly from fees, but principally from Christmas and Easter dues, and other voluntary offerings. Number of priests in Ireland (1919), about 3,830.

The Church of Ireland (Protestant Episcopal) ceased to be 'established by law' by Act of Parliament (1869) 32 & 33 Vict. cap. 42. It has (1920) two archbishops, 11 bishops, and 1,500 clergymen; 1,400 churches. Previous to disestablishment its income was 600,000*l.*, and its entire capital was estimated at 14,000,000*l.* By the Disestablishment Act about 7,600,000 was allotted to it by way of commutation, and 500,000*l.* in lieu of private endowments. The Church is governed by a General Synod, consisting of House of Bishops (13 in number) and House of Representatives (208 clerical and 416 lay members). There are also 23 diocesan synods. The funds of the Representative Body on December 31, 1918, amounted to 9,569,302*l.*

The largest Presbyterian body consists of 36 presbyteries, and has 62 ministers and 561 congregations, with 105,000 members; contribution during year 1919-20, 265,900*l.*; total church income, 348,000*l.* The Church has two colleges, one in Belfast purely theological, the other (Magee College) in Londonderry with theological, literary, and scientific department. The two together have 15 professors and lecturers.

The proportion of marriages in Ireland in 1919 according to the mode of celebration was: Roman Catholic, 68·9 per cent.; Church of Ireland, 15·6 per cent.; Presbyterian, 11·1 per cent.; civil contract, 1·9 per cent.; other denominations, 2·5 per cent.

Instruction.

University Education.

In England the highest education is given at the ancient universities Oxford and Cambridge, the former having 22 colleges and 3 private halls, and the latter 17 colleges and 1 hall; the university of Durham, founded in 1833 with a college of medicine, and since 1871, a college of science at Newcastle; the university of London, founded in 1836 and reorganised in 1900 so as to be a teaching as well as an examining body, with 24 colleges or schools giving instruction in 8 faculties; the Victoria University (Manchester), founded in 1880; the Birmingham University, founded in 1900; the Liverpool University, founded in 1903; the Leeds University, founded in 1904; the Sheffield University, founded in 1905; and the Bristol University, founded in 1909. There are also University Colleges at Exeter, 51 lecturers, &c., 74 students, 1919-20; Nottingham (founded 1881), 122 lecturers, and 2,760 students, 1920-21; Reading (started with the establishment of art classes in 1860), 113 lecturers, &c., 1,600 students, 1919-20; and Southampton (founded 1850), 39 lecturers, &c., 900 students, 1921. There are special Agricultural Colleges at Carlisle, Cirencester, Glasgow, Newport (Shropshire), Kingston-on-Soar (Derby), Wye (Kent), Uckfield (Sussex), and Ripley (Surrey). The university of Wales, founded in 1903, has 3 colleges (Cardiff, Aberystwyth and Bangor). In Scotland there are 4 universities, viz., at St. Andrew founded 1411; Glasgow, 1450; Aberdeen, 1494; Edinburgh, 1582. The Carnegie trust, founded in 1901 with a capital of 2,000,000*l.*, has an annual income of 100,000*l.*, of which half is devoted to the equipment and expansion of the Scottish Universities and half to assisting students. In Ireland is the university of Dublin, founded 1591. In 1909 was founded in Dublin the National University of Ireland, and in Belfast the Queen's University of Belfast. The former has 3 constituent colleges, viz., the University Colleges of Cork, Galway, and Dublin. The following table gives the approximate number of professors, lecturers, &c., and students of the Universities in the United Kingdom for 1920-1921.

At most of the Universities and University Colleges women students are admitted on equal terms with men. There are, however, several colleges exclusively for female students:—Bedford (61 teachers, &c., 570 students), Royal Holloway (31 teachers, 200 students) and Westfield Colleges (18 teachers, &c., 108 students) in London; Newnham (18 teachers, &c., 250 students) and Girton (27 teachers, &c., 170 students) Colleges in Cambridge; Lady Margaret Hall (6 teachers, &c., 96 students), Somerville College (12 teachers, &c., 123 students), St. Hugh's College (7 tutors, 120 students), and St. Anne's College (6 teachers, 86 students), in Oxford. Women were first admitted to membership of Oxford University, and to take degrees, in October, 1920.

Secondary and Technical Education, &c.

In England and Wales the councils of counties, of county boroughs, of county boroughs with population over 10,000, and of urban districts with population over 20,000, are the local authorities for higher education. Under the Education Act, 1918, County and County Borough Councils are required, with the approval of the Board of Education, and in co-operation, if necessary, with other educational authorities) to provide "for the progressive development and comprehensive organisation of education" in their several areas and in any schemes submitted for approval to the Board of Education for the furtherance of this object, provision must be made to secure that children and young persons (persons under 18 years of age) shall not be debarred by inability to pay fees from receiving the benefits of any form of education from which they are capable of profiting. Continuation schools are being established, providing courses of study, instruction, and physical training, without payment of fees, for young persons under 16 years of age, and frequently for those under eighteen years of age; subject to certain exceptions, attendance at these schools is compulsory for 320 hours (in some cases 280 hours) each year. The students' employment may be suspended, if required by the Education Authority, on any day during which attendance is necessary at these schools. "Works schools" may be established, and must be inspected. Local education authorities may also, with the approval of the Board of Education) provide or aid the supply of holiday or school camps; centres and equipment for physical training; playing fields, school baths and swimming baths; and other facilities for social and physical training. Provision must be made for the supply and training of teachers; and teachers and students may be aided to carry out research. County and County Borough Councils must also provide for the medical inspection of children and young persons in secondary schools, continuation schools, and certain other non-elementary schools and educational institutions. To these purposes the local education authorities may apply money raised by rates, besides devoting to them the residue under the Local Taxation (Customs and Excise) Act, 1890, and they may borrow money. Grants are to be made to them by the Board of Education, amounting to not less than half the net expenditure recognised by the Board. They have power to provide scholarships, including allowances for maintenance, and to pay fees; in schools provided by them they must not pay for religious instruction; in schools not provided by them they can neither impose nor forbid religious instruction.

In 1917-18, there were in England and Wales 1,061 recognised secondary schools on the Grant List, with 238,314 full-time pupils (123,353 boys and 114,961 girls). In addition there were 134 other secondary schools recognised by the Board of Education as efficient, with probably about 26,000 pupils. In 1917-18 there were also recognised 10 preparatory schools (i.e., preparatory to secondary schools proper) with 1,140 pupils. The Board also recognises a number of institutions providing technical instruction courses, and day technical classes; schools of nautical training; university tutorial classes; schools of art; and evening and other part-time schools. Examinations in science and art are held by the Board, and scholarships, exhibition prizes, &c., are awarded to successful competitors.

In Scotland, under the Education (Scotland) Act, 1918, the local authorities for the purposes of education are called 'education authorities' and the 'education areas' for which they are elected are the burghs of Edinburgh, Glasgow, Aberdeen, Dundee, and Leith, and the counties, including the remaining burghs. These authorities work through 'school management committees,' representing the authority, the parents, and the teachers. Adequate provision of all forms of primary, intermediate, and secondary education in day schools, without payment of fees, must be made by these authorities. They may grant assistance, by payment of fees (in cases where fees are payable), travelling expenses, maintenance allowances &c., to suitable persons, to facilitate their attendance at intermediate or secondary schools, or at universities, training colleges, or other educational institutions. A county education authority may also provide books for the use of the resident adult population. Continuation classes must be provided for young persons under the age of 16 years on a certain date, the age limit ultimately becoming 18 years, and attendance is required for at least 320 hours per year between the hours of 8 a.m. and 7 p.m. Exemption from such attendance may be granted in certain circumstances. In 1918-19 there were 56 grant-receiving secondary schools, with an average attendance in the secondary departments of 14,933 (and a total attendance of 21,628).

In Ireland there is an Intermediate Education Board. Its income is derived partly from the interest on the capital sum of one million sterling (Irish Church Funds), partly from an annual sum of 46,567*l.* provided under the Revenue Act, 1911, in lieu of the amount formerly payable under the Local Taxation (Customs and Excise Act), 1890. The income in 1918 from these and certain other sources was 86,318*l.* In addition, under the Intermediate Education Act, Ireland, 1914, the Board received from Parliament a sum of 40,000*l.*, known as the Teachers' Salaries Grant, and a further sum of 50,000*l.* voted by Parliament.

The Board holds every year a general public examination for such candidates as present themselves. It pays grants to schools in respect of this examination, and also pays grants on the results of Inspection. In 1919 these grants amounted to 59,748*l.*, besides exhibitions and prizes to students amounting to 6,413*l.* In that year 12,119 students (7,316 boys and 4,803 girls) presented themselves for examination, and the numbers who passed were 3,819 boys, 2,340 girls, total 6,159. Apart from these subventions, secondary education in Ireland is in private hands.

Throughout Ireland technical instruction is organised under the Councils of county boroughs, urban districts, and counties, and is controlled by the Department of Agriculture and Technical Instruction, with the advice of a Technical Instruction Board and a Consultative Committee of Education. The Department aims at the co-ordination of its work with that of other educational authorities. In 1918-19, out of the Parliamentary grant to the Department, 81,158*l.* was paid as grants to technical schools and classes of science and art and technical instruction in non-agricultural subjects; 38,450*l.* as grants to day secondary schools; and 1,944*l.* as grants for drawing and manual instruction in primary schools. There is also an annual grant (out of the Department's Annual Endowment Fund) of 55,000*l.* for technical education in non-agricultural subjects. Further, a grant of 7,940*l.* for manual instruction and domestic economy in rural districts, and 2,700*l.* for classes in lace and crochet making and other rural industries, was made by the Agricultural Board in 1918-19. Central institutions under the Department are the Royal College of Science, Dublin, with 250 students (1918-19), the Metropolitan School of Art, with 276 pupils (1918-19), the Irish Training School of Domestic Economy, 30 students. The Killarney school of housewifery had 29 students (1918-19). In urban and county technical schools and classes (1918-19) there were 44,566 students.

Elementary Education.

England and Wales.—Elementary education in England and Wales is under the control of the Board of Education. The local administration is in the hands of the Councils of counties, of county boroughs, of non-county boroughs with population over 10,000, and of urban districts with population over 20,000. The last two authorities can transfer their powers to the local county councils. The education authorities work through committees (consisting of members of their own bodies, other persons with special qualifications, and women) and school managers. Schools aided, but not provided, by local authorities have 4 'foundation' managers and 2 managers appointed by Councils. Women may be managers. On July 31, 1918, the number of Local Education Authorities in England and Wales for enforcing school attendance was 318.

The local education authorities maintain all public elementary schools and control the expenditure necessary for this purpose. The only financial responsibility resting on the managers of 'non-provided' schools is to supply the buildings. In the case of schools not provided by the local authorities, their directions as to secular instruction (including the number and qualification of teachers) must be complied with; they have power to inspect the schools, and they must receive, free of charge, the use of the school-house for elementary school purposes. Education funds are derived from State grants (to the extent of at least half the net expenditure recognised by the Board of Education), local rates, &c., and the education authorities have borrowing powers. Income from endowments for such purposes of elementary education as fall within the scope of the local education authorities is paid to these authorities and applied in aid of the rates.

Elementary education is free. Attendance at school is to be compulsory between the ages of 5 and 14 years, and bye-laws may be made in any area requiring attendance up to the age of 15 years, either for children generally, or with certain exceptions. (For attendance at Continuation Schools, see above, p. 31.) Provision must be made for courses of advanced instruction for the older or more intelligent children; and for 'practical' instruction in cooking, laundrywork, housewifery, dairywork, handicrafts, gardening, &c. The local education authorities may supply, or aid the supply of, nurseries, schools and classes for children between 2 and 5 years of age, or such later age as may be approved by the Board of Education, and may make arrangements for attending to the health, nourishment, and physical welfare of such children. Arrangements must also be made for the education of physically or mentally defective children, and epileptic children. Provision may also be made for holiday or school camps, centres for physical training, school baths, and other facilities for social and physical training. In exceptional circumstances (such as remoteness of the homes from the school board and lodging, and other facilities, may be provided..

Provision must be made by local education authorities for attending to the health and physical condition of children in public elementary schools and for the supply of meals.

Employment of children under the age of 12, and street-trading under the age of 14, are prohibited.

In 1919, the number of schools (ordinary elementary, higher elementary, special, and certified efficient) in England and Wales for elementary education was 21,473, with accommodation for about 7,100,000 pupils. The number of scholars on the books of these schools on January 31, 1919, was 2,218,862 aged under 5; 4,582,760 aged 5 and under 12; 1,113,232 aged 12 and over; total, 5,914,854. In 1920 there were 12,266 voluntary schools for ordinary public elementary education, with accommodation for about 2,730,000 pupils; and 8,705 Council schools, with accommodation for about 4,355,000 pupils; total ordinary public elementary schools, 20,971, with total accommodation of about 7,085,000. The average attendance at these schools in 1918-19 was 5,108,000, and the number of teachers was 168,000. The number of higher elementary schools was 1,113, with 11,550 registered pupils on the last day of January, 1919. 'Special schools' comprised, in 1919, 57 for the blind, with accommodation for 3,200 pupils; 50 for the deaf, with accommodation for 4,600 pupils; 198 for mentally defective children, with accommodation for 15,500 pupils; 162 for physically defective children, with accommodation for 11,400 pupils; 6 for epileptic children with accommodation for 500 pupils; and 'certified efficient' schools. There were also 59 poor law schools, on March 31, 1919. In 1919-20 there were 87 training colleges for teachers for elementary schools in England and Wales, with accommodation for 13,542 students.

Scotland.—Under the Education (Scotland) Act, 1918, elementary education is controlled by specially elected 'education authorities' (see under Secondary Education, &c., p. 32). Education is compulsory up to the age of 15 years, with exemption, on certain conditions, for children over 15. 'Nursery schools' may be provided for children over 2 and under 5 years of age (or a later age, if approved by the Scottish Education Department). Existing 'voluntary' schools may be transferred to the education authorities, who must accept such transfer. After November, 1920, grants to voluntary schools, made under the Education (Scotland) Act, 1897, are to cease, except in special circumstances.

Employment of children under the age of 13, and street-trading under the age of 17, are prohibited.

The number of elementary schools in receipt of grants in 1919 was 3,311, with accommodation for 1,113,305 pupils. The average attendance during the year ended August 31, 1919, was 725,066, and the average number of children on the register, 837,923. These figures include 196 higher-grade schools; accommodation, 41,702; average attendance, 31,050; average number on register, 34,997.

There were in 1918-19 21,436 certificated teachers, 304 assistant teachers, and 6 pupil teachers. In 1919-20 there were at 4 training centres and 3 training colleges 2,244 senior students ; and 2,198 junior students at 118 training centres. In 1919-20 there were 956 continuation class centres.

Ireland.—Elementary education in Ireland has been, since 1831, under the control of the ‘Commissioners of National Education in Ireland.’ In 1918 there were 8,002 primary schools in operation : the average number of pupils on the registers was 688,955 ; and the average attendance was 451,031.

The teachers receiving personal salaries from the Commissioners on December 31, 1918, numbered approximately 7,590 principal teachers, 5,770 assistants, besides 45 workmistresses and 2,380 junior assistant teachers. There are 7 training colleges, affording facilities for the training of 1,195 King’s scholars.

The expenditure under the Education Acts in 1918-19 was as follows:—

Justice and Crime.

England and Wales.

The Supreme Court of Judicature is the ultimate authority in all cases, civil and criminal, in England and Wales. It exercises its power through the High Court of Justice and a variety of subordinate local courts. The principal courts having criminal jurisdiction are the petty sessional courts, the general or quarter sessions, the courts of oyer and terminer and assize delivery, more popularly known as ‘assizes,’ and the Central Criminal Court. Two or more justices of the peace, the Lord Mayor or any alderman of the City of London, or any metropolitan or borough police magistrate or other stipendiary magistrate, sitting in a court house, constitute a petty sessional court. The courts of quarter sessions are held four times a year by the justices of the county. Similar courts can be held at other times, and are then called ‘general sessions.’ Two justices constitute a court, but usually a larger number attend. Women may be magistrates. Certain cities and boroughs have a court of quarter sessions, with similar jurisdiction to the county justices in quarter sessions assembled, in which the recorder of the borough is the judge. The assize courts are constituted by Judges of the High Court (or in some cases by King’s Counsel bearing His Majesty’s special commission). These go on circuit twice or four times a year, visiting every county in turn, and hearing and determining all civil cases entered for trial and all criminal cases presented by the Grand Jury of the County or Riding of the County. Trials are, in general, by jury, and the jury, subject to the direction of the Judge on points of law, are the sole judges of the facts of the case. Women are liable to serve on juries. The Central Criminal Court the court of oyer and terminer and gaol delivery for the City of London and a large surrounding district. The sessions of this court are held at least twice a year and more often if necessary. The Recorder and the Comm Serjeant, and, if the number of the prisoners makes it necessary, the judge of the City of London Court, sit on the first two days, after which they are joined by one of the judges of the High Court on the rota, for whom the more serious cases are reserved. Criminal cases of special importance or complexity arising in any part of the country may, by direction of the Lord Chief Justice, be brought for trial in the King's Bench Division of the High Court of Justice before three High Court Judges, the Lord Chief Justice himself presiding. A petty sessional court deals summarily with minor offences. Cases of a more serious nature are usually investigated by a petty sessional court before being tried at the sessions or the assizes. To every session, assize, and to every sitting of the Central Criminal Court, the sheriff cites twelve of the chief inhabitants of the district, of whom not less than 12 and not more than 23 are sworn and constitute a grand jury, which examines the bill of indictment against the accused person, hears the evidence of witnesses for the prosecution, and if it thinks a prima facie case for trial is made out, endorses the bill 'a true bill.' All criminal trials, except those which come before a court of summary jurisdiction, take place before a judge and a petty jury of twelve persons. Appeal is allowed in criminal cases: (i.) on a point of law; (ii.) on a question of fact, or other sufficient ground if the judge certifies the case as fit for appeal, or the Court of Criminal Appeal grants leave to appeal; and (iii.) against the sentence (if not fixed by law) with the leave of the Appeal Court. On a conviction the judge can, if he thinks fit, reserve a question of law (but not of fact) for the Court of Criminal Appeal, which can reverse, amend, or affirm the judgment. The other method of securing the revision of a sentence is by the Royal prerogative, exercised on the advice of the Home Secretary, by which a sentence can be modified or annulled. No man can be tried again for the same crime after a petty jury has found him 'not guilty.' Nominally all judges are appointed by the King, but in practice the Lord Chancellor (who is a minister, ex-officio president of the House of Lords, and goes out with the ministry), the Lord Chief Justice, the Lords of Appeal, who sit in the House of Lords and on the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, and the Lords Justices of Appeal who sit in the Court of Appeal, are appointed on the recommendation of the Prime Minister, and all the other judges on the recommendation of the Lord Chancellor.

The courts having jurisdiction in civil cases are the County Courts, created in 1846, Assizes, and the High Court. Above the High Court is the Court of Appeal, and above that the House of Lords.

The authorised strength of the police force in England and Wales on September 29, 1919, was 56,166.

Scotland.

The High Court of Justiciary is the supreme criminal court in Scotland. It consists of all the judges of the Court of Session, and sits more or less frequently, as the number of cases before it may require, in Edinburgh or in circuit towns. One judge can, and usually does, try cases, but two or more preside in cases of difficulty or importance. It is the only competent court for cases of treason, murder, robbery, rape, fire-raising, deforcement of messengers, and generally in all cases in which a higher punishment than imprisonment by statute directed to be inflicted; and it has moreover an inherent jurisdiction to punish all criminal acts, both those already established by common or statute, and such as have never previously come before the courts and are not within any statute.

The sheriff of each county is the proper criminal judge in all crimes occurring within the county which infer only an arbitrary punishment, and if the case is tried with a jury the High Court has no power of review on the merits. Even in cases indicted to the High Court the accused is, under the Criminal Procedure (Scotland) Act of 1887, regularly asked to plead in the sheriff court, and minor objections to the indictment can be wholly or in part disposed of there. Borough magistrates and justices of the peace have jurisdiction in petty cases occurring within the burgh or county, and in a number of minor offences under various statutes.

The Court of Session exercises the highest civil jurisdiction in Scotland, with the House of Lords as a Court of Appeal.

The police force in Scotland at the end of 1919 had an authorised strength of 6,124.

Ireland.

In Ireland persons charged with crime are as a rule brought before a court of petty sessions. In most cases one magistrate is sufficient to form a court to try a case to be decided at petty sessions: in some instances two are requisite. Offences are divided into two classes, those in which justices have a 'summary jurisdiction,' in which cases they hear and determine the complaint, the Criminal Justice Administration Act, 1914, providing for an appeal in practically every case. The second class is 'indictable offences.' In these cases the justice merely takes the depositions and returns the case for trial to the next court having jurisdiction to try it—quarter sessions or assize court as the case may be. In the event of the prosecution failing to make out a case against the accused, the magistrates refuse information. The Attorney-General may send up a bill at assizes, even without the preliminary magisterial investigation, or in a case in which a magistrate has wrongly refused informations. There is this difference, however, between quarter sessions in Ireland and in England: in England they are presided over by an unpaid chairman, who need not be a lawyer and who is elected by his fellow justices of the peace for the county; while in Ireland they are presided over by a paid official, who must be a practising barrister of ten years' standing, appointed by the Crown, and who is also judge of the county court which corresponds to the English county court). The criminal jurisdiction of a county court judge is very extensive, and the Recorder of Dublin has practically the same criminal jurisdiction as a judge of the High Court. Quarter sessions are presided over by one of the common law judges of the High Court of Justice. In the quarter sessions, recorder's court, and assizes the trial is by jury in all cases save appeals from petty sessions. In addition to the ordinary unpaid justices there are paid resident magistrates. The Criminal Law and Procedure Act contains special provisions for dealing with crime in certain cases. Nearly all the clauses of the Criminal Law and Procedure Act, however, require a proclamation of the Lord-Lieutenant and Council before they come into force. In the city of Dublin, the divisional magistrates for the police district of Dublin metropolis deal with all summary cases arising within their jurisdiction, and their jurisdiction is somewhat more extensive than that of the ordinary county justices.

Under the Government of Ireland Act, 1920, there is to be a Supreme Court of Judicature, consisting of two divisions, the High Court of Justice and the Court of Appeal, in Southern Ireland, and a similar court in Northern Ireland, and also a High Court of Appeal for the whole of Ireland. An appeal may lie from the latter Court to the House of Lords.

The number of police on March 31, 1919, was 10,754.

National Insurance.

Under the National Insurance Acts, 1911 to 1920, provision is made for compulsory insurance against loss of health, for the prevention and cure of sickness, and for compulsory insurance against unemployment.

(i) National Health Insurance.—This is administered by the Ministry of Health in England and Wales and corresponding Departments in Scotland and Ireland; by other specially constituted authorities; and by approved friendly societies, trade unions, &c. The persons who are compulsorily insured, known as employed contributors, comprise, with certain exceptions, all males and females aged 16 and under 70, whether British subjects or not, employed under contract of service express or implied, whether paid by time or piece. Among persons excluded are those employed otherwise than in manual labour at a rate of remuneration exceeding 250*l.* per year. Insured persons who are not members of an approved Society must contribute to a Post Office Fund and are known as deposit contributors; their benefits are limited. Special provisions exist for married women, the army, navy, and air force, mercantile marine, and certain other classes. Certain persons not compulsorily insured may become voluntary contributors. The funds are provided by the employer (5*d.* per week per employed person), the worker (5*d.* per week by males and 4*d.* by females), and the State. Special rates are applicable in cases of voluntary insurers, and low wage-earners, and the rates in Ireland are 1*d.* lower for contributors and ½*d.* lower for employers than in Great Britain. Contributions cease at the age of 70 when the Old Age Pension Acts (q.v.) come into play. The benefits include medical treatment, sanatorium treatment, payments during sickness (ordinary rate 15*s.* per week for men, and 12*s.* for women), and disablement (7*s.* 6*d.* per week), and (in the case of women) a payment of 40*s.* on confinement. Other benefits are also possible if funds permit.

The number of insured persons under the Health Insurance Scheme in 1919 was about 14½ millions. The total income in 1918-19 was about 30½ million £ (including 8½ million £ contributed by the State), and the total expenditure 20½ million £.

(ii) Unemployment Insurance.—This is administered by the Board of Trade through the Employment Exchanges, Trade Unions, and Friendly Societies. Under the Unemployment Insurance Acts, 1900 and 1921, substantially all persons covered by the Health Insurance Scheme are compulsorily insured against unemployment, except out-workers and persons employed in agriculture and private domestic service. Employees of local authorities, railways, and certain other public utility undertakings, and persons with rights under statutory superannuation schemes, are also exempted where the Minister of Labour certifies that they are employed under conditions which make the National Insurance unnecessary. The contributions from July 3, 1921, are: Men of 18 and over, 6*d.* per week from employer and 5*d.* from employee; women of 18 and over, 5*d.* from employer and 4*d.* from employee; boys between 14 and 18, 3*d.* from employer and 2½*d.* from employee; girls between 16 and 18, 2½*d.* from employer and 2*d.* from employee. The State contributes, in addition, one-fourth of the aggregate amount of the contributions paid by employers and employees. The benefit consists of a weekly payment of 20*s.* for men, 16*s.* for women, and half these amounts to contributors under 18, during a maximum period of 16 weeks in eight months, and after July 2, 1922, a maximum period of 26 weeks per year, subject to certain conditions. At the age of 60 insured contributors may, under certain conditions, obtain a refund of their own contributions, less any benefits paid, together with interest. Industries may, with the approval of the Minister of Labour, contract out of this scheme by setting up suitable schemes of their own.

The number of persons covered by the national or special scheme is estimated to be about 12,000,000 (8½ millions men and 3½ millions women). Total income, 1918-19, 4·8 million £ (including 1·1 million £ from State funds), and expenditure 600,000*l.*

Old Age Pensions.

Under the Old Age Pensions Acts, 1908 to 1919, every person over 70 years of age who has been a British subject for at least 10 years up to the date of the receipt of pension; who, if a natural-born British subject, for twelve out of the twenty years, and if not a natural-born British subject, for twenty years up to the date of receiving a pension has resided in the United Kingdom (residence abroad is allowed to count in certain circumstances); and whose yearly means do not exceed 49*l.* 17*s.* 6*d.*, is entitled to a pension: provided he is not in receipt of indoor poor relief (medical and surgical relief for three months does not disqualify), or is not a lunatic in an asylum. The minimum age for blind persons has been reduced to 50 years. An existing pensioner may in certain circumstances be disqualified for receiving further pensions. For every borough and urban district with a census population of at least 20,000,<sup>1</sup> and for every county (excluding borough and district areas) a local pension committee (who may appoint sub-committees) is appointed by the borough district, or county council. Pension officers (to investigate and report to the committees) are appointed by the Treasury. The central pension authority is the Local Government Board. The weekly amount of the pension is 10s. if the yearly means of the pensioner do not exceed 26l. 5s. If the yearly means exceed 26l. 5s., the weekly pension decreases by 2s. for every 5l. 5s. by which this limit is exceeded, up to 47l. 5s., when the rate becomes 1s. per week. If the yearly means exceed 49l. 17s. 6d. no pension is payable. On March 25, 1919, there were 920,198 pensions payable in the United Kingdom. The estimated cost of old age pensions in 1920-21 is 25,969,000l.

Pauperism.

There is a Poor Law, under a variety of statutes, applicable to the three Kingdoms, by which paupers, under certain conditions, are to be relieved in their own houses or lodged in workhouses or poor-houses built for the purpose. The law is administered by the Local Government Board, through Boards of Guardians elected for the purpose. England and Wales, including the Metropolis and the municipal boroughs, are divided into 653 poor law unions, for each of which there is elected a Board of Guardians. In urban districts and in the Metropolis guardians are separately elected, but in rural districts the rural district councillors act as guardians for the parishes they represent on the district council. Guardians are elected on the same popular franchise as district councillors. Women are eligible. In every civil parish overseers are appointed whose duty it is to make and collect the poor rate.

Amount expended in poor-relief for year ended March 25 for England and Ireland, and May 15 for Scotland. For Scotland, the amount includes expenditure on buildings and loans repaid and interest :—

An Excess Profits Tax of 50 per cent. upon the excess of profits over pre-war standards was introduced in 1915, and produced 187,846*l.* in 1915-16. The rate was later increased to 60 per cent., producing 141,614,982*l.* in 1916-17 (including a special munitions levy from 'controlled' establishments), and then to 80 per cent., producing 223,116,090*l.* in 1917-18, 283,976,861*l.* in 1918-19, and 289,208,046*l.* in 1919-20. The budget of 1919 reduced the rate to 40 per cent, and that of 1920 raised it to 60 per cent. The yield in 1920-21 was 219,181,000*l.*, and the estimate for 1921-22 is 120,000,000*l.*

The gross amount of income brought under the review of the Inland Revenue Department in the year ended April 5, 1918, in the United Kingdom, was 1,967,066,000*l.*; in 1913-14 it was 1,167,184,000*l.*; in 1904-5 it was 912,130,000*l.* In 1918-19 it was estimated at 2 290 millions. The income on which tax was actually received in 1917-18, after allowing for exemptions and abatements, was 1,083,982,282*l.*

Prior to April 6, 1915, incomes of and below 160*l.* per year were exempt from income tax. From April, 1915, to April, 1920, the limit was 130*l.* per year. In the case of taxable incomes, abatements were made, and also allowances for children, wife, and insurance premiums, on the lower range of incomes. The rates of tax per £ of taxable income varied as follows :

	Earned Income.				Unearned Income.
	s.	d.	s.	d.	s.	d.	s.	d.
1913-14	0	0	to	1	2	1	2
1914-15	1	0	"	1	8	1	4	to 1 8
1915-16	1	0½	"	3	0	2	4½	" 3 0
1916-17	2	8	"	5	0	3	0	" 5 0
1917-18	2	8	"	5	0	3	0	" 5 0
1918-19 and 1919-20	2	3	"	6	0	3	0	" 6 0

From April, 1920, exemption is allowed to bachelors with earned incomes below 150*l.* (or unearned below 135*l.*), and to married persons with earned incomes below 250*l.* (or unearned below 225*l.*) The abatements and allowances (for children, dependent relatives, life assurance premiums, &c.), on higher incomes have been revised. The "standard" rate of tax is 6*s.*, but on the first 225*l.* of a person's "taxable" income the rate is 3*s.*

The gross income and income on which tax was received in 1917-18 were distributed as follows :—

	Gross income £	Income taxed £
Profits from the ownership of Lands . . . . .	52,060,000	172,583,580
"                    Houses . . . . .	235,051,205

The amount of super-tax received was 2,891,345*l.* in 1910-11; 3,018,888*l.* in 1911-12; 3,599,706*l.* in 1912-13; 3,339,008*l.* in 1913-14; 10,121,023*l.* in 1914-15; 16,787,654*l.* in 1915-16; 19,140,411*l.* in 1916-17; 23,278,704*l.* in 1917-18; 35,560,083*l.* in 1918-19; 42,405,000*l.* in 1919-20. The estimated aggregate income of the super-tax payers in 1918-19 was 340,000,000*l.*, and the estimated number of persons chargeable, 48,000. Super-tax is payable by persons with incomes exceeding 2,000*l.* per year (prior to 1918-19 3,000*l.* per year, and in 1918-19 and 1919-20, 2,500*l.* per year).

In accordance with various Acts passed between 1888 and 1911, there are paid out of the Consolidated Fund to the Local Taxation Accounts of England, Scotland, and Ireland sums equivalent to the proceeds (in some cases of the year 1908-9, and in other cases of the current year) of certain excise licence duties, part of the beer and spirit duties, and part of the probate and estate duties. Certain other grants are also payable.

The payments actually made to the Local Taxation Accounts in 1919-20 are given as follows :—

III. NATIONAL DEBT.

Borrowing by the State on the security of taxes was practised in Norman times, but the National Debt really dates from the time of William III. The acknowledged debt in 1689 was about 664,000*l.*, on which the annual charge for interest and management was only 40,000*l.* At various subsequent dates the amounts were as follows (including the Irish debt throughout) :—

Year	Debt <sup>1</sup> Million £	Annual charge, includ- ing annuities Million £	Annuities only (included in pre- vious column) Million £

The estimated expenditure of the London County Council (exclusive of revenue producing undertakings) for the year ending March 31, 1921, amounted to 20,040,29*l.* Of this amount 11,725,508*l.* was to be raised by rates. The net debt of the Council 31 March, 1919 was 45,807,000*l.*

At the end of the financial year 1915–16, the outstanding local debt of England and Wales amounted to 564,506,000*l.*; that of Scotland to 66,719,000*l.*; of Ireland 26,289,000*l.*; total, 657,514,000*l.* (including 49,948,000*l.* outstanding in respect of loans taken over or raised by the Metropolitan Water Board, and 27,110,000*l.* outstanding in respect of loans accounted for by the Port of London Authority). The local debt of England and Wales outstanding in March 1918 was 550,520,000*l.*

Defence.

During the later years of the Great War important questions of naval and military policy were determined by the War Cabinet, which developed from an amalgamation of the functions of the Cabinet with those of the Committee of Imperial Defence. In 1920 the Committee of Imperial Defence was revived, and again became responsible, as it was before the war, for the co-ordination of naval, military, and air policy. Of this Committee the Prime Minister is ex-officio President, and he has power to call for the attendance at its meetings of any naval or military officers, or of other persons, with administrative experience, whether they are in official positions or not. The usual members are the Secretaries of State for Foreign Affairs, for War and Air, the Colonies, India, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, the First Lord of the Admiralty, the First Sea Lord, the Chief of the Imperial General Staff, the Chief of the Air Staff, the Directors of the Intelligence Departments of the War Office and the Admiralty. It is probable that in view of the part played by the Dominions in the Great War, representatives of the Dominions will be members of the Committee, and will attend all meetings at which Imperial Defence in its wider aspect is discussed.

I. ARMY.

During 1920 great progress was made in the transition of the army from a war to peace basis, but the extended commitments of the British Army arising out of the war prevented the completion of the reduction of establishments to the scale which prevailed in 1914. Garrisons have to be maintained on the Rhine, in Palestine, in Mesopotamia, and in Constantinople, while a number of war-time sick and wounded, of men employed on salvage work in the various theatres of war, and in the re-interment of the dead in permanent cemeteries, swelled the establishments and increased the estimates. Actually the British Exchequer paid for approximately 550,000 men during 1920-21, as compared with 186,400 in 1914-15. 180,000 of these men consisted of native, Indian, and Colonial troops, as compared with 8,700 in 1914-15, the great majority of these coming from the Indian Army, and serving outside the confines of India. During 1920 a series of Arab risings on a considerable scale in Mesopotamia began in the month of June and continued throughout the year. This necessitated a considerable reinforcement of the garrison of Mesopotamia, chiefly by Indian troops, and at the end of 1920 there were more than 100,000 troops in that country, of whom 18,000 were British.

The land forces of the United Kingdom consist of the Regular Army and of the Territorial Army. The British troops of the Regular Army serve both at home and overseas and are commonly referred to as the British Army in contradistinction to the Indian Army or Native Army, and to the Local Forces in certain British Colonies and Dependencies, the personnel of which is native with a proportion of British officers.

The Regular Army, whether at home or abroad, except India, is paid for by the Imperial Exchequer (although certain Dominions pay contributions towards its upkeep); India pays a contribution towards the cost of troops at home owing to these serving as a depôt for the regular troops in India. The Territorial Army serves only at home in peace time, but as the destruction of the German fleet and the supreme position of our Navy in Home Waters has practically eliminated all risk of invasion, members of the Territorial Army are now asked to accept liability for service overseas in time of war, subject to the consent of Parliament. The rank and file for both Regular Army and Territorial Army are obtained by voluntary enlistment.

After the Armistice of November 11, 1918, was concluded with Germany the War Office issued a scheme of extended service for soldiers then serving, by which men were invited to re-engage for 2, 3, or 4 years. As soon as sufficient men had been obtained by this means to reconstitute a certain number of regular formations for service overseas, the normal pre-war terms of service were reintroduced. By these terms service is for 12 years, with permission to extend to 21 years in certain circumstances. Of the original 12 years, from 3 to 9 are spent 'with the colours,' i.e., on permanent service, and the remainder of the time in the Army Reserve; the majority of the men serve for 7 years with the colours and 5 years in the Army Reserve, which is the rule for infantry other than the Foot Guards. Men enlist between 18 and 25 years of age.

The Peace establishment of the various formations has not yet been fixed, but the normal rule is that formations serving at home are on a low establishment, while the establishment abroad is higher, and in India peace and war establishments are practically identical. On mobilisation for war the ranks are brought up to war establishment, after eliminating recruits and young soldiers by calling up men from the Reserve.

For purposes of training and command the fighting troops are for the most part organised in divisions, which consist of 3 infantry brigades, divisional artillery and engineers, together with the necessary auxiliary services. The cavalry is organised in brigades. The infantry brigades are composed of 4 battalions, the cavalry brigades of 3 regiments. The organisation of the Territorial Army is analogous to that of the Regular Army, and it consists of 14 divisions, composed of infantry, artillery, engineers, and auxiliary services, and of the mounted brigades, chiefly composed of yeomanry.

For purposes of command the United Kingdom is divided up into seven 'commands' and the London District. The commands are (1) Aldershot of very limited area, (2) Eastern, including the eastern and southern counties, (3) Irish, (4) Northern, including the northern midlands and north-eastern counties, (5) Scottish, (6) Southern, including the southern midlands and south-western counties, (7) Western, including Wales, Lancashire and north-western counties. These commands (except the Aldershot command) are divided up into Territorial Recruiting districts for the Regular Army. The Eastern, Northern, Scottish, Southern, and Western commands and the London District each include from 1 to 3 Territorial mounted brigades, and 2 or 3 Territorial divisions. There are two Regular divisions each in the Aldershot and the Irish command, one Regular division in the Eastern and one in the Southern command. At the head of each command is a general officer (styled the General-Officer Commanding-in-Chief). He is assisted by a general-officer of lower rank who is responsible for questions of administration apart from training and defence questions.

The land forces are administered by an Army Council which is composed of the Secretary of State for War, who is its President; the heads of the seven departments into which the War Office is primarily divided, namely, the Chief of the Imperial General Staff, who is responsible for drawing up plans of attack and defence, for military training, for intelligence work, and for education; the Deputy Chief of the Imperial General Staff who is the first assistant of the Chief and represents him in his absence on the Army Council; the Adjutant-General, who is responsible for recruiting, interior economy, discipline, and for the medical service; the Quartermaster-General, who is responsible for equipment, supply, transport, and remounts ; the Master-General of the Ordnance, who is responsible for armament and works ; the Surveyor-General of Supply who is responsible for contracts and the provision of stores in bulk ; the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, who is the Vice-President of the Council and is responsible for the Territorial Army ; the Finance Member, who is responsible for finance ; and the two permanent Secretaries of the War Office. The Territorial Army is to a large extent administered by County Associations over which the War Office merely maintains a general control as regards expenditure.

The principal military educational establishments are the Royal Military Academy, educating youths to be officers in the artillery and the engineers, the Royal Military College whence officers are obtained for cavalry and infantry, and the Staff College, which trains officers for the staff. The Officers' Training Corps in two divisions representing respectively the universities and public schools, is intended to provide officers for the Territorial Army.

The gross estimated expenditure for the army for the year 1921-22 amounts (March, 1921) to 118,915,000*l.*, and appropriations in aid amount to 12,600,000*l.*, leaving a net expenditure of 106,315,000*l.* Owing to the increased pay, and to the increase in the price of food, clothing and equipment, the cost of the individual Regular soldier is approximately three times what it was in 1914.

The total personnel serving with the forces on March 1, 1921, and charged to British votes was about 341,000, of whom 201,000 were British troops, 55,600 were men temporarily borne on the strength as consequence of the war, and 84,200 were Indian and Colonial troops. The garrison of the Rhine and of certain plebiscitary areas absorbed 15,000 men, of Constantinople, 9,300 ; Palestine, 18,000 ; Mesopotamia, 77,000. The strength of the home garrison was 140,500. The strength of the Territorial Army for the same date was 100,000 (a peace total of about 237,000 is being aimed at). This is not included in the previous figures.

II. NAVY.

The Navy has passed, and is still passing, through a very critical period. It has been reduced to a peace footing, and brought to a minimum of strength. The Navy has been deprived of a number of very powerful ships, and of hundreds of other ships. In November, 1920, it was announced that 1,231 vessels had been sold, realizing 10,024,000*l.*, and 638 scrapped, producing 3,464,000*l.* The pre-Dreadnoughts have gone from the list, except the Commonwealth (retained for training purposes), as also the Dreadnought herself, and the Indomitable and Inflexible. All the 12-inch gun ships are to be removed from the list. The personnel has been drastically cut down. The principal force in commission is the Atlantic Fleet. The Home Fleet has been abolished. There is a small Battle Squadron in the Mediterranean. Vessels on distant stations have been reduced.

No final or permanent policy has yet been adopted, but the views of the Admiralty were set forth in a very important document in March, 1920 (Cmd. 619). In December, 1920, the whole subject of future naval policy was submitted to the Committee of Imperial Defence. The present position is that the Fleet is to be maintained at a strength equal to that of any other Power.

The Navy estimates for 1920-21 amounted to 84,872,300*l.* net, plus supplementary estimate for 6,500,000*l.* in December, 1920, and for 1921-22 they are 82,479,000*l.* net. (The pre-war expenditure (1913-14) was 48,809,000*l.*) Four great ships are to be laid down, two soon and two later. There is to be no competitive shipbuilding.

The British Navy is a permanent establishment, governed by statutes and orders. Its administration was formerly in the hands of a Lord High Admiral, but by the Act 2 Will. and Mary, c. 2, this office was vested in Commission. With the exception of periods in which the office has been revived—in the person of the Earl of Pembroke in the reign of William III of Prince George of Denmark (1702-8), and of the Duke of Clarence (May 1827-August, 1828)—it has continued to be held in commission by the Board of Admiralty. The First Lord of the Admiralty, a Cabinet Minister, is responsible for the Navy.

The duties of the Admiralty are now grouped under the two headings of Operations and Maintenance. The First Sea Lord and Chief of the Naval Staff, the Deputy Chief of the Naval Staff, and the Assistant Chief of the Naval Staff have charge and direction of the Operations Division. This Division is concerned with Naval policy and the general direction of operations, war operations in Home waters and elsewhere, strategy, tactics, the development and use of material, including types of vessels and weapons, and with trade protection and anti-submarine considerations. The officers in charge and direction of the Maintenance Division are the Second Sea Lord and Chief of the Personnel, the Third Sea Lord and Controller of the Navy, the Fourth Sea Lord and Chief of Supplies and Transport, and the Civil Lord. The Parliamentary Secretary and the Permanent Secretary are concerned with Finance and Admiralty business.

The number of officers, seamen and marines borne on January 1914, and the number provided for in the estimates for 1921-22 were :—

	Borne Jan. 1, 1914	Estimates 1921-22
Sea Service—
Officers and men . . . . .	114,236	127,500
Coast Guard . . . . .	3,015
Marines . . . . .	18,042
Other Services (training, &amp;c.)—
Pensioners . . . . .
Recruiting Officers and ratings . . . . .	7,662	127,500
Boys (training) . . . . .
Naval Cadets . . . . .	1,916
Various . . . . .
Total of all ranks . . . . .	144,871

The strength of the Navy at the date of the Armistice, November 11, 1918, was 415,000 (36,000 officers and 379,000 men), including the Mercantile Reserve but excluding the Royal Naval Division. The demobilization of officers and men proceeded rapidly. The total numbers serving (including the Mercantile Marine Reserves but not those who had been dispersed demobilization leave) were in the middle of November, 1919: officers, 15,000; men, 147,000 ; total, 162,000.

SUMMARY OF THE BRITISH FLEET.

N.B.—The pre-Dreadnought battleships have been removed from the lists, as well as three of the early Dreadnoughts. All the other classes have been reduced. The class of armoured cruisers is now extinct.

Class.	Completed by end of
	1919	1920	1921
Dreadnoughts . . . . .	42	42	39
Pre-Dreadnought battleships . . . .	21	8	—
Armoured Cruisers . . . . .	34	—	—
Light Cruisers . . . . .	89	90	90
Destroyers . . . . . about	340	1	190
First Class Torpedo boats . . . . about	96		?
Submarines . . . . . about	147		98

Owing to the sweeping reductions which were in progress in these classes of vessels, it was impossible to give any useful figures. In the 1921 column 24 powerful flotilla leaders are included in the total of 190 destroyers.

There were 37 monitors in 1919, but all have been removed from the fleet as fighting units, and only four have been retained for training and depot purposes. Two new classes of river gunboats have been added (640 and 98 tons), 12 of each class.

In the following tables the ships are grouped in classes according to type. The dates of the Naval Estimates under which they were sanctioned are given.

<sup>1</sup>Seaplane carriers. The Eagle was built as the Almirante Cochrane, battleship, but was taken over in an early stage by the British Navy and completed for her present use.

There are also gunboats, store-ships, repair ships, mine-sweepers, fleet sweeping sloops and other auxiliaries.

24 Flotilla leaders, 1,600-1,800 tons, 34-36·5 knots.

The latest destroyers of which any official description was given before the war were of the L class, 1913-14 (965 tons). The S class, 850-1,090 tons; V class, 1,275-1,300 tons; W class, 1,275-1,350 tons. Total number, 166.

The submarines are of many successive classes. The following are the existing numbers: E 18; G 6; H 23; K 12; L 26; M 3; R 10; total, 98.

Dominion Navies.—Lord Jellicoe made a tour of the Dominions with the object of arriving at an understanding with the Governments on the naval defence of the Empire. His report presented to the Government of Australia emphasized the desirability of the Commonwealth becoming self-contained in regard to shipbuilding and the manufacture of guns, mountings, explosives, and aircraft. He considered that the interests of the Empire were likely to demand within the next five years a Far Eastern Fleet comprising vessels of the Royal Navy, the East Indian Squadron, and the Australian, Canadian, and New Zealand Navies. This Fleet would consist of at least 8 modern battleships, 8 battle-cruisers, 10 light cruisers, 40 destroyers, and 36 submarines. The total cost for maintenance was estimated at 19,750,000*l.* Australia's share would be 4,000,000*l.* rising to 6,000,000*l.* The cost to New Zealand would rise from 375,000*l.* in 1920 to 1,000,000*l.* in five years. (The organisation of the intended fleet is still [end of 1920] unsettled, and these figures are approximations).

III. THE ROYAL AIR FORCE.

In May, 1912, the Royal Flying Corps first came into existence. It was then divided into two wings, the Royal Naval Air Service and the Royal Flying Corps, administered by the Admiralty and War Office respectively, while a joint Air Committee was formed, consisting of representatives of both services, to secure co-operation. The powers of this body were limited, and it failed to secure its object. A second Committee, formed in February, 1916, was equally unsuccessful. It was followed by an Air Board in May, 1916, and by a second Air Board in January, 1917. Both of these had inadequate powers. On January 2, 1918, an Air Ministry was formed, and the control of the Royal Air Force was vested in an Air Council analogous to the Army Council. The Air Minister was given the status of a Secretary of State and became President of the Council. In April, 1918, the naval and military wings were amalgamated, under the Ministry of the Air, as the Royal Air Force. From April, 1919, to April, 1921, the Secretaryship of State was held by a Minister who also filled another office, and the direct charge of the Air Ministry was placed in the hands of an Under-Secretary of State, who became Vice-President of the Air Council. In April, 1921, a separate Secretary of State for Air was appointed.

The Air Council controls and issues regulations for civil aviation, which is in charge of a separate department of the Air Ministry ; that department is engaged in the organisation of air routes with the necessary landing grounds throughout the Empire. In March, 1921, the establishment of the Royal Air Force was 30,880, and the estimated gross expenditure for 1921-22 was 19,033,400*l.*, and the net expenditure 18,411,000*l.*

For the quantities of cereals and live stock imported, see under Commerce.

The live stock in Ireland in 1920 numbered: Horses, 624,300; mules and jennets, 27,100; asses, 226,600; cattle, 5,023,000; sheep, 3,586,000; pigs, 982,000; goats, 245,000; poultry (1918), 24,424,000.

The number of holdings in Great Britain (from 1 acre upwards) is given as follows for 1920 :—

The Small Holdings and Allotments Act, 1908, makes the County Councils and the Councils of County Boroughs responsible for the provision of small holdings (each covering from one to 50 acres, or even more), and allotments (each up to five acres in area). Up to the end of 1914 the total quantity of land acquired for small holdings by the various local authorities in England and Wales was 198,104 acres, let to 13,327 individual tenants and 5 associations; and the land acquired for allotments was 33,522 acres, let to 130,526 individual tenants and 52 associations. On the 1st May, 1918, there were estimated to be about 1,400,000 allotments in England and Wales. Before the war there were about 500,000.

The above figures are not comparable with those published for years prior to 1910. In many cases farms in Ireland extend into two or more townlands, and in former years the portion of a farm in each townland was enumerated as a separate holding. The total number of holdings published was therefore somewhat too large. A change was made in the method of enumeration in 1910, and the present figures are believed to be a very close approximation for the year 1918.

Of the holdings in 1918, 372,815 were owned and 199,170 rented. The 571,985 holdings in 1918 were in the hands of 561,807 separate occupiers.

The Irish Land Acts are of two classes—The Fair Rent Acts, and the Land Purchase Acts. The Fair Rent Acts commenced with Mr. Gladstone's Land Law (Ireland) Act, 1881, which gave the Irish Tenant the '3 Fs'—Fair Rent, Free Sale and Fixity of Tenure. Under this Act, the great body of agricultural tenants had Fair Rents judicially determined. The rent is fixed by the Land Commission for terms of 15 years, and, on the expiration of each term, a new rent may be fixed for another term. Up to March 31, 1920, the number of Fair Rents fixed under the Irish Land Acts for a First Statutory Term was 382,975, with an average reduction of 20·7 per cent. on previous rents; for a Second Statutory Term, 144,094, with an average reduction of 19·3 per cent. on first term rents; and for a Third Statutory Term, 6,032, with an average reduction of 9·1 per cent. on second term rents.

The Land Purchase Acts commenced with the 'Bright Clauses' of the Act of 1870, but the system was greatly extended by the 'Ashbourne Act' of 1885, under which 9,992,536*l.* cash was advanced for Land Purchase. A new system was adopted under Mr. Balfour's Act of 1891, which created a special Land Stock for Land Purchase purposes. Under the Irish Land Act of 1903 cash advances are made to enable tenants to purchase their holding under the supervision of three Estates Commissioners, the money for advance being raised by the issue of Land Stock bearing interest at 2½ per cent. The State is secured by a Guarantee Fund which consists of the various Funds voted by Parliament for Irish Local purposes. The Land Stock could not be issued except at a large discount, and the Land Act of 1909 provided that for future purchasers the money may be raised by the issue of a 3 per cent. stock and in making advances the Treasury may give the vendor such stock instead of paying cash. Under this Act the Congested Districts Board was reconstituted, the area of its work extended and its income increased. Compulsory powers of purchase were also given to the Estates Commissioners and the Congested Districts Board.

The total amount of the purchase money for which advances have been made under the Irish Land Purchase Acts, 1870 to 1909, up to March 31, 1920, was 108,795,258*l.*, of which 106,933,839*l.* was advanced, and 1,861,419*l.* was lodged in cash by purchasers. In addition, 4,609,131*l.* was advanced to that date by the Land Commission to Rural District Councils, for the erection of labourers' cottages, under the Labourer (Ireland) Acts.

In England and Wales, the Board of Agriculture make grants for, and to some extent, supervise vocational education and scientific research in agriculture. In 1916-17 these grants totalled 76,177*l.* (against 98,646*l.* in 1915-16), largely from the Development Fund (see below). The Board of Agriculture for Scotland dispenses certain grants for the development and improvement of agriculture, including agricultural education and research in that country. In Ireland the Department of Agriculture and Technical Instruction provides itinerant lecturers who give instruction in agriculture, horticulture, bee-keeping, butter-making, poultry-keeping, &c. There are 3 agricultural stations where farm apprenticeships are provided, and numerous agricultural schools and colleges. There are also winter agricultural classes and schools of rural domestic economy.

Under the Development and Road Improvement Funds Acts, 1909 and 1910, there are eight "Development Commissioners," appointed to advise the Treasury in the administration of a national fund for the development of agriculture, fisheries, forestry, and analogous resources of the United Kingdom. The total sum guaranteed to the fund was 2,900,000*l.*; interest on investments, and other receipts, up to 31 March, 1920, made the total available funds, 3,541,000*l.* In 1920-21 a further 1,000,000*l.* was voted to the Fund. The grants and loans recommended to the Treasury by the Commissioners down to 31 March, 1918 (which, however, have not all been sanctioned or expended), amounted to 2,794,000*l.*, including 1,780,000*l.* for agriculture and rural industries; 277,000*l.* for forestry; 394,000*l.* for harbours; 142,000*l.* for fisheries; 110,000*l.* for inland navigation; 80,000*l.* for rural transport.

Forestry.—The woodland area of Great Britain in 1908 was 2,781,963 acres (England, 1,720,330 ; Wales, 186,723 ; and Scotland, 874,910). Included in these figures are 127,509 acres of plantations, i.e., land planted within the preceding 10 years (England, 72,008 ; Wales, 11,355 ; and Scotland, 44,146). In Ireland in 1918, 289,944 acres were under woods and plantations.

The metals obtainable from the ores produced in 1919 were :—Copper, 14 tons, value 14,176*l.* ; iron, 3,808,095 tons, 51,511,064*l.* ; lead, 10,277 tons 289,769*l.* ; silver, 68,414 oz., 16,266*l.* ; tin, 3,272 tons, 842,485*l.* ; zinc, 2,43 tons, 102,951*l.* ; total value, 52,776,711*l.*

The total number of persons ordinarily employed at all mines under the Coal and Metalliferous Mines Regulation Acts during 1919 was 1,212,974. The number of mines at work was 3,438. 958,133 persons (males) worked underground, and 245,194 males and 9,647 females above ground. The number employed at quarries under the Quarries Act was 57,076 (excluding persons occasionally employed), of whom 36,879 (including 132 females) worked inside the quarries, and 20,197 (including 309 females) outside. The number of quarries at work was 5,135.

Professor H. S. Jevons has estimated the resources of British coal in 1915, within 4,000 feet of the surface, at 197,000 million tons. Coal raised in the United Kingdom, and coal, coke, and patent fuel exported (the figures in the following tables, for the war period, exclude coal exported from Government stores, etc.) :—

In the year 1919 the coal available for home consumption, after deducting the amount used in operating the coal mines, is estimated to have been 162,000,000 tons, the principal uses being :—Railways, for locomotive purposes, 13,500,000 tons; gas works, 17,750,000 tons; electricity and water undertakings, 7,500,000 tons; blast furnaces, 15,750,000 tons; domestic (including coal supplied to miners), 42,500,000 tons; all other purposes, 60,000,000 tons.

IV. TEXTILE INDUSTRY.

(The following information is furnished by Mr. Thomas R. Ellison of Liverpool).

The progress made by each branch of the textile industry since 1829 is shown in the subjoined statement of the weight of raw material used and the value of yarns and goods exported :—

The home production of wool in 1920 is estimated at 108 million lbs. ; and that of flax at 27 million lbs. Exports in 1920 were : piece goods, &c. ; cotton, 4,492 million yards ; woollen, 280 million yards ; linen, 93 million yards. Yarn : cotton, 148 million lbs. ; woollen, 31 million lbs. ; and linen, 7 million lbs.

Commerce.

The principal imports on which customs duties are levied are beer, chicory, cocoa, coffee, dried fruits, matches, motor spirit, spirits, sugar, tea, tobacco, and wine—spirits, sugar, tea, tobacco, and wine yielding the bulk of the entire levies. In 1919 the imports free of duty (exclusive of bullion and specie and diamonds) amounted to 1,381,634,807£., 84·9 per cent., and those subject to duty to 244,521,405£., 15·1 per cent. of the total imports.

<sup>1</sup> From the outbreak of War in August, 1914, until the second half of 1917, certain goods belonging to the British and Allied Governments were excluded from the returns of imports and exports. From July, 1917, merchandise imported and exported in public ownership is included, except exports for the use of H. M. forces on active service. In the 12 months July to December, 1917, such imports (included in the above table) amounted to about 107,000,000£., and British exports to 9,500,000£. In 1918 such imports amounted to about 250,000,000£., British exports to 18,500,000£., and re-exports to about 3,000,000£.

The value of goods imported into the United Kingdom is generally taken to be that at the port and time of entry, including all incidental expenses (cost, insurance, and freight) up to the landing on the quay. For goods consigned for sale, the market value in this country is required and recorded in the returns. This is ascertained from the declaration made by the importers, and is checked by the expert knowledge available in the Customs Department, with the help of current price-lists and market reports. For exports, the value at the port of shipment (including the charges on delivering the goods on board) is taken. Imports are entered as from the country whence the goods were consigned to the United Kingdom, which may, or may not, be the country whence the goods were last shipped. Exports are credited to the country of ultimate destination as declared by the exporters.

Imports by air in 1920 amounted to 677,000*l.*, and exports to 339,000*l.* The trade was mainly in clothes and furs.

The estimated weight of imports is:—54·5 million tons in 1913, and 39 million in 1919; of British exports, 91·4 million tons in 1913, and 46·4 million in 1919; of re-exports, 1,750,000 tons in 1913, and 1,500,000 in 1919.

The total estimated value of the imports and exports of Ireland (including the trade with Great Britain) is given by the Irish Department of Agriculture and Technical Instruction, as follows:—

The figures for years prior to 1918, owing to changes in the method of compilation, are not comparable with the figures for 1913, neither are the financial figures for 1913 comparable with those for 1919, for the following reasons, namely, there are certain small variations in the list of undertakings included in 1919 as compared with 1913 ; 1919 capital figures have been adjusted in respect of duplication ; and the 1919 gross receipts and working expenses include the figures of non-working companies. Since August, 1914 most of the railways have been controlled by the Government, and in consequence it is not possible to give complete statistics for the years 1914-1918 inclusive. Control is to cease in August, 1921.

Tramways.—In 1918-19 there were in the United Kingdom 2,720 miles of tramways and light railways open for public traffic, of which 2,647 miles were operated by electric traction. Of the total mileage 1,705 miles were worked by local authorities, and 1,015 miles by companies. The total number of passengers carried has risen from 3,426,473,192 in 1913-14 to 4,557,640,078 in 1918-19, an increase of 33 per cent.

II.—CANALS AND NAVIGATIONS.

The total length of canals in the United Kingdom in 1905 was 4,673 miles, of which 3,641 miles were in England and Wales, 184 in Scotland and 848 in Ireland.

In January, 1920, there were 1,234 miles of waterway in England, and 304 miles in Ireland, under the Canal Control Committee—a Committee appointed by the Government to manage the principal canals as from March 1, 1917. In addition, the Railway Executive Committee controlled 145 miles, whilst the River Thames above Teddington, and the Caledonian and Crinan Canals in Scotland, totalling 196 miles, were also under Government control. The total tonnages passing on these waterways were:—Under Canal Control Committee, 1913, 27,599,000 tons; 1920, 19,110,000 tons; railway-owned canals, 1913, 5,968,000 tons; 1920, 3,531,000 tons; other waterways, 1913, 490,000 tons; 1920, 386,000 tons; total, 1913, 34,057,000 tons; 1920, 23,027,000 tons.

The Manchester Ship Canal, opened in 1894, is 35½ miles in length and 28 ft. in depth. The bottom width of the canal is not less than 120 ft. except for ¼ mile near Latchford, where it is 90 ft. The maximum width of the locks is 65 ft., with the exception of the entrance lock, which is 80 feet wide. The canal is in direct communication with all the principal railway systems and barge canals of the Kingdom. ### Money, Weights, and Measures.

The sovereign weighs 123·274 grains, or 7·9881 grammes, ·916 (or eleven twelfths) fine, and consequently it contains 113·001 grains or 7·3224 grammes of fine gold. The shilling weighs 87·27 grains or 5·6552 grammes, and down to 1920 was ·925 (or thirty-seven-fortieths) fine, thus containing 80·727 grains or 5·231 grammes of fine silver, but under the Coinage Act, 1920, the fineness has been reduced to ·500 (one half). Bronze coins consist of a mixture of copper, tin, and zinc. The penny weighs 145·83 grains, or 9·45 grammes. The standard of value is gold. Silver is legal tender up to 40 shillings and bronze up to 12*d.*, but farthings only up to 6*d.* Bank of England notes are legal tender in England and Wales, except at the Bank itself (3 and 4 Will. 4, cap. 98). The 1*l.* and 10*s.* Treasury Notes issued since the outbreak of the War are also legal tender. The note circulation at March 31, 1920 was: currency notes, 335,372,000*l.*; Bank of England notes, 105,271,000*l.*; total, 440,643,000*l.* The amount of currency in June, 1914, is estimated at 128,000,000*l.* in circulation, and 75,000,000*l.* in banks; total 203,000,000*l.* In December, 1919, the amount is estimated at 393,000,000*l.* in circulation, and 191,000,000*l.* in banks; total, 584,000,000*l.* The silver circulation at the end of 1920 was estimated at about 60,000,000*l.*

Standard units are: of length the standard yard, of weight the standard pound of 7,000 grains (the pound troy having 5,760 grains), of capacity the standard gallon containing 10 pounds avoirdupois of distilled water at 62° F. the barometer at 30 inches. On these units all other legal weights and measures are based.

ISLE OF MAN.<sup>1</sup>

The Isle of Man is administered in accordance with its own laws by the Court of Tynwald, consisting of the Governor, appointed by the Crown; the Legislative Council, composed chiefly of ecclesiastical and judicial dignitaries appointed by the Crown, numbering 9 members, including the Governor and the House of Keys, a representative assembly of 24 members chosen on a property qualification for 7 years by the 6 'sheadings' or local subdivisions, and the 4 municipalities. Women have the franchise as well as men. Number of voters 1915, 16,138. The island is not bound by Acts of the Imperial Parliament unless specially mentioned in them.

Lieut.-Governor.—Major-General Sir W. Fry, K.C.V.O., C.B.

The principal towns are Douglas (population in 1911, 21,192), Ramsey (4,247), Peel (2,605), Castletown (1,817). Births (1919), 679; deaths, 841. In 1915 there were inspected 46 elementary schools, 41 being board schools. The enrolled pupils numbered 7,213, and the average attendance 6,441. The expenditure of school boards and of primary schools for the year 1914-15, amounted to 30,704*l.* There were, in 1915, 1 secondary school (295 registered pupils), 14 supplementary classes (271 registered pupils), and 15 evening classes (571 registered pupils). The expenditure of higher educational boards in 1914-15 was 9,979*l.* On December 31, 1915, 931 persons received poor-relief (103 indoor and 828 outdoor). In 1915 the police force numbered 90; in the year there were 455 persons convicted.

Revenue is derived mostly from Customs. In 1919-20 the revenue amounted to 293,303*l.*; and expenditure to 120,503*l.*, of which 10,000 was paid to the Imperial Exchequer as contribution from the Customs revenue. Public debt (1920) 127,527*l.*

The principal agricultural produce of the island consists of oat, barley, turnips and potatoes, and grasses. The total area of the island excluding water, is 140,936 acres; the total area of arable land in 1920 was 71,752 acres and of permanent grass, 17,070 acres. The total acreage under corn crops in 1920 was 23,887 acres, including 22,777 under oats, 332 under wheat, and 630 under barley or bere. There were also 7,434 acres under turnips and swedes, 2,500 under potatoes, and 35,811 under clover, sainfoin and grasses under rotation. The number of agricultural holdings in 1920 above 1 acre in size was 1,567. The live stock in 1920 consisted of 6,326 horses; 21,143 cattle; 74,086 sheep; and 3,368 pigs. The chief mineral products in 1919 were clay, 1,650 tons; gravel and sand, 160 tons; igneous rocks, 12,891 tons; lead ore, 129 tons; limestone, 1,989 tons; slate, 437 tons; zinc ore, 787 tons; brine salt, 3,324 tons. Persons employed in mining numbered 273. In 1918 there were belonging to the Isle of Man 255 fishing boats of an aggregate tonnage of 1,839 net tons.

The registered shipping (1918) comprised 28 sailing vessels (1,250 net tons) and 41 steamers (4,856 net tons); total tonnage 6,106 net tons. The tonnage of vessels arrived at ports of the island in 1918 was 220,074 net tons (217,362 tons coastwise), and departed 217,223 net tons, (216,060 tons coastwise). The railways have a length of 46½ miles, and there are 25 miles of electric railways.

CHANNEL ISLANDS.<sup>1</sup>

The Channel Islands are administered according to their own laws and customs. Jersey has a separate legal existence; it is administered by a Lieutenant-Governor appointed by the Crown, and a Bailiff also appointed by the Crown. The Bailiff presides in the States, which consist of 12 Jurats elected by the ratepayers for life, 12 rectors of parishes, 12 constables or mayors of parishes, and 17 deputies; the constables and deputies being elected for 3 years. The Lieutenant-Governor has a veto on legislation. He may address the States but not vote. The 2 Crown officers may speak and vote. The qualification for a vote is the possession of a minimum value of 80*l.* real or 120*l.* personal property. The Royal Court consists of a tribunal of first instance and an appeal court. Guernsey, Alderney, and Sark are under one Lieutenant-Governor, but Guernsey and Alderney have government of their own, and Sark is a dependency of Guernsey and under its jurisdiction. The States for deliberation and legislation consist of a Bailiff, 12 Jurats, 10 rectors, 2 Crown officers, 15 delegates of parishes, and 18 deputies for parishes elected by the ratepayers. The sheriff and jurats are chosen by indirect election. On May 10, 1905, a law was passed for the Island of Guernsey requiring the approval of the Lieut.-Governor and of the Royal Court of the Island previously to the acquisition, or leasing, or occupation of immovable property by aliens or alien companies, registration and liability to local rates, &c., being also provided for. The Channel Islands are not bound by Acts of the Imperial Parliament unless specially named in them.

INDIA, THE DOMINIONS, COLONIES, PROTECTORATES, AND DEPENDENCIES OF THE BRITISH EMPIRE.

In the following pages the various sections of the British Empire outside the United Kingdom are arranged in alphabetical order under the divisions of the world to which they belong:—1. Europe; 2. Asia; 3. Africa; 4. America; 5. Australasia and Oceania.

The term 'Dominion' is used officially as a convenient abbreviation of the complete designation 'self-governing Dominion.' The Dominions are Australia, Canada, Newfoundland, New Zealand, and South Africa. The term 'Colony' is an abbreviation of the official designation 'Colony not possessing responsible Government,' and includes all such Colonies whether or not they possess an elective Legislature, but does not include Protectorates or Protected States. The term 'Crown Colonies' is properly applicable only to those Colonies in which the Crown retains control of legislation.

Under the recent Peace Treaties certain ex-German and ex-Turkish territories have been added to the Empire, to be administered under mandates approved by the League of Nations. These territories include Samoa, New Guinea, Mesopotamia, Palestine, and parts of the former German Colonies in Africa.

The Colonial Office is divided into four branches, the first of which, called the Dominions Department, deals with business connected with the self-governing colonies, and is linked with the secretariat of the Imperial Conference. The Second Department, called the Crown Colonies Department, deals with the administrative and political work of the Crown Colonies and Protectorates. The Third or General Department, which is also a Legal Department, deals with matters common to all Crown Colonies such as currency, banking, posts and telegraphs, education, &c. Connected with this department are standing committees to deal with promotion, railways and finance, concessions, and pensions. The fourth Department was established in March, 1921, to deal with the "Middle East" (Palestine, Mesopotamia, and probably Aden, and also questions of policy in other Arab areas within the British sphere of influence).

Public debt, nil. Total net assets, 296,455*l.* Industries unimportant. The trade of the port is chiefly transit trade, and the supply of coal to ships. There are import duties on malt liquors, wine, spirits, and tobacco and on these articles the duties are low.

Government savings-bank, with 5,219 depositors, had 87,246 peseta and 261,712*l.* deposits at the end of 1919.

Gibraltar is a naval base and position of great strategic importance, which is now largely increased in strength and stability. There is a deep harbour of 260 acres, which suffices for all the wants of the Mediterranean fleet. The merchant vessels registered at the port were (1919) 48 steamers of 1,964 tons net and 6 sailing vessels of 1,328 tons; total, 54 vessels of 5,650 tons. Vessels entered, 1919, 6,833; tonnage, 13,737,959; cleared, 5,982; tonnage 16,030,961. Three miles of internal telegraph under military and about one mile under the Eastern Telegraph Company. Postal communication daily with England. Letters and post-cards in 1919, 2,223,249; newspapers and book packets, 471,016. There is cable communication with the Continent, Tangier, the Mediterranean Eastern ports, and England, via Eastern Telegraph Company's lines.

A regular carriage service connects Gibraltar with Linea, a neighbouring town, and a road connects Linea with the village of Campamento.

The legal currency is that of Great Britain; but Spanish money continues to circulate freely. Since the outbreak of the great war there are also currency notes issued by the local Government.

MALTA.

Governor and Commander-in-Chief.—Field Marshal Lord Plumer G.C.B., G.C.M.G., G.C.V.O.; appointed 1919. Salary, 3,000*l*.

Lieut.-Governor and Chief Secretary to Government.—W. C. F. Robertson, C.M.G.

Malta was blockaded by the British Fleet, aided by the Maltese, from 1798 to 1800, and was finally annexed to the British Crown by the Treaty of Paris in 1814. It is one of the most important ports of call in the world, and is the base and resort for repair and refitment of the British fleet in the Mediterranean. Its harbour, as a naval station, is too small for the fleet. A breakwater was constructed in 1909.

Under the Malta Constitution Letters Patent, 1921, there is an elected Legislature to control purely local affairs, consisting of a Senate (partly nominated) of 17 members, and a Legislative Assembly of 32 members. Elections are on a proportional representation basis. There is a responsible ministry consisting of not more than seven members. Certain 'reserved' matters, including control of naval, military and air forces, Imperial interests, external trade, coinage, immigration, treaties, and relations with foreign States, are dealt with by the Governor, assisted by a nominated Executive Council, consisting of the Lieutenant-Governor, a legal adviser, and an officer of the navy, army, and air force.

English is the official language of the Colony, Maltese being allowed in the elementary schools, and Italian the official language of record in the Law Courts.

Malta is 17 miles long; area, 91½ square miles; and the neighbouring island, Gozo, 26 square miles; total area (with Comino), 118 square miles. Population, according to Census taken on April 2, 1911, 228,534. Civil population on April 2, 1911, 211,864; estimated civil population on April 1, 1920, 224,859. Births, 1919–20, 8,787; deaths, 4,586; number of marriages, 2,938. Chief town and port, Valletta.

Education—102 public schools, with 22,222 pupils on the rolls at the beginning of the scholastic year, 1919–20; a university with 6 faculties and 221 students ; a lyceum with 807 students ; 2 secondary schools, one for boys with 54 pupils, and one for girls with 186 pupils ; and 7 technical manual schools. Expenditure on elementary education, 1919-20, 33,310*l.* secondary, 4,985*l.* ; university, 6,590*l.* There are 63 unaided private schools with 4,580 pupils.

In 1919-20, 3,977 persons were committed to prison ; 164 persons were convicted of serious crime and 18,592 summarily. Police numbered 510 officers and men on March 31, 1920.

The revenue and expenditure in 5 years were :—

A S I A.

ADEN, PERIM, SOKOTRA, AND KURIA MURIA ISLANDS.

ADEN is a volcanic peninsula on the Arabian coast, about 100 miles east of Bab-el-Mandeb. It forms an important coaling-station on the highway to the East, and is strongly fortified. The settlement includes Little Aden, a peninsula very similar to Aden itself, and the settlement and town of Shaikh عثمان on the mainland, with the villages of Imad, Hiswa, and Bir Jabir.

In April, 1905, after demarcation of the frontier, Ottoman and British Commissioners signed an agreement which determines the boundary of the hinterland from Sheikh Murad on the Red Sea to Bana river, and thence north-east to the great Desert. By the Anglo-Turkish Convention of 1914, the boundary was prolonged through the desert to a point on the coast opposite Bahrein in the Persian Gulf. The settlement also includes the island of Perim at the entrance to the Red Sea, and is subject to the Bombay Government. The Government is administered by a Political Resident (who is also General Officer commanding the troops) with four assistants. The India Office has hitherto exercised internal administrative control (through the Government of India); the Foreign Office has been responsible for political questions, and the War Office for military questions, but it is under consideration (March, 1921) to transfer Aden to the Colonial Office.

Political Resident and General Officer Commanding.—Major-General F. E. Scott, C.B., C.I.E., D.S.O.

First Assistant Resident.—Major C. C. J. Barrett, C.I.E.

The only Government revenue is from duties on liquor, opium, and salt, and from income tax, court fees and judicial fines ; local taxes go to the Aden Settlement Fund. There is a Port Trust. The gross revenue of the settlement in 1919–20 was 1,694,121*l.*

Area 75 square miles ; including the Protectorate, about 9,000 square miles ; of Perim, 5 square miles. Population of Aden and Perim in 1911, 46,165 (31,290 males and 14,875 females), against 43,974 in 1901. Imports (1919–20), by sea, 6,580,474*l.*; by land, 295,498*l.*; treasure (sea and land), 248,106*l.* total imports, 7,124,078*l.* (total, 1918-19, 5,470,743*l.*) Chief imports Cotton, piece goods, grain, hides and skins, tobacco, coal, coffee, sugar, fruits, vegetables, and other provisions. Exports, by sea, 6,292,691*l.*; by land, 125,451*l.*; treasure (sea and land), 98,862*l.*: total exports, 6,517,004*l.* (total, 1918-19, 4,573,916*l.*) Chief exports: Coffee, gums, hides and skins, cotton goods, tobacco, grain and pulse, provisions, sugar. These statistics are exclusive of government stores and treasure. In 1919-20, 1,066 merchant vessels of 2,736,839 tons (net) entered the port of Aden, of which 642 were British; in the same year 883 country (local) craft of 36,569 tons entered. At Perim 480 vessels entered, of which 101 were Government vessels. Aden itself produces little, its chief industries being the manufacture of salt and cigarettes. The trade is largely a transshipment one and is divided into foreign, Indian, and inland. There is a branch of the National Bank of India, Limited, and there is also one firm of private bankers.

A railway was begun in 1915, for military purposes, from Aden to Lahaj 25 miles, and has now been extended a few miles beyond that oasis. The gauge is one metre.

The island of Sokotra off the coast of Africa is under British protection, and the Kuria Muria islands, off the coast of Arabia, are attached to Aden. Area of former, 1,382 square miles. Population about 12,000, mostly pastoral and migratory inland, fishing on the coast. Religion, at one time Christian, Mohammedan since the end of the 17th century. The island came under British protection in 1876, by treaty with the Sultan. Chief products, dates and various gums; sheep, cattle, and goats are plentiful; butter is exported. The Kuria Muria Islands, five in number, were ceded by the Sultan of Muskat for the purpose of landing the Red Sea cable.

BAHREIN ISLANDS.

Group of islands in the Persian Gulf, 20 miles off the coast of El Hasa in Arabia. Bahrein, the largest, is 27 miles long by 10 wide; Muharrak to the north-east of Bahrein, 4 miles long,  $\frac{1}{2}$  mile wide. Other islands are, to the east, Sitra, 3 miles long and 1 mile broad, half its area being fertile; Nabi Saleh, about 2 miles in circumference, very fertile; Jezeyr, a small islet with a date plantation; to the west are three rocky and uninhabited islets, Um Nahsan, Jidi, and Raka. The regular population of the islands is put at about 110,000. Manama, the capital and commercial centre, extends 3 miles along the shore and has 35,000 inhabitants. Muharrak on the island of that name has about 20,000 inhabitants. Other towns are Budaiya on Bahrein Island and Hadramut on Muharrak Island. There are about 100 villages in the islands. There are thousands of tombs in the shape of conical mounds situated in the interior of the islands. They vary considerably in size, some of them being as much as 100 yards in diameter, and 40 feet in height, entailing vast labour of construction. Inside are regular masonry burial chambers. No certain as to their origin yet exists owing to want of inscriptions, but they are undoubtedly extremely ancient.

The ruling family, Al Khalifa, and most of the townsmen are Mohammedians of the Sunni (Maliki) sect. The town population consists of Arabs who have come from Nejd within the last 200 years, and negroes. The agricultural population and the Bahrein pearl divers are mostly of the Shiah sect. There is a large Persian (mostly Shiah) community, and a number of Indian (mostly Hindu) merchants and tradesmen live in Manama. The present chief of Bahrein is Sheikh Sir Isa bin Ali Al Khalifah, K.C.I.E., C.S.I. His uncle, Mahomed, was deposed by the British in 1867, and Sheikh Ali, his father, installed in his place. In 1869 Ali was killed, and Sheikh Isa succeeded to power.

The great industry is the pearl fishery, in which over 1,000 boats, of from 8 to 60 men each, from Bahrein alone, are engaged. The Bahrein Islands also produce dates, and a remarkably fine breed of white donkeys. Sail cloth is manufactured extensively, and also reed mats. In 1919-20, imports amounted to 1,414,423*l.*; exports, 946,844*l.* There are 5 per cent. ad valorem import duties. The importation of arms and ammunition is subject to the consent of the British Government.

The chief imports in 1919-20 were: specie, 5,824*l.*; pearls, 26,464*l.*; rice, 405,989*l.*; coffee, 92,842*l.*; ghee, 67,007*l.*; sugar, 32,692*l.*; tea, 20,332*l.*; piece goods, 337,039*l.* The chief exports were: pearls, 298,900*l.*; rice, 261,051*l.*; coffee, 22,649*l.*; tea, 9,247*l.*; sugar, 11,100*l.*; dates, 15,333*l.* Owing to its situation, harbour, and good service of steamers, the port is largely used as a place of transhipment for mainland goods.

In 1919-20 there entered the port of Bahrein 55 British ships of 109,073 tons, and 1 American ship of 3,171 tons. The greater part of the trade of Nejd and Hasa passes through Bahrein, where transhipment between steamers and dhows takes place.

There is a British Post office which is worked as an Indian Inland office with the exception of insurance. Letter rates between Great Britain and Bahrein are the same as between Great Britain and India. There is a wireless station.

The principal coins in use are Indian rupees, Austrian (Maria Theresa) dollars worth from 41*d.* to 48*d.*, and Turkish lire worth from 20*s.* to 20*s.* 5*d.* according to the rate of exchange. The rupee is the coin in general use. The Persian double kran, value about 1*s.* 1*d.* is also used. The measure employed is the dhirau of 18½ inches. The weights are: the miscal shirazi of 72 grains; the miscal bar of 720 grains; the rubaa of 114 lbs. avoirdupois; the mann of 57·6 lbs. avoirdupois; and the rafaa of 576 lbs. avoirdupois.

The political relations between the Government of India and the Chief of Bahrein are conducted through the Political Resident in the Persian Gulf and a Political Agent, who tries all cases in which British or Foreign subjects are concerned.

BORNEO (BRITISH).

British North Borneo.—Governor.—A. C. Pearson, C.M.G.

British North Borneo occupies the northern part of the island of Borneo. The interior is mountainous, Mount Kina Balu being 13,455 feet high.

Area, about 31,106 square miles, with a coast-line of over 900 miles. Population (1911 census) 208,183, consisting mainly of Mohamedan settlers on the coast and aboriginal tribes inland. The Europeans numbered 355; Chinese, 26,002; Malays, 1,612; East Indians, 5,511; Sulus, 5,700. The number of natives cannot be more than approximately estimated, but is placed at about 170,000. The most numerous are the Dusuns, about 88,000; the Muruts, 25,300; and the Bajaus, 22,600. Chief towns, Sandakan (population 8,256), on the east coast, and Jesselton, on the west coast.

The territory is under the jurisdiction of the British North Borneo Company, being held under grants from the Sultans of Brunei and Sarawak (Royal Charter in 1881). The territory is administered by a Governor (appointed with the approval of the Secretary of State) in Borneo, and a Court of Directors in London, appointed under the Charter. On May 1, 1888, the British Government proclaimed a formal protectorate over the State of North Borneo. In 1898 certain border lands were acquired from the Sultan of Brunei, and more recently certain inland territories have been occupied. For administrative purposes the whole country is divided into five Residencies, which are sub-divided into Districts. In December, 1904, an area of about 200 square miles was transferred to Sarawak in exchange for rights over coal mines on Brunei Bay.

There are Protestant and Catholic missions. The laws are based on the Indian Penal, Criminal, and Civil Procedure Codes, and local Ordinances. There is an Imam's Court for Mohamedan law. Native and Indian constabulary, 800 men under European officers.

Shipping 1916 : entered 192,619 tons, cleared 195,074 tons ; 1917, entered 228,227 tons, cleared 227,163 tons ; 1918, entered 273,262 tons, cleared 273,523 tons ; 1919, entered 326,885 tons, cleared 327,973 tons.

A railway, 127 miles, runs from Jesselton on Gaya Bay to Melalap in the Interior, with a branch from Beaufort to Weston on Brunei Bay. Borneo is now connected by cable with the outer world. There is a telegraph line from Menumbuk, where the cable reaches land, to Jesselton via Beaufort. At the latter station a branch line leads to Tenom in the Interior. Communication between Jesselton and Sandakan, Kudat and Tawau is maintained by wireless telegraphy. A land line extends from Sandakan to Lahad Datu. Telephone exchanges are operated at Sandakan and Jesselton, while an elaborate system of telephone lines maintains communication between smaller stations and bigger Government centres.

At Jesselton and Sandakan there are agencies of the Hongkong and Shanghai Bank, the Chinese Commercial Bank, and the Bank of Taiwan.

The Government issues its own copper coinage (cents and half-cents) ; nickel coinage of 1, 2 $\frac{1}{2}$  and 5 cents ; also notes of one, five, ten, and twenty-five dollars, and of 25 and 50 cents. Accounts are kept in dollar currency.

Brunei.—In 1888 the neighbouring territories on the north-west coast of Borneo, Brunei and Sarawak, were placed under British protection. On January 2, 1906, by treaty, the Sultan of Brunei handed over the general administration of his State to a British Resident. The Sultan, Sir Mohamed Jamalulalam, K.C.M.G., born in 1889, succeeded his father in May, 1906. He receives an allowance of 1,400 $\frac{1}{2}$  a year from State funds, and his two principal ministers 700 $\frac{1}{2}$  a year each. Area about 4,000 square miles, and population estimated at 32,000. The chief town, Brunei (pop. 10,000), is built over the water on the Brunei river. There is a vernacular school at Brunei, with about 80 boys at the end of 1918 ; a Chinese school with about 55 boys ; and other schools have been started in the out-districts. Receipts, 1919, 18,900 $\frac{1}{2}$  ; (Customs, 6,200 $\frac{1}{2}$ , monopolies, 3,800 $\frac{1}{2}$ , licences, 1,700 $\frac{1}{2}$  ; land revenue, 2,400 $\frac{1}{2}$ , cession monies, 2,100 $\frac{1}{2}$ ) and expenditure, 16,200 $\frac{1}{2}$ . Sarawak : Area about 42,000 square miles, coast line 400 miles, many rivers navigable. The government of part of the present territory was obtained in 1842 by Sir James Brooke from the Sultan of Brunei. Various accessions were made between 1861 and 1890. Under an agreement of 1888 Sarawak is recognised as an independent State under the protection of Great Britain. The Rajah, H.H. Charles Vyner Brooke, son of the late Rajah, born Sept. 26, 1874, succeeded May 17, 1917. Population estimated at about 600,000, Malays, Dyaks, Kayans, Kenyahs, and Muruts, with Chinese and other settlers. The chief towns are the capital, Kuching, about 23 miles inland, on the Sarawak River, and Sibu, 60 miles up the Rejang River, which is navigable by large steamers. At Kuching :

are Church of England and Catholic missions with schools. The revenue is derived chiefly from Customs, the opium, gambiung, arrack and paw farms, exemption tax payable by Malays, and from Dyak and Kayan revenue. There are import duties on tobacco, salt, kerosene oil, wines, and spirits; export duties on sago, gambier, pepper, all jungle produce, dried fish, &c. The revenue in 1917 was 198,950*l.*; expenditure, 158,637*l.*; 1918, revenue 224,229*l.*; expenditure, 169,830*l.*; 1919, revenue, 295,311*l.*; expenditure 200,888. Public debt, nil. Coal exists in large quantities, as well as gold, silver, diamonds, antimony, and quicksilver. A considerable oil field is being developed at Miri. Foreign trade: 1918, imports, 1,156,019*l.*; exports, 1,346,356*l.*; 1919: imports, 2,364,208*l.*; exports, 2,795,095*l.* The chief exports (1919) included sago flour, 495,807*l.*; pepper, 217,824*l.*; gold, 94,278*l.*; plantation rubber, 430,377*l.*; gutta-jelutong, 249,622*l.*; gutta-percha, 24,367*l.*; cutch, 52,506*l.*; birds' nests, 9,365*l.*; liquid fuel 115,836*l.* (in 1918). The trade is mostly with Singapore. Shipping entered and cleared in the foreign trade, 1918, 266,211 tons; 1919, 309,488 tons. There are military and police forces, consisting of about 700 men, principally Dyaks and Malays, under British army officers. Round Kuching are about 45 miles of roads, besides bridle paths. There are 23 post offices. The Government offices have a telephone system extending over Kuching and Upper Sarawak, and there is communication by wireless with Singapore &c. There are also wireless stations at Sadong, Sibul, Miri, and Goebild. Distance from London, 8,700 miles; transit, 25 to 30 days. Telegrams are sent by wireless from Singapore.

CEYLON.

Constitution and Government, &amp;c.

Ceylon, the ancient Taprobane (Tamraparnu, the island of "dusky leaves"), is an island in the Indian Ocean, off the southern extremity of Hindustan, lying between  $5^{\circ} 55'$  and  $9^{\circ} 50\frac{1}{2}'$  N. lat., and  $79^{\circ} 42'$  and  $81^{\circ} 53'$  E. long.; its extreme length from north to south, i.e., from Point Palmyra to Dondra Head, is 271 miles; its greatest width 139 miles, from Colombo on the west coast to Sangemankande on the east. Its area is 25,481 square miles, or about equal to Holland and Belgium.

The climate of Ceylon, for a tropical country, is comparatively healthy; the heat in the plains, which is nearly the same throughout the year, is much less oppressive than in Hindustan. Along the coast the annual mean temperature is about  $81^{\circ}$  Fahr., at Kandy, 1,665 feet above sea level, it is  $76^{\circ}$  Fahr. At Colombo the average monthly temperature varies from a mean minimum of  $71^{\circ}$  Fahr. in January and February, to a mean maximum of  $90^{\circ}$  Fahr. in March and April. The highest temperatures are experienced in the district to the north of the hills, and to the north-east, but it is only in a very few days in the year that a temperature of  $100^{\circ}$  Fahr. or over is experienced. The average annual rainfall varies from 40 to 50 inches in the dry zones to the north-west and south-east of the island, to above 200 inches at certain places on the south-west slopes of the hills. The rainy season extends from April to June and from September to November, but there is hardly a month without some rain, and the result is the luxuriant vegetation for which this island is famous.

The authentic history of Ceylon begins in the fifth century B.C., when an invasion of Hindus from Northern India established the Sinhales dynasty. As a result of many generations of warfare the northern districts were occupied by Tamils from South India, and the population of these districts is almost wholly Tamil, and mainly Hindu in religion. Buddhism was introduced from India in the third century B.C., and is still the religion of the majority of the inhabitants, especially in the southern part of the island.

In 1505 the Portuguese formed settlements on the west and south, which were taken from them about the middle of the next century by the Dutch. In 1795-96 the British Government annexed the foreign settlements to the Presidency of Madras; in 1801 Ceylon was erected into a separate colony. In 1815, the districts of the interior, which had maintained their independence under the Kings of Kandy, were acquired by Great Britain as the result of a rebellion against the king, and the whole island was thus united under British rule.

According to the terms of the Constitution established in 1833, modified on various occasions, and now embodied in the Letters Patent of 1910, the administration is in the hands of a Governor, aided by an Executive Council of seven members—viz., the Officer commanding the Troops, the Colonial Secretary, the Attorney-General, the Controller of Revenue, the Colonial Treasurer, the Government Agent of the Western Province, and one member nominated by the Governor, and a Legislative Council of 21 members, including the Executive Council, four other office-holders, and ten unofficial members, six nominated by the Governor and four elected, representing the different races and classes in the community. It is proposed (1920) to raise the number of the Legislative Council to 37 members, exclusive of the Governor, who will preside. There will be 14 official and 23 unofficial members of the latter; 16 at first, and ultimately 19, will be elected (11 on a territorial basis, 2 to represent the Europeans, 1 the Burgher Community, 1 the Chamber of Commerce, 1 the Low Country Products Association, 2 the Kandyan and 1 the Indian Communities). One member will be nominated to represent the Mohammedan Community. Three unofficial members will be appointed to the Executive Council.

Governor.—Brigadier-General Sir William Henry Manning, G.C.M.G. K.B.E., C.B. (appointed April 30, 1918). Salary 5,500£., and 1,500 allowance.

Colonial Secretary.—Sir Graeme Thomson, K.C.B.

For purposes of general administration, the island is divided into nine provinces, presided over by Government Agents, with assistants and subordinate headmen. There are three municipalities and twenty-one local boards mainly for sanitary purposes.

Area and Population.

The population for 1911 shows an increase of 15·15 per cent. on the population of 1901. The estimated population at the end of 1919 was 4,757,596, exclusive of the military and shipping. The following are the statistics of the census of 1911.

Of the 4,106,350 persons (exclusive of the military and the shipping) at the census of 1911, the occupation of 2,631,622 or 64·1 per cent. (of whom 1,096,301 were earners and 1,535,321 dependents) was returned as agriculture; 442,011 or 10·7 per cent. (191,130 earners, 250,881 dependents) industrial occupation; 323,568 or 7·9 per cent. (136,259 earners, 187,309 dependents) trade.

The population on estates, mainly consisting of immigrant Tamils from Southern India, numbered, at the census of 1911, 513,467, and formed 12·5 per cent. of the total population.

Marriages registered, 1919, 18,870<sup>1</sup>; births registered, 161,405 (82,464 males and 78,941 females); deaths registered, 168,323.

The urban population is about 14 per cent. of the total population. The principal towns and their population (exclusive of the military, shipping, and estates), according to the census of 1911, are :—Colombo, 211,274; Galle, 39,960; Jaffna, 40,441; Kandy, 29,451.

Religion and Instruction.

The principal religious creeds were in 1919.—Buddhists, 2,866,560; Hindus, 1,087,063; Mohammedans, 328,613; Christians, 474,060.

Buddhism in Ceylon (unlike that in Tibet, China, and Japan) is, in its philosophy, materialistic and atheistic, and in popular usage has a large admixture of the doctrines and practices of popular Hinduism and of the aboriginal wild tribes.

Education is under a separate Government department with a Director, an assistant Director, an office assistant, and a staff of Inspectors.

The number of vernacular schools in 1919 was: Government schools, 884 (attendance, 97,819 boys and 32,570 girls); Aided schools, 1,855 (attendance, 129,027 boys and 78,649 girls); Unaided schools, 1,363 (23,649 children). There were also 265 English and Anglo-vernacular schools, attended by 36,376 boys and 10,512 girls.

The total sum spent by Government on vernacular education during 1918-19 was 96,153*l*.

Education is free in vernacular schools, fees are charged in English schools. The Royal College and the Government Training College with the English school attached to it are Government institutions. The other English schools are grant-in-aid schools. The total grants to English schools in 1918-19 amounted to 30,345*l*. The Government also gives two scholarships of 250*l*. a year, each tenable for three years, with outfit allowances of 50*l*. each and free passages, to enable the best two students of each year to complete their course of education in England, and other scholarships are given locally. The Cambridge school certificate examinations, and examinations of the London University up to and including the final bachelor's degree in arts, science and law, are held annually in Ceylon by arrangement. Technical education is given in the "Technical Schools" (429 students in 1919). There are 84 industrial schools.

Justice, Crime, and Pauperism.

The law is Roman-Dutch, modified by colonial ordinances. Kandyan Law is to a certain extent in force in the Kandyan Provinces, and special systems of personal law are recognised for the Mohammedan community, and for the Tamils of the Jaffna District. The criminal law has been codified on the principle of the Indian Penal Code. There are a Supreme Court, police courts and courts of requests, and district courts, intermediate between the latter and the Supreme Court. Village councils deal with petty offences. In 1919 the number of cases instituted in the police courts and municipal magistrates' courts was 83,816. The number of "true cases of cognisable crime was 11,062, and the convictions, 5,227. 14,770 convicted persons were sent to prison. Police force, December 31, 1919, 2,88 of all ranks.

There is no poor law, though a few old persons receive a charitable allowance from the Government varying from Rs. 1 to Rs. 12.50 each per mensem.

The net public debt on September 30, 1919, was 5,006,000*l.*, incurred entirely for public works, such as the construction of railways, harbour works, waterworks, etc.

Defence.

The harbour of Colombo, on the west, is protected.

In normal times Ceylon pays three-fourths of the cost of the Imperial garrison. At present the defence of the Colony is almost entirely in the hands of local troops. Compulsory service for Europeans was introduced in 1917.

Production and Industry.

The area of the colony is 16,212,000 acres, of which it is estimated that about 3,000,000 acres are under cultivation, and about 1,000,000 acres pasture land. The approximate areas under the principal products in 1919 were: paddy, 710,000 acres; other grain, 160,000 acres; cacao, 31,000 acres; cinnamon, 35,000 acres; tea, 450,000 acres; coconuts, 1,012,000 acres; rubber, 309,000 acres. In 1919, the exports of tea were 208 million lbs., of which 140 million lbs. were sent to the United Kingdom. The exports of desiccated coconuts were 676,000 cwts., copra, 1,737,000 cwts., and coconut-oil, 683,000 cwts. In the same year, 100,393,000 lbs. of rubber were exported, of which 82,974,000 lbs. went to the United Kingdom, 66,405,000 lbs. to America. In 1918, 11,112 acres of crown land were sold and settled. Live stock (1919), 3,600 horses, 1,599,000 horned cattle, 68,000 sheep, 59,000 goats, and 180,000 goats. There is a Government Dairy, possessing over 200 head of cattle, imported from Scinde. Plumbago mines working at end of 1919, 50. The exports of plumbago in 1919 were 128,000 cwt. Other minerals, such as gold, thorium, and monazite, exist, but, except the last-named, so far have not been found in quantities of commercial importance. There are some hundreds of small gem quarries, from which sapphires, rubies, moonstones, catseyes, and other gems are obtained. Native manufactures, which are at present of very minor importance, are weaving, basket work, tortoise-shell boxes, &c., earthenwares, jewellery, metal work, lacquer work, carving, &c. Manufactures on any large scale are confined to the products of agriculture, such as the production of coconut oil. In 1919 there were 1,266 registered factories, including 1,033 tea and rubber factories, 115 coconut fibre, oil, &c., factories, 44 engineering and saw mills, 22 aerated water, ice, &c., factories.

The values of imports and exports are declared, and represent the wholesale values at the place of import or export. Declarations are subject to scrutiny and penalty. The Chamber of Commerce, as representing the trade of the island, assists by supplying the value on which a rated duty is levied. Quantities of imports are ascertained from invoices or by actual examination; of exports, from declarations and by examination of the shipping documents, shippers being liable to penalties for misstatement. The origin and destination of goods are also obtained from the shipping documents. In some cases, however, goods intended for transshipment abroad are so entered, e.g. to New York, via London. The transit trade includes all goods transhipped direct in port, as well as goods landed into transshipment warehouses. The transit trade of Colombo has largely increased of late years, but, as no bills of entry are required in respect of transshipment goods, the returns as to quantity are only approximately correct, and no returns as to value can be prepared.

According to Ceylon returns the total imports from the United Kingdom in 1919 amounted to 2,947,029*l.*, and exports thereto, to 13,447,089*l.*

In 1919 (British Board of Trade Returns) the value of tea imported into the United Kingdom from Ceylon was 9,065,000*l.* (quantity, 187,338,000 lbs.). Other imports in 1919 were: rubber, 3,608,000*l.* (33,500,000 lbs.); coconut oil, 1,531,000*l.*; nuts, and kernels, 1,432,000*l.*; plumbago, 60,000*l.*; cinnamon, 168,000*l.* The principal exports of United Kingdom produce to Ceylon in 1919 were cottons, 656,000*l.*; iron and steel and manufactures thereof, 384,000*l.*; machinery, 167,000*l.*; spirits, 41,000*l.*; tobacco, 36,300*l.*

Total imports into United Kingdom, 1920: 16,915,000*l.*; total exports of British produce to Ceylon, 6,347,000*l.*

Shipping and Communications.

Shipping entered and cleared, 1919, 17,706,617 tons (British, 13 131,162 tons). In 1918, the total tonnage was 6,607,565, and British, 4,975,698.

On January 1, 1920, 116 sailing vessels of 9,529 tons, and 7 steamers of 737 tons net, total vessels 123 of 10,266 tons net, were registered as longing to Ceylon.

727 miles of railway were open at September 30, 1919, and several tensions are under construction.

In 1919 there were 551 post offices of various classes; money order offices, 195; telegraph offices, 160; postal packets or postcards passed through the post office, 44,000,000 (exclusive of parcels). 7,319 miles of telegraph wire; telegrams despatched, 1,382,833.

Money and Credit.

Six banks have establishments in Ceylon: the Mercantile Bank of India, the Bank of Madras, the National Bank of India, the Bank of Colombo, Hong Kong and Shanghai Bank, and the Chartered Bank of India, Australia and China. The Ceylon Savings Bank on December 31, 1919, had 39,000 depositors, and deposits amounting to Rs. 4,089,722; and the Post Office Savings Bank, 114,591 depositors, and deposits, Rs. 2,744,202.

The weights and measures of Ceylon are the same as those of the United Kingdom. The currency consists of:—Copper: Ceylon 1-cent and  $\frac{1}{2}$ -cent pieces,  $6\frac{1}{2}$  cents being equivalent to 1*d.* English. Nickel: Ceylon 5-cent piece. Silver: Indian rupee (=100 cents), equivalent (by Ordinance No. 1 of 1903) to 1*s.* 4*d.* English; and Ceylon 50-cent, 25-cent, and 10-cent pieces. Gold: British sovereigns, which are legal tender at Rs. 15 to the sovereign (these have, however, now been demonetized). Ceylon Government currency notes of Rs. 1,000, 100, 50, 10, 5, 2, and 1. On September 30, 1919, the value of currency notes in circulation was Rs. 40,533,042.

Dependency.

The Maldivé Islands, 400 miles west of Ceylon, are governed by an elected Sultan, who resides in the island of Male, and pays a yearly tribute to the Ceylon Government. Next to the Sultan is the first Wazir, or Prime Minister, then the Fandiari, the head priest or judge, and besides them 6 Wazirs or Ministers of State. The Maldives are a group of 13 coral islands (atolls), richly clothed with cocoa-nut palms, and yielding millet, fruit, and edible nuts. Population over 70,000 Mohammedans. The people are civilised, and are great navigators and traders.

The island is the third largest in the Mediterranean, 40 miles from the coast of Asia Minor and 60 from the coast of Syria. It was administered until November 5, 1914, by Great Britain, under a convention concluded with the Sultan of Turkey at Constantinople, June 4, 1878, but on the outbreak of hostilities with Turkey on November 5, 1914, the island was annexed. The High Commissioner has the usual powers of a Colonial Governor. There is an Executive Council, consisting of the Chief Secretary, the King's Advocate, the Treasurer, with three locally resident additional members. The Legislature consists of eighteen members, six being office holders, including the Chief Secretary, the King's Advocate, and the Treasurer, and twelve elected (for five years), three by Mohammedan and nine by non-Mohammedan voters. The voters are all male British subjects, or foreigners twenty-one years of age, who have resided five years, and are payers of any of the taxes known as 'Verghis.' Municipal councils exist in the principal towns, elected practically by all resident householders and ratepayers. Those eligible to the council must be voters rated upon property of the annual value of from 10*l.* to 20*l.*, according to population.

Area 3,584 square miles. Population, Census 1911:—139,383 males, 134,725 females; total, 274,108 (including 144 military population). Mohammedans (Ottoman Turks) 56,428; Christians (Autocephalous Church of Cyprus), 214,480; others, 3,200. Inhabitants per square mile, 76.48. Estimated population, December 31, 1920, 315,219 exclusive of military. Birth-rate, 1916, 28.1 per 1,000; death-rate, 17.1.

The principal towns are Nicosia (the capital), 18,461; Larnaca, 10,652; Limasol, 11,843; Famagusta and Varoshia, 6,127; Paphos and Ktema, 3,946; Kyrenia, 1,986. There are six administrative districts named after these towns.

The system of elementary education is designed so that each race in the island has its own schools. Besides elementary schools there were in 1919-20 3 Gymnasiums, a commercial Lyceum, 1 'Greek high school' for boys and 1 'high school' for girls, a Priests' Training School, and two Moslem High Schools, one for boys and one for girls. The Government contributed 1919-20) 12,000*l.* to education. Total expenditure on elementary and secondary education, 52,469*l.* Total number of elementary schools in 1919-20, 739 (501 Greek-Christian, 231 Moslem, 4 Armenian and 3 Maronite); teachers, 725 in elementary schools, of whom 653 were Greek-Christian and 272 Moslem. Total enrolment in elementary schools, 42,059, comprising 7,554 Moslem, 34,273 Greek-Christian, 100 Armenian, and 132 Maronites. There are 11 weekly newspapers in Greek.

The law courts consist of (1) a supreme court of civil and criminal appeal; (2) six assize courts, having unlimited criminal jurisdiction;

(3) six district courts, having limited criminal jurisdiction and unlimited civil jurisdiction; (4) six magisterial courts with summary jurisdiction; ten village judges' courts. In all, except supreme court, native (Christian and Mohammedan) judges take part. There are also 4 Sheri Courts, for Mohammedans only, which administer the Moslem Sheri or ecclesiastical law. In the year 1919-20 the number of offences was 12,471, and the number of persons committed to prison was 2,587. Strength of police force, March 31, 1920, 26 officers and 792 men; total, 818.

The revenue and expenditure for five years, ended March 31, exclusive of Grant-in-Aid, and share of the Turkish debt charge, were :—

Public debt, 1919-20, 227,503*l.*, for harbour, railways, and irrigation. Annual grant from imperial funds to revenue (not included above), 50,000*l.* per year.

Cyprus is essentially agricultural. Chief products in 1920: wheat, 2,220,000 kiles; barley, 2,210,000 kiles; vetches, 340,000 kiles; oats, 187,000 kiles; olives, cotton. Grapes are produced in large quantities. Other products are raisins, carobs (locust beans), fruit, linseed, silk, cheese, wool, hides, and (by the Department of Agriculture) origanum oil. In 1919 there were 288,560 sheep, 210,995 goats, and 31,920 pigs. One-third of the cultivable land is under cultivation. There are irrigation works for the storage and distribution of rain-water. The Forest Department has done much for the preservation and development of the forests existing at the time of the British occupation, and for the re-forestation of denuded districts. The total area of delimited forest is 700 square miles. Sponge fisheries are carried on. Gypsum, terra umbra and marble are found in abundance; mining of copper has commenced; asbestos is mined, 22,928 cwt. being exported in 1916; 21,386 cwts. in 1917; and 4,556 cwts. in 1918.

The commerce, and the shipping, exclusive of coasting trade, for five calendar years were :—

HONG KONG.

Constitution and Government.

THE Crown Colony of Hong Kong was ceded by China to Great Britain in January, 1841; the cession was confirmed by the treaty of Nanking, in August, 1842; and the charter bears date April 5, 1843. Hong Kong is the great centre for British commerce with China and Japan, and a military and naval station of first-class importance.

The administration is in the hands of a Governor, aided by an Executive Council, composed of the General Officer Commanding the Troops, the Colonial Secretary, the Attorney-General, the Treasurer, the Secretary for Chinese Affairs, and the Director of Public Works (the last two being special appointments), and two unofficial members. There is also a Legislative Council, presided over by the Governor, and composed of the General Officer Commanding the Troops, the Colonial Secretary, the Attorney-General, the Treasurer, the Director of Public Works, the Captain-Superintendent of Police, the Secretary for Chinese Affairs (the last three being special appointments), and six unofficial members—viz., four nominated by the Crown (two of whom are Chinese), one nominated by the Chamber of Commerce, and one by the Justices of the Peace.

Governor—Sir R. E. Stubbs, K.C.M.G. Appointed 1919. Salary 6,000*l.* including 1,200*l.* allowance.

Area and Population.

Hong Kong is situated at the mouth of the Canton River, about 9 miles south of Canton. The island is an irregular and broken ridge stretching nearly east and west about 11 miles, its breadth from 2 to 5 miles, and its area rather more than 32 square miles; separated from the mainland by a narrow strait, the Lyeemoon Pass, about half a mile in width. The opposite peninsula of Kowloon, on the mainland, was ceded to Great Britain by treaty in 1861, and now forms part of Hong Kong. The city of Victoria extends for upwards of five miles along the southern shore of the beautiful harbour. By a convention signed at Peking on June 9, 1898, there was leased to Great Britain for 99 years a portion of Chinese territory mainly agricultural, together with the waters of Mirs Bay and Deep Bay and the island of Lan-tao. Its area is 356 square miles, with about 94,000 inhabitants, exclusively Chinese. Area of Old Kowloon is 8 square miles. Total area of colony, 391 square miles. A scheme was begun at the end of 1916 for reclaiming 12 million square feet of land from the sea in Kowloon Bay, and erecting thereon a model town.

The population of Hong Kong, excluding the Military and Naval establishments, was estimated to be in the middle of 1919 as follows:—Non-Chinese civil population, 13,600; Chinese civil population, namely, City of Victoria (including Peak), 320,080; villages of Hong Kong, 16,520; Kowloon (including New Kowloon), 86,550; New Territories (land), 97,100; population afloat, 64,250; total Chinese population, 584,500; total civil population, 598,100.

Of the resident white population nearly one-half is British and one-third is Portuguese.

The registered births and deaths for five years were as follows :—

1914 . . .	3,001	9,585	7·3	23·3
1916 . . .	2,631	10,558	6·1	24·0
1917 . . .	2,400	10,433	5·3	23·4
1918 . . .	2,321	13,714	4·1	24·4
1919 . . .	2,194	11,647	4·3	23·2

In 1915 the number of Chinese emigrants was 68,275, and the number of immigrants 109,753; in 1916, 117,653 and 72,405; in 1917, 96,298 and 98,232; in 1918, 43,830 and 74,109; and in 1919, 59,969 and 136,020 respectively.

Instruction.

Education is not compulsory, but all schools are State-inspected, and required to maintain a certain standard of efficiency. There are 3 secondary Government schools for children of British parentage, with an average attendance of 163 (1920), and 5 Government schools for Chinese boys, and one for Chinese girls, with a total average attendance of 2,444. There are also numerous schools in receipt of grants. The total number of pupils in all schools in 1920 was 25,786. The University Matriculation Examination serves the purpose of a leaving examination. The total expenditure on education in 1919 was 254,302 dollars, net.

The Hong Kong University was formally opened in March, 1912, and during the session 1919–20 the number of students was 230, mostly Chinese. Faculties of Medicine, Engineering and Arts have been established, with a large staff of British professors and lecturers. There are well-equipped scientific laboratories, and recent additions are schools for instruction in physiology, pathology, and tropical medicine. The engineering laboratories have been equipped with machinery presented by various firms who are interested in technical education. It is the only British University in the Far East.

Justice and Crime.

There are Courts of Justice consisting of a Supreme Court, the second court or Court of Summary Jurisdiction, and a third court or Appeal Court, a police magistrate's court, and a marine magistrate's court. In 1919, 2,552 were committed to Victoria gaol for criminal offences; in 1918, 1,498. The daily average of prisoners in gaol was 601 in 1918, and 756 in 1919. There is a police force in the colony numbering 1,228 men, of whom 159 are European, 477 Indians, and 592 Chinese.

Finance.

The public revenue and expenditure of the colony were as follows in five years. The dollar of Hong Kong is of variable value; for 1913 it is here taken at 2s., for 1914 at 1s. 10½d., for 1915 at 1s. 9½d., for 1916 at 2s. 1½d., for 1917 at 2s. 7½d., for 1918 at 3s. 2½d., for 1919 at 3s. 8½d.

Year	Revenue	Expenditure
1913 (pre-war)	851,230	865,801
1915	1,063,111	1,372,902
1916	1,455,388	1,165,700
1917	1,960,690	1,834,743
1918	3,012,676	2,624,027
1919	3,061,220	3,340,574

The revenue is derived chiefly from land, taxes, licences, quarry rent, liquor and tobacco duties, and an opium monopoly, which together more than cover the expenses of administration, except in the year 1915. A large portion of the expenditure has to be devoted to the maintenance of a strong police force. Expenditure on establishments in 1919, 4,709,340 dollars. The estimates for 1920 are: revenue, 15,314,800 dollars; expenditure, 14,886,473 dollars.

Public debt, 341,800*l.*, raised in 1887 and 1893 for public works. Another loan, 1,143,933*l.* in Inscribed Stock at 3½ per cent., was raised in 1906 for purposes of railway construction, also at 6 per cent. War Loan of 3,000,000 dollars was authorised. On December 31, 1919, the balance of assets over liabilities was 4,290,188 dollars (799,941*l.*).

Defence.

The military contribution payable to the Imperial Government was 3,552,939 dollars for 1919. The Defence Corps cost 27,525 dollars for 1919. Hong Kong is the headquarters of the China Squadron.

Industry, Commerce, Shipping, and Communications.

The chief industries of Hong Kong are sugar refining, ship-building and repairing, rope-making, tin refining, tobacco manufacture, the manufacture of cement, and the manufacture of knit goods. Deep-sea fishing is important especially for the New Territories.

The commerce of Hong Kong is chiefly with Great Britain, India and Ceylon, Australia, United States, China, Japan, Indo-China, and Siam. Hong Kong is a free port (except as regards the importation of intoxicating liquor and tobacco). There were no complete official returns of trade prior to 1918, but complete trade and shipping returns are now officially compiled and published quarterly and annually. Hong Kong is the centre of trade in many kinds of goods. Among the principal are sugar and flour, rice, cotton, cotton yarn and cotton piece goods, silk, hemp, leather, tin, wolframite, bulk and case oil (kerosine), oils and fats, peanuts, Chinese medicines, fish and fishery products, tea, coal, cement, condensed milk, matches. The Chinese tea and silk trade is largely in the hands of Hong Kong firms.

Imports into Hong Kong in 1919: from the British Empire, 19,746,010*l.* (United Kingdom only, 5,129,784*l.*); from foreign countries, 70,905,698*l.* total imports, 90,651,708*l.* Exports from Hong Kong in 1919: to the British Empire, 18,993,145*l.* (United Kingdom only, 2,698,813*l.*); to China and Japan, 62,649,784*l.*; to other foreign countries, 22,800,005*l.*; total exports, 103,942,934*l.*

20,987 vessels, including 10,353 junks and 2,509 steam-launches, representing altogether 10,489,114 tons, entered in 1919, and 20,998 vessels, including 10,357 junks and 2,526 steam-launches, representing 10,584,312 tons, cleared in 1919. The number of fishing and other boats frequenting the harbour and bays of Hong Kong in 1919 may be estimated at about 20,000.

There is an electric tramway of 9½ miles and a cable tramway connecting The Peak district with the lower levels of Victoria. The British section of the Hong Kong-Canton Railway was begun in 1907, and opened to traffic on October 1, 1910. The branch line from Fanling to Sha Tau Kok was completed and opened to traffic in April, 1912.

There were 17 post offices in Hong Kong in 1919; Revenue, postal and telegraphic, 460,893 dollars; expenditure, 138,225 dollars. Telegraph lines, including cables, 1918, 283 miles; telephone wires, excluding military lines, 10,850 miles. There is a wireless telegraph service under the Post Office besides a military and naval wireless station.

Money and Credit.

The British banking institutions in the Colony are the Hong Kong and Shanghai Banking Corporation, whose head office is at Hong Kong, the Chartered Bank of India, Australia and China, and the Mercantile Bank of India, Ltd. There are also several Chinese and foreign banks.

Money, Weights, and Measures.

The currency of the Colony consists of the notes of the above-mentioned banks, and of British, Hong Kong, and Mexican dollars, besides subsidiary coins. The British Dollar is of 416 grains of silver 900 fine, as compared with 417·74 grains of 902·7 fineness of the Mexican dollar.

Subsidiary coins are 50 cent pieces (209·52 grains 800 fine), 20 cent pieces (83·81 grains 800 fine), 10 cent pieces (41·90 grains 800 fine), 5 cent pieces (20·95 grains 800 fine), and 1 cent copper pieces of 115·75 grains of copper or mixed metal.

The circulation of foreign copper coin was prohibited in 1912, and similar action is being taken with regard to foreign silver and nickel coins and bank notes.

Weights and Measures are:

The Tael . . . . .	=	1½ oz. avoirdupois
„ Picul . . . . .	=	133½ lbs.
„ Catty . . . . .	=	1½ „ „
„ Chek . . . . .	=	14½ inches.
„ Cheung . . . . .	=	12½ feet.

Besides the above weights and measures of China, those of Great Britain are in general use in the colony.

INDIA AND DEPENDENCIES.

INDIA, as defined by Parliament (52 and 53 Vict. c. 63, s. 18), comprises all that part of the great Indian Peninsula which is directly or indirectly under British rule or protection. In a popular sense it includes also certain countries such as Nepal, which are beyond that area, but whose relations with India are a concern of the Foreign and Political Department of the Government, whose agent resides in the country concerned. These countries will be found included in the third part of the YEAR-BOOK among Foreign Countries. The term British India includes only the districts subject to British law, and does not include native States. The term is so used, unless otherwise stated, in the tables, &c., that follow. The symbol Rx. stands for ten rupees. Rx. 1 = Rs. 10.

Government and Constitution.

The present form of government of the Indian Empire is established by various Parliamentary Statutes which are now consolidated in the Government of India Act, 1915, as amended by the Government of India (Amendment) Act, 1916, and the Government of India Act, 1919. All the territories originally under the government of the East India Company are vested in His Majesty, and all its powers are exercised in his name; all revenues, tributes and other payments, are received in his name, and disposed of for the purposes of the government of India alone. Under the Royal Titles Act, 1876, the King of Great Britain and Ireland has the additional title of Emperor of India.

It is the declared policy of Parliament to provide for "the increasing association of Indians in every branch of the administration and the gradual development of self-governing institutions with a view to the progressive realisation of responsible government in India as an integral part of the British Empire."

Government in England.—The administration of the Indian Empire in England is entrusted to a Secretary of State for India, assisted by a Council of not less than eight and not more than twelve members, appointed for five years by the Secretary of State. At least one-half of the members must be persons who have served or resided ten years in India, and have not left India more than five years previous to their appointment. A member may be removed by His Majesty upon an address from both Houses of Parliament, and the Secretary of State may for special reasons, to be recorded in a minute signed by him and placed before both Houses of Parliament, reappoint a member of the Council for a further term of five years. No member can sit in Parliament. The duties of the Council, which has no initiative authority, are to conduct the business transacted in the United Kingdom in relation to the government of India. The expenditure of the revenues of India, both in India and elsewhere, is subject to the control of the Secretary of State in Council, and no appropriation can be made without the concurrence of a majority of votes of the Council. The Secretary of State regulates the transaction of business. The existence of a Legislative Assembly in India with a large elected majority renders it desirable that the Secretary of State should intervene only in exceptional circumstances in matters of purely Indian interest, where the Government and Legislature of India are in agreement.

Power is given by the 1919 Act for the appointment in the United Kingdom of a High Commissioner for India, to whom may be delegated powers of the Secretary of State respecting contracts, and to whom other duties may be assigned.

The salary of the Secretary of State, under the 1919 Act, must, and the cost of the India Office for other than agency services may, be borne by the British, and not, as formerly, by the Indian Exchequer.

Central Indian Government.—The supreme executive authority in India is vested in the Governor-General in Council, often styled the Government of India. The Governor-General, or Viceroy, is appointed by the Crown and usually holds office for five years. The Capital of the Empire and the seat of government was moved from Calcutta to Delhi in 1912, the latter being formed into a separate territory under a Chief Commissioner.

Viceroy and Governor-General of India.—Rt. Hon. the Earl of Reading G.C.S.I., G.C.B., K.C.V.O. (January, 1921).

The salary of the Governor-General is Rs. 2,56,000 (17,070*l.*) a year.

The following is a list of the Governors-General of India, with the dates of their assumption of office:—

Earl (Marquis) of Dalhousie . . . . .	1848	Earl of Reading . . . . .	1919

Until 1834 these were Governors-General of Fort William in Bengal, not of India.

There is an Indian Legislature consisting of the Governor-General and two Chambers, the Council of State and the Legislative Assembly. The Legislature was formally opened on February 9, 1921. The Council of State consists of not more than 60 members, of whom not more than 20 are official. The Legislative Assembly contains 144 members, of whom 26 are official members and 103 are elected. The life of the Council of State is five years and of the Assembly three years, but dissolution may occur sooner, or the period may be specially extended by the Governor-General. Joint sittings of the two Chambers may be held for the settlement of differences between them. The Legislative Assembly is presided over by a President appointed by the Governor-General. This Legislature has power, subject to certain restrictions, to make laws for all persons within British India, for all British subjects within the Native States, and for all native Indian subjects of the King in any part of the world. The Governor-General, with the assent of His Majesty, conveyed after copies of the proposed enactment have been laid before both Houses of the British Parliament, may enact certain measures against the wish of the Council or Assembly.

The various departments of Government are in charge of the Governor-General's Executive Council. This body has no fixed number of members (there were eight in July, 1920), but at least three of them must have had ten years' service in India, and one must be a barrister or pleader of not less than 10 years' standing. There are (1920) eleven departments—Home, Foreign and Political, Finance, Army, Public Works, Revenue and Agriculture, Commerce, Legislative, Education, Railways, and the Board of Industries and Munitions. At the head of each, except the last two, is one of the secretaries to the Government of India. The President of the Railway Board is the head of the Railway Department, and he is authorised to act as if he were a Secretary to the Government of India. The Foreign and Political Department is under the immediate superintendence of the Governor-General.

India is now divided into fifteen administrations, as follows :—

Madras : Governor, Rt. Hon. Baron Willingdon of Ratton, P.C., G.O.S.I., G.C.I.E., G.B.E. (1919); salary, Rs. 1,28,000 per year. Area, 142,000 square miles; population, at 1911 census, nearly 41½ millions, mainly Hindus.

Bombay : Governor, Captain Sir G. A. Lloyd, G.C.I.E., D.S.O. (1918); salary, Rs. 1,28,000 per year. Area, 123,000 square miles; population in 1911, over 19½ millions, mainly Hindus.

Bengal : Governor, Rt. Hon. the Earl of Ronaldshay, G.C.I.E. (1917); salary, Rs. 1,28,000 per year. The province was reconstituted from April 1, 1912, and has an area of 78,700 square miles, and a population (1911 census) of nearly 45½ millions, mainly Hindus and Mahomadians in almost equal proportions.

United Provinces of Agra and Oudh : Governor, Sir S. H. Butler, K.C.S.I., C.I.E. (1918); salary, Rs. 1,28,000 per year. Area, over 107,000 square miles, and population at 1911 census, over 47 millions (over 40 million Hindus and over 6½ million Mahomadians).

The Punjab : Governor, Sir E. D. MacLagan, K.C.S.I., K.C.I.E. (1919); salary, Rs. 1,00,000 per year. Area, 99,000 square miles; population (1911), over 19 millions (10 million Mahomadians, 6½ million Hindus, and 2 million Sikhs).

Burma : Lieut.-Governor, Sir R. H. Craddock, K.C.S.I. (1918); salary, Rs. 1,00,000 per year. Area, nearly 231,000 square miles; population (1911), over 12 millions, mainly Buddhists.

Bihar and Orissa : Governor, Rt. Hon. Lord Sinha of Raipur, K.C.S.I., P.C., K.C. (1920); salary, Rs. 1,00,000 per year. The province was constituted from April 1, 1912, out of Bengal, and contains the three great sub-provinces of Bihar, Orissa, and Chota Nagpur. Area, over 83,000 square miles, and population (1911), nearly 34½ millions, mainly Hindus.

Central Provinces and Berar : Governor, Sir F. G. Sly, K.C.S.I. (1920); salary, Rs. 72,000 per year. Area, nearly 100,000 square miles; population (1911) nearly 14 millions, mainly Hindus.

Assam : Governor, Sir William Marris, K.C.I.E. (1921); salary, Rs. 66,000 per year. The province was separated from Eastern Bengal and reconstituted from April 1, 1912. Area, 58,000 square miles; population (1911), nearly 6½ millions, over half being Hindus, and over a quarter Mahomadians.

N.W. Frontier Province : Chief Commissioner and Agent to the Governor-General: Sir A. H. Grant, K.C.I.E., C.S.I., (1919); salary, Rs. 48,000 per year. Area, 13,400 square miles; population (1911) nearly 2½ millions, mainly Mahomadians.

Ajmer-Merwara : Agent to the Governor-General, Rajputana, and Chief Commissioner, The Honourable Mr. R. E. Holland, C.I.E. (1919); salary, Rs. 48,000 per year. Area, 2,700 square miles; population (1911), about 500,000, mainly Hindus.

Coorg: Chief Commissioner, The Honourable Mr. W. P. Barton, C.S. C.I.E. (1920); salary, Rs. 48,000 per year. Area, 1,580 square miles; population (1911), 175,000, mainly Hindus.

Baluchistan: Agent to the Governor-General and Chief Commissioner, The Honourable Lt.-Col. A. B. Dew, C.S.I., C.I.E. (1919); salary, Rs. 48,000 per year. Area, over 54,000 square miles; population (1911), over 400,000, mainly Mahomedans.

Delhi: Chief Commissioner, C. A. Barron, C.S.I., C.I.E. (1919); salary, Rs. 36,000 per year. The province was constituted from October 1, 1911, and consists of a small enclave in the Punjab. Area, 557 square miles; population (1911), about 390,000.

Andaman and Nicobar Islands: Chief Commissioner, Lt.-Col. H. Beadon, C.I.E., I.A. (1920); salary, Rs. 36,000 per year. Area, 3,147 square miles; population (1911), 26,000.

High Commissioner in England.—Sir Wm. Meyer, G.C.I.E., K.C.S. (appointed October, 1920), 42, Grosvenor Gardens, London.

Provincial Government.—The Government of India Act, 1919, which came into operation in December, 1920, and January, 1921, effects important constitutional changes, more particularly in the government of the Provinces. The various functions of government are classified as Central and Provincial subjects, the latter being practically definitely committed to the Provincial Governments, while for purposes of convenience, certain Central subjects, such as the collection of income tax, may be dealt with by the Provincial Governments as the agents of the Central Government. The Governor-General in Council retains unimpaired powers of control over the Provincial Governments in their administration of 'reserved' subjects, but in 'transferred' subjects will only be competent to intervene where it is necessary to safeguard Central subjects or to decide questions where two or more Provinces are concerned, or to safeguard the due exercise and performance of any powers and duties possessed by or imposed on the Governor-General in Council in regard to the High Commissioner, to the raising of loans by local Governments, or under rules made by the Secretary of State in Council. The list of subjects transferred to Indian Ministers with certain reservations, include local self government, medical administration, public health and sanitation, education, public works, agriculture, fisheries, co-operative societies, excise, registration, development of industries, adulteration, weights and measures, and religious and charitable endowments. Certain sources of revenue are definitely allocated to the Provinces, which are required to contribute to the Central Government certain annual sums which are to be the first charge on their revenues.

The new Provincial Governments are based upon a scheme of diarchy or dualised form of government, and consist of the Governor-in-Council and the Governor acting with Ministers. The Ministers, who are elected members of the Legislative Council, have charge of certain Departments of Government known as 'transferred subjects,' while others, the 'reserved subjects,' are administered by the Governor-in-Council. Thus each side has its share in the conduct of the Government, with responsibility for its own work, while co-ordination is achieved by the influence of the Governor, who is associated with both sections.

The Governor's Executive Council consists of not more than four members, one qualified by twelve years' public service in India. The Legislative Council contains not more than twenty per cent. of official members and at least seventy per cent. elected members, and, in addition to its legislative functions, votes all expenditure, subject to certain specified exceptions and to the power of the Local Government to incur expenditure on reserved subjects without the Council's assent if the Governor certifies such expenditure to be necessary. The normal duration of the Legislative Council is three years, but it may be dissolved sooner by the Governor, or its term specially extended for one year. The Ministers who assist the Governor in the administration of transferred subjects are not to be officials. The Governor may not be a member of the Legislative Council, but may address the Council.

The Provinces to which this new form of government is applied are Bengal, Madras, Bombay, Bihar and Orissa, United Provinces, Punjab, Central Provinces, and Assam. The minimum number of members in each Legislative Council is: Madras, 118; Bombay, 111; Bengal, 125; United Provinces, 118; Punjab, 83; Bihar and Orissa, 98; Central Provinces, 70; Assam, 53. The numbers may be increased, and in several provinces increases have already been made. Proposals for a revision of Burma's constitution on the lines of the Indian Reform Act of 1919 are under consideration (March, 1921).

The provinces are usually formed into divisions under Commissioners, and then divided into districts, which are the units of administration. At the head of each district is an executive officer (collector and magistrate, or deputy-commissioner), who has entire control of the district, subject to the control of his official superior district officer. Subordinate to the magistrate (in most districts) there are a joint magistrate, an assistant-magistrate, and one or more deputy-collectors and other officials. There are 267 of such districts in British India.

Government of Indian States.—The control which the Supreme Government exercises over the Indian States varies considerably in degree; but they are all governed by the Indian princes, ministers, or councils. The princes have no right to make war or peace, or to send ambassadors to each other or to external States; they are not permitted to maintain a military force above a certain specified limit; no European is allowed to reside at any of their courts without special sanction; and the Supreme Government can exercise control in case of misgovernment. Within these limits the more important princes are autonomous in their own territories. Some, but not all of them, are required to pay an annual fixed tribute. The total number of Indian States is about 700, ranging from Hyderabad, with an area of over 82,000 square miles and a population of over 13 millions, to small States consisting of only a few villages.

In recent years the Princes have met in conferences at the invitation of the Viceroy, but in February, 1921, a Council of Princes was established as a permanent consultative body to discuss matters relating to treaties, or affairs of Imperial or common concern.

LOCAL SELF-GOVERNMENT.

There were at the end of 1918-19, 731 municipalities, with a population of over 17 millions. The total number of members of the municipal bodies was 9,943, of whom 5,532 were elected. The municipal bodies have the care and lighting of the roads, water supply, drainage, sanitation, medical relief, vaccination, and education, particularly primary education; they impose taxes, enact bye-laws, make improvements, and spend money, with the sanction of the Provincial Government. Their aggregate income in 1918-19 was about 7,066,000*l.*, exclusive of loans, sales of securities, and other extraordinary receipts amounting to 5,071,000*l.* The aggregate expenditure was 6,380,000%, excluding extraordinary and debt expenditure of 5,253,000. By the Local Self-Government Acts of 1883-84, the elective principle was extended, in a large or small measure, all over India. In all large towns, and in many of the smaller towns, the majority of members of committees are elected by the ratepayers; everywhere the majority of town committees consists of Indians, and in many committees all the members are Indians. In many municipalities women have the right to vote, and in a few they are eligible for election. For rural tracts, except in Burma, there were 789 district and sub-district Boards, and 535 Union Panchayats in Madras, 281 Union Committees in Bengal, and 38 in Bihar and Orissa with 17,592 members in 1918-19, 7,144 being elected. These Boards are in charge of roads, district schools, markets, public health institutions &c. Their aggregate income in 1918-19, excluding debt items, was 5,770,000%, and expenditure (excluding debt items), 5,134,000%.

Baroda.—This consists of five or six larger, and a considerable number of smaller separate areas. Ruler, H.H. Sir Sayaji Rao Gackwar, G.C.S.I., G.C.I.R., Maharaja of Baroda. There is an executive council of the principal officers of State, and, since 1908, a legislative council of 17 members. Educational policy is progressive, and education is largely free and compulsory. In 1918 there were 9,045 educational institutions, and 207,913 scholars. The gross receipts in 1917-18 were about 1,66,10,000 rupees, and the disbursements about 1,49,05,000 rupees.

Central India Agency.—This includes some 150 States. The bulk of the population are Hindus. The Indian Government is represented by an Agent at Indore, and under him is the Resident at Gwalior, and Political Agents for Baghelkhand, Bundelkhand, Bhopal, Southern States of Central India, and Malwa. The territories of the different States are much divided and intermingled, and their political relations with the Indian Government and with one another are very varied. Most of the ruling princes and chiefs exercise authority through a Diwan or Minister. Education is progressing, but varies greatly in different States. The annual revenue of the whole group is approximately 2,500,000*l.*

Hyderabad.—Ruler, Lieutenant-General H.E.H. Sir Usman Ali Khan, G.C.S.I., G.B.E., Nizam of Hyderabad. This is the largest and most populous of the internal States. The administration is carried on subject to the order of H.E.H. the Nizam, by an executive council. A Legislative Council was established in 1893, and consists of about 20 members. The British Government is represented by a Resident. The bulk of the population are Hindus, but the ruling family is Muhammadan. European officers and experts control and supervise some of the more important branches of administration. The annual revenue is approximately 3,000,000*l.*

Kashmir.—This State occupies most of the northernmost portion of India, and is administered by Lieutenant-General H.H. Maharaja Sir Pratap Singh, G.C.S.I., G.O.I.E., G.B.E., Maharaja of Jammud and Kashmir, with the assistance of ministers, the Indian Government being represented by a Resident. The revenue in 1917-18 was 903,000*l.*, and the expenditure 859,000*l.* The bulk of the population are Muhammadans, though the ruling family is Hindu.

Mysore.—Ruler, Colonel H.H. Maharaja Sri Sir Krishnaraja Wodeyar Bahadur, G.C.S.I., G.B.E., Maharaja of Mysore. The administration is carried on under him by the Diwan or Prime Minister, assisted by two Councillors. The Indian Government is represented by a Resident. There is a Representative Assembly dating from 1881, elected by the leading ryots, merchants, and local bodies. It meets for a few days annually for discussion but has no powers. A Legislative Council was formed in 1907 consisting of from 13 to 18 members. The bulk of the population are Hindus. The education system is on a high level. Primary education was made free in all schools in 1908. The revenue in 1917-18 was 2,97,82,000 rupees, and the expenditure 2,76,70,000 rupees.

North West Frontier Province.—Only about one-third of this is British territory, lying along the Punjab border. Between this and the Afghan frontier is the tribal territory. The British Government exercises the minimum of interference. The region is divided into five Political Agencies: Northern Waziristan, Southern Waziristan, the Kurram, the Khyber, and Dir, Swat, and Chitral. Only in the last can anything approaching an organised State be said to exist. Free primary education was introduced in April, 1912.

Rajputana Agency.—Rajputana includes 21 States surrounding the British province of Ajmer-Merwara. The Indian Government is represented by an Agent at Abu, and under him are three Residents (for Mewar, Jaipur, and W. Rajputana), and three Political Agents (for E. Rajputana, S. Rajputana, Kotah and Jhalawar, and Haraoti and Tonk). The bulk of the population are Hindus. The administration varies considerably from State to State, but generally the central authority is in the hands of the ruling prince or chief who is usually assisted by a Council or by a Diwan or Kamdar. Education is generally backward. The approximate annual revenue of the whole of the States is about 2,500,000%.

(Baluchistan and Sikkim are dealt with elsewhere.)

The registered deaths in 1919 numbered 8,554,178, of which cholera accounted for 578,426; plague, 74,284; fevers, 5,468,181; dysentery and diarrhoea, 291,643. The total deaths from plague in all India (British and native) from 1896 to the end of 1918 exceeded 10 millions, averaging nearly half a million per year.

The number of coolie emigrants from India was in 1915-16, 4,290; in 1916-17, 6,339; in 1917-18, 869. The bulk went to Demerara, Trinidad, Jamaica, Fiji, and Surinam. The emigration of unskilled labour has been prohibited, and it has been decided not to revive indentured emigration. The question of the introduction of a system of assisted emigration is under consideration.

Instruction.

The following statistics are those of the census of 1911 :—

—	Able to read and write	Unable to read and write	Total
Males . . . . .	16,938,668	148,480,620	160,419,288
Females . . . . .	1,600,763	151,397,030	152,997,793
	18,539,431	294,877,650	313,417,081 <sup>1</sup>

The persons with a knowledge of English numbered 1·7 millions.

Educational institutions in India are of two classes :—(a) those in which the course of study conforms to the standards prescribed by the Department of Public Instruction or by the Universities, and either undergo inspection by the Department, or regularly present pupils at the public examinations held by the Department or Universities. These institutions are called "Public," but may be under public or private management. (b) Those that do not fulfil these conditions. These are called "Private." As regards public institutions, the system of education operates, in general, through (i) the Primary Schools, which aim at teaching, through the vernacular languages, reading, writing, and other elementary knowledge; (ii) the Secondary Schools, in which the instruction does not go beyond the matriculation or school-leaving certificate standard. The schools are divided into English or vernacular, and also into high and middle schools; (iii) the Colleges, the students in which, having passed matriculation, are reading for a degree. The colleges are affiliated to the six universities—Calcutta, Madras, Bombay, the Punjab, Allahabad, and Patna. New universities have been established at Dacca, Lucknow, and Rangoon. There is also the Hindu University at Benares, and a university for the Mysore State. An Act has been passed in the Imperial Legislative Council (September, 1920), for the establishment of a Muslim University at Aligarh. Some statistics for the universities in 1919 are given in the following table :—

(a) No examinations in M.Sc. or B.Sc. or I.Sc.

(b) There is a School Final Examination also.

NOTE.—Candidates from Indian States and Ceylon are not included in the above table.

130 THE BRITISH EMPIRE:—INDIA AND DEPENDENCIES

There are in addition, various institutions of a special character, such as technical schools teaching arts and industries, engineering, &c. ; law schools ; medical schools and colleges ; and training colleges and normal schools for the training of teachers.

The following table gives the number of institutions and scholars in 1918-19 in British India, including Ajmer-Merwara, British Baluchistan, and Civil and Military Station of Bangalore :—

A system of State Scholarships exists by which it is possible for a boy to pass from the village school to the University. There are also State Technical Scholarships; and Indian Government Scholarships (two every year) to Indian graduates to enable them to pursue their studies at a British University.

Notwithstanding the recent great progress of education, the proportion able to read and write is still very small.

During 1918 the following newspapers and periodicals were published: in Madras, 254; Bombay, 140; Bengal, 353; United Provinces, 359; Punjab, 264; Burma, 35; Bihar and Orissa, 59; Central Provinces and Berar, 29; Delhi, 28. They were published in the following languages or dialects: English, Bengali, Hindi, Uriya, Kanarese, Sindhi, Sanskrit, Burmese, Chinese-Urdu, Persian, Gujrathi, Marathi, Karen, Pwo-Karen, Sagau-Karen, Tamil, Telegu, Malayalam, Arabic, Hindustani, Khasi, Lushai, Ajmer, Merwara, and Gurmukhi. (The figures include bilingual and polylingual publications.)

Justice and Crime.

The Presidencies of Madras, Bombay, and Bengal, and also the United Provinces of Agra and Oudh, the province of Bihar and Orissa, and the provinces of the Punjab and Delhi, have each a supreme high court, with 12, 8, 15, 9, 3, 7 and 8 judges, respectively, in 1920. There is appeal to the Privy Council in England. The Central Provinces and Berar, Oudh, North-West Frontier Province, Coorg, Sind, Upper Burma, and Chota Nagpur have judicial commissioners. Lower Burma has a chief court with five judges (in 1920). For Assam the high court of Calcutta is the highest judicial authority. Below these courts are, for criminal cases, Courts of Session, and below these, Courts of Magistrates (first, second, and third class). The inferior civil courts are determined by special acts or regulations in each province. The most extensive system consists of the sessions judge acting as a 'District Judge'; subordinate judges; and below them 'Munsifs'. There are also numerous special courts to try small causes. Side by side with the civil courts there are revenue courts, presided over by officers charged with the duty of settling and collecting the land revenue.

The number of officers exercising civil and criminal jurisdiction on December 31, 1918, was as follows:—

Courts	Civil	Criminal	Total
Provincial . . . . .	96	200	296

132 THE BRITISH EMPIRE :—INDIA AND DEPENDENCIES

Nearly all the civil judges, and the great majority of the magistrates in the courts of original jurisdiction are natives of India; in Bengal, Madras, and Bombay the proportion of natives in the appellate court is considerable.

The following table gives certain details of criminal cases (in thousands):—

Since 1900-01 the budget estimates have been prepared on the basis of an exchange rate of 1s. 4d. for the rupee.

The following table shows the items of revenue and expenditure for 1919-20 (revised estimate) and 1920-21 (budget estimate) :—

In addition to the above, there is an estimated capital expenditure on State railways and irrigation works in 1919-20 of 9,336,000l., and 333,800l. initial expenditure on the new capital at Delhi. The estimated amounts in 1920-21 are 13,852,100l. and 735,800l. respectively. There was also a capital charge of 100,000,000l. in 1917-18, representing India's financial contribution to the war, which was met partly by making over to the British Government the proceeds of the Indian war loans raised in 1917 and 1918, and partly by taking over a portion of the British Government's war debt.

Land Revenue.—The most important source of public income is the land. The land revenue is levied according to an assessment on estates or holdings. In the greater part of Bengal, and Bihar and Orissa, about one-fourth of Madras, and some districts of the United Provinces of Agra and Oudh, the assessment was fixed permanently at the end of the 18th century; while it is fixed periodically at intervals of from twelve to thirty years over the rest of India. In the permanently settled tracts the land revenue falls at a rate of 13s. 10p. per acre of cultivated land. In the temporarily settled tracts, excluding areas under partial assessment or free from assessment, the land revenue averages Rs. 13s. 4p. per acre of cultivated land, and in the case of privately owned lands, represents something less than one-half of the actual or estimated rental. For details as to the nature of the different tenures of land that prevail in India see the YEAR-BOOK for 1886, p. 799. See also under AGRICULTURE.

The land revenue was estimated to be contributed in 1919-20 as follows :

Administrations	Rs.	Administrations	Rs.
India, General . . . . .	19,19,000	Burma . . . . .	3,79,47,000
N.W. Frontier Province . . . . .	20,70,000	Bihar and Orissa . . . . .	1,62,03,000
Madras . . . . .	6,06,53,000	Central Provinces and Berar . . . . .	2,19,03,000
Bombay . . . . .	5,64,37,000	Assam . . . . .	89,74,000

United Provinces of Agra and Oudh . . . . .	6,60,56,000	Total . . . . .	88,13,61,000
Punjab . . . . .	2,96,89,000		(22,090,800)

Opium.—In British territory the cultivation of the poppy for the production of opium is practically confined to the United Provinces, and the manufacture of opium from this region is a State monopoly. The bulk of the opium exported is supplied direct to the Governments of consuming countries in the Far East, while a certain quantity is also sold by auction in Calcutta at monthly sales. Opium is also grown in many of the Native States of Rajputana and Central India, which have agreed to conform to the British system.

Year ended March 31	—	Year ended March 31	—
1914	19,789,239	1918	28,093,904
1915	20,836,559	1919	42,807,293
1916	21,893,200	1920 (Estimate)	55,483,300
1917	24,260,008	1921 (Estimate)	87,580,400

Debt.—The debt of British India, bearing and not bearing interest, was 464,877,138*l.* at March 31, 1920, comprising 272,241,582*l.* in India, and 192,635,556*l.* in England.

Out of India's contribution of 100,000,000*l.* to the cost of the war, 77,274,000*l.* representing the proceeds of the Indian War Loans raised in 1917 and 1918 have been paid to the British Government.

Finance of Separate Governments, and Local Finance.—The revenue and expenditure of each Government in 1918-19 were as follows:—

—	Revenue	Expenditure
	Rs.	Rs.
India (General)	62,40,57,607	88,18,55,702
North-West Frontier Province	66,26,856	1,55,04,868

The above excludes the revenue and expenditure of municipalities and of district and local boards. The income of the former is derived mainly from rates, octroi, taxes on houses, lands, vehicles and animals, tolls, and assessed taxes; and of the latter from leases on land. The revenue for 1918-19 of all municipalities which bank with Government treasuries was 7,082,939*l.* The expenditure was 6,658,408*l.* The revenue of district and local boards was 6,161,328*l.*, and the expenditure 5,524,534*l.* The following table shows the amounts for the chief administrations in 1918-19 (in thousands of rupees):—

Defence.

The military forces in India consist normally of the British Regular forces, the Native Army, the Volunteers, and the Imperial Service troops. They are administered by the headquarters staff and the Army department, both under the supreme control of the Commander-in-Chief, who is a member of the Viceroy's Council. The headquarters staff comprises the division of the Chief of the General Staff, the Adjutant General's division, the Quarter-Master-General's division, the medical division, the ordnance division, and the military works division. The Army department deals with supply and finance. For purposes of inspection and training the forces are organised into a Northern army and a Southern army, each army containing a number of divisions and independent brigades, whose commanders deal with headquarters direct on most questions of administration. At the end of 1920 this organisation was in process of change, the intention being to form four commands, in place of two. In September, 1920, the report of the Esher Committee on the organisation of the Indian Army was issued. Its chief recommendations are that the Chief of the Imperial General Staff should be the sole responsible military adviser of the Secretary of State for India, the Commander-in-Chief in India acting in the same capacity to the Government of India; that a Military Council, analogous to the Army Council, should be formed to assist the Commander-in-Chief, India; that there should be facilities for interchange between officers of the Indian and British armies. There are also important recommendations aiming at improving the conditions of all ranks, British and Indian, serving in India. In December, 1920, General Sir Charles Monro was succeeded as Commander-in-Chief, India, by General Lord Rawlinson.

At the outbreak of war the strength of the Army in India, exclusive of the volunteers and the Imperial Service troops, but inclusive of reservists of the native army, was: British troops 76,953, native troops 239,561. The total number of native troops recruited during the war, up to the date of the armistice (November 11, 1918), was 1,161,789. In 1917 the Defence Force Act was passed by the Government of India, and by it compulsory service was applied to Europeans and British subjects between the ages of 16 and 50, and the Volunteers, who consisted of Europeans and Eurasians, were merged into the new Defence Force. In September, 1918, it was rendered liable to service overseas. It then numbered 50,000. The total number of British and Native troops sent from India overseas to France, East Africa, Mesopotamia, Egypt, Gallipoli, Salonica, Aden and the Persian Gulf up to the date of the armistice was 1,215,338. The approximate number of casualties amongst Indian ranks was 115,000.

In September, 1920, the Defence Force Act was repealed, and the Auxiliary Forces Act and Indian Territorial Force Act became law. Under these Acts voluntary registration was substituted for compulsory registration. Preliminary training for infantry to be 32 days, and 40 days for the other arms. An Auxiliary Officers' Corps is formed of those who served in the Great War. The Indian Territorial Force is designed to form a second line to the Regular Army in India; it is not liable to service overseas, and is to have its own staff.

The Imperial Service troops are raised and maintained by Native States and are trained under the supervision of British officers. During the war great assistance in raising troops was afforded by the Indian Princes, many of whom themselves served overseas. The Imperial Service troops were largely augmented, the Nepaul Durbar in particular supplied 200,000 recruits for the Indian Army, 20 battalions of infantry, and maintained a reserve of 20,000 men in training.

At the end of 1920 the reorganisation of the British garrison of India was completed, the establishment being 75,896 men, but the demobilisation of the Indian Army generally had been retarded both by trouble on the north-west frontier and by the delay in settling the Treaty of Peace with Turkey. Throughout 1920 operations continued on the north-west frontier, mainly against the Waziris and the Mahsuds. At the end of the year, however, the prospect that order would be at length restored in this disturbed district was good. During the summer of 1920 it became necessary to dispatch from India to Mesopotamia reinforcements equivalent to two Indian divisions, and at the end of 1920 there were approximately 130,000 Indian troops serving outside India, mainly in the occupied areas of Turkey.

In accordance with the reform of the constitution of the government of India, a number of substantive commissions in the Indian army are now granted to Indian officers who have done distinguished service during the war, while honorary commissions are also given to Indian officers, who, though they have rendered distinguished service, are not eligible for substantive commissions through age or lack of education. Forty Indian gentlemen are now nominated annually to the Royal Military College, Sandhurst, to enable them to qualify for commissions in the Indian army, while 44 candidates are appointed to the training college at Indore, where they are able to qualify for temporary commissions.

Agriculture and Industry.

Agriculture, Land Tenure, &c.—The chief industry of India has always been agriculture. The total number of the population supported by agriculture, including forestry and raising of livestock, was, according to the census of 1911, nearly 225 millions (178 millions in British India and 47 millions in the Native States) out of a total population of 313 millions (244 millions in British India and 69 millions in the Native States). In every province of India there is a Department of Land Records and a Department of Agriculture. There are staffs of experts in the provinces and there is an Imperial staff of experts with a fully equipped central station, Research Institute and College for post graduate training of those who have completed the Agricultural Course in provincial colleges. There is also a Civil Veterinary Department for the prevention and cure of cattle diseases and for the improvement of the breeds of cattle, horses, &c. There is an Imperial Laboratory for research and the preparation of sera and antitoxins.

In provinces where the zamindari tenure prevails (i.e., where single proprietors or proprietary brotherhoods possess large estates of several hundreds or thousands of acres), the State land revenue is assessed at an aliquot part (usually about one half) of the ascertained or assumed rental. The revenue is payable on each estate as a whole, the assessment remaining unchanged for the period of settlement. In the greater part of Bengal, and Bihar and Orissa, and in parts of the United Provinces and Madras the settlement is a permanent one and not liable to revision. In provinces where the raiyatwari (or ryotwari) tenure prevails (i.e., where each petty proprietor holds directly from the State, as a rule cultivates his own land, and has no landlord between himself and the Government), the revenue is separately assessed on each petty holding, and land revenue becomes payable at once (or after a short term of grace in the case of uncleared lands) on all extensions of cultivation. The raiyatwari proprietor may throw up his holding, or any portion of it, at the beginning of any year after reasonable notice, whereas the zamindar or large proprietor engages to pay the revenue assessed upon him throughout the term of the settlement.

Of the total area under irrigation in 1918-19, 21,198,000 acres were irrigated by canals; 7,268,000 acres by tanks; 14,216,000 acres by wells; and 4,591,000 acres by other sources. State irrigation works accounted for 25 million acres in 1918-19. The estimated value of crops grown on this area during the year amounted to about 92·6 millions sterling. In the case of irrigation works (as distinct from navigation canals), for which capital accounts are kept, the net revenue apart from charges for interest was 3,756,600*l.*

Livestock, in British India, census 1919-20: oxen, 117,428,000; buffaloes, 28,493,000; sheep, 21,984,000; goats, 24,134,000; horses and ponies, 1,699,000; mules, 75,000; donkeys, 1,372,000; camels, 408,000.

Forests.—The lands under the direct control of the State Forest Department are classified as 'Reserved Forests' (forests intended to be permanently maintained for the supply of timber, &c., or for the protection of water supply, &c.), 'Protected Forests,' and 'Unclassed' forest land. The following table shows the extent of these areas in 1918-19:—

The net revenue from the State forests in 1919-20 was about 2,192,000*l.* (i.e., taking Rs. 10 to the l., or at Rs. 15, 1,461,000*l.*).

Industries.—The most important indigenous industry, after agriculture, is the weaving of cotton cloths. Other important indigenous industries are silk rearing and weaving, shawl and carpet weaving, wood-carving and metal-working. One of the most important industries connected with agriculture is the tea industry, the number of persons employed being about 972,000. The area under tea plucked in 1919-20 was about 643,000 acres, distributed as follows: Assam, 389,700; Bengal, 163,200; Madras, 28,200; Punjab, 9,700; Agra, 7,700; Bihar and Orissa, 2,100; Upper Burma, 1,700; and the Travancore State, 40,700. The production in 1919-20 was about 377 million pounds, against about 381 million pounds in 1918-19. The exports of Indian tea from British India (including the State of Travancore) in 1919-20 were:—to United Kingdom, 336,917,000 lb.; Russia, 20,000 lbs.; Canada, 8,300,000 lb.; China, 161,000 lb.; Australasia, 7,783,000 lb.; Ceylon, 1,721,000 lb.; Asiatic Turkey, 4,646,000 lb.; United States, 6,594,000 lb.; elsewhere (including exports across the land frontier), 15,892,000 lb.; total, 382,034,000 lb.; against 326,646,000 lb. in 1918-19. (The production figures for 1919-20 are provisional.)

Some statistics of mills, factories, &c., in 1918 or 1918-19, are given as follows for British India (works or factories employing generally 50 persons or more are included in the statistics) :—

144 THE BRITISH EMPIRE:—INDIA AND DEPENDENCIES

Of the exports of merchandise in 1919-20 Rs. 309,01,51,174 represented the products of the country. Rs. 17,77,80,125 were re-exports of imported foreign merchandise.

The returns of quantities and values of imports and of exports are based on the bills of entry and shipping bills respectively. The value is the wholesale value at the place of import or export, less trade discount, duty not being included in the value of dutiable goods. The accounts present the countries from which the goods have been consigned to India and the countries for which goods shipped from India are intended. No distinction is maintained between general, special, and transit trade; but goods of foreign origin, when re-exported, are shown in detail separately from those of Indian origin.

The gross amount of import duty collected in 1919-20 was Rs. 16,90,59,480, and export duty Rs. 4,81,11,248. Import duties are derived from cotton goods, Rs. 4,09,21,094; liquors, Rs. 1,38,00,584, metals, chiefly iron and steel, Rs. 1,18,86,349, oils, Rs. 1,02,67,632; salt, Rs. 1,47,03,352, sugar, Rs. 1,30,04,654, tobacco, Rs. 89,07,085, and silk and silk goods, Rs. 60,56,774, in 1919-20; export duties are levied on rice, tea, and jute, also raw hides and skins (from September 11, 1919).

In many cases the Native States of India impose Customs duties on goods imported from other parts of India.

The imports and exports, excluding Government stores and Government treasure, were distributed as follows in six years:—

The total value of the coasting trade in imports and exports, apart from Government stores and Government treasure was, in 1916-17, Rs. 114,18,44,470; in 1917-18, Rs. 120,74,55,750; in 1918-19, Rs. 156,80,66,439; in 1919-20, Rs. 216,76,49,017. The total quantity of the inland (rail and river-borne) import and export trade of India in each amounted to 33,812,000 tons, valued at Rs. 4,97,71,00,000, in 1916-17; 33,655,000 tons, valued at Rs. 513,28,00,000, in 1917-18; 33,829,000 tons, valued at Rs. 6,15,62,00,000 in 1918-19; and 31,818,000 tons, with an estimated value of Rs. 6,28,96,00,000 in 1919-20.

In several provinces certain of the large canals which are primarily intended for irrigation are also used for navigation by country boats and barges of shallow draught. The length of navigable channel in the several provinces is :—Madras, 1,318 miles; United Provinces, 412 miles; Punjab, 259 miles; Bengal, 590 miles; Bihar and Orissa, 519 miles; Burma, 91 miles.

An estimate has recently been sanctioned for the proposed Grand Trunk Canal in Bengal, which will form a very important addition to the navigable waterways of the Province. The canal will be 22 miles in length, and will connect the Hooghly River at Calcutta with the navigable rivers of Eastern Bengal.

Inland steamer navigation is almost exclusively confined to Burma and to the Ganges-Brahmaputra-Megna group of waterways, which connect Bengal with Bihar and Orissa on the one side, and with Assam on the other.

A limited number of vessels ply on the Indus River, but this will probably cease when the large irrigation canals in the Punjab and Sind, at present under investigation, are constructed.

Gross earnings on railways during 1919-20, 59,435,000£., against 57,240,000£. during 1918-19. Working expenses in 1919-20, 33,771,000£., or 56·82 per cent. of the gross earnings; as compared with 27,868,000£., or 48·45 per cent. in 1918-19. Net earnings, 25,664,000£. in 1919-20, against 29,656,000£. in 1918-19; average return on the capital expenditure 6·80 per cent., against 8·09 per cent. in 1918-19. The net profit to the State, after meeting all charges for interest, &c., was 6,963,817£.

in 1920, against 10,858,379½. in 1918-19. The railway staff in 1919-20 numbered 6,941 Europeans, 10,865 Anglo-Indians, and 693,884 Indians; total, 711,690.

India and Ceylon have been connected by rail and steamer ferry combined; the steamers plying between Dhanushkodi Point on Rameswaram Island and Talaimannar in Ceylon. A project has also been prepared for replacing the ferry by a railway, to be constructed on a causeway laid over the reef known as Adam's Bridge.

III. POSTS, TELEGRAPHS, AND TELEPHONES.

In 1920 there were 69,494 post-offices and letter-boxes, against 753 in 1857.

In the fiscal year ended March 31, 1920, the number of letters, post-cards and money-orders passing through the post-offices was 1,225,047,599; newspapers 61,918,287; of parcels 11,389,643; and of packets 68,384,866, being a total of 1,366,740,393. The following table gives statistics for five years:—

Year ended March 31	Number of Letters, Newspapers, &c.	Post Offices	Letter Boxes	Total Revenue	Total Expenditure
1916	1,082,984,058	19,328	49,684	2,450,883	2,110,253
1917	1,120,235,120	19,409	49,763	2,622,493	2,114,737
1918	1,147,922,768	19,410	49,749	2,774,015	2,361,631

1918	347,906	87,714	1,645,683	848,197	19,897,787
1919	357,472	87,814	2,157,348	980,821	21,314,943
1920	369,273	88,417	2,515,321	1,435,324	20,275,352

There were 10,440 telegraph offices in India on March 31, 1920.

There are several wireless telegraph installations under the Government of India.

The telephone system is in the hands of the Post and Telegraph Department, but telephone exchanges have been established in Calcutta, Madras, Bombay, Ahmedabad, Karachi, Rangoon, and Moulmein, by private companies, under licences from the Government. At the end of 1919 there were 13 telephone exchanges, with 17,810 connections, established by private companies, and 245 exchanges, with 8,975 connections established by the Department.

Money and Credit.

The total value of the silver, nickel, copper, and bronze coined in British India from 1835-36 to 1919-20 inclusive was Rs. 7,53,29,03,895, including Rs. 50,14,78,068, the value of 221,003,960 British dollars; Rs. 8,02,68,040, the value of 35,374,555 Straits dollars; Rs. 92,74,505 and Rs. 23,17,840, the value of subsidiary silver coinage for the Straits Settlements and Ceylon respectively; Rs. 2,43,47,157, the value of coinage for the Egyptian Government; Rs. 10,10,700, the value of pennies and halfpennies for the Australian Commonwealth; Rs. 74,86,572, representing the value of cents and fractions.

thereof. The heaviest coinage in any one year was struck in 1918-19. The value of money coined at the Calcutta and Bombay Mints in the last five years was as follows :—

Year ended March 31	Silver	Nickel	Copper	Bronze	Total
	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.
1916	1,62,02,199	4,79,390	—	1,83,900	1,68,65,489

An Act providing for the closing of the Indian Mints to the unrestricted coinage of silver for the public was passed in 1893. Provision was made (1) for the receipt of gold coin and bullion at the Mints in exchange for rupees at a ratio of 1s. 4d. per rupee; (2) for the receipt of sovereigns and half-sovereigns in payment of Government dues; and (3) for the issue of currency notes in Calcutta and Bombay in exchange for gold coin or bullion. By a Notification of the 11th September, 1897, sovereigns and half-sovereigns were also received at the Reserve Treasuries, at the rate of Rs. 15 for the sovereign.

An Act (XXII. of 1899) declared the sovereign legal tender, 15 rupees to the sovereign. No gold was coined in India down to 1917, but the question of such coinage was examined by a Royal Commission appointed in 1912. The recommendations made by the Royal Commission are under the consideration of the Government of India. In view of the strain imposed by war conditions on India's metallic money, a branch of the Royal Mint was established at Bombay, at the end of 1917, for coining into sovereigns the gold bullion and foreign coin received into the Paper Currency Reserve, in order to make the metallic part of this Reserve available as legal tender. Power was also taken by legislation for the coining in India of a 15-rupee gold coin (gold mohur), of the same size, weight, and fineness as the sovereign, and a number of these coins was struck at the Bombay Mint from May to August 1918. Sovereigns were minted between August and December 1918, but since April 1919 the Branch Mint has been closed.

Owing, however, to the rise in the value of the rupee, which began in 1917, it was decided early in 1920 to fix its value, after a transitional period, at Rs. 10 to the gold sovereign, in accordance with the recommendations of the Indian Currency Committee (1919). By a communique dated the 2nd February, 1920, the Finance Department Notification of the 11th September, 1897, mentioned above, and a notification dated 11th December, 1906, authorising the receipt of sovereigns and half sovereigns at the Mints, were cancelled. Bills were passed in September, 1920, amending the Indian Coinage and Paper Currency Acts and fixing the legal tender value of the sovereign and half sovereign at Rs. 10 and Rs. 5 respectively.

The Coinage Act of 1906 provided for the introduction of a subsidiary nickel one-anna piece and the substitution of a bronze currency for the existing copper coins. The coinage of copper was accordingly discontinued with effect from August 1, 1906. The issue of the nickel one-anna piece was commenced with effect from August 1, 1907. In the Indian Coinage Amendment Act of 1918 (IV. of 1918), provision was made for the coinage of a new nickel two-anna piece, and coins of this denomination were issued from April, 1918. The issue of four-anna and eight-anna nickel pieces was authorised by the Indian Coinage (Amendment) Act, 1919 (XXI. of 1919).

Since 1900, rupees have been coined as required to meet public demands. The entire profit accruing to Government on the coinage up to March 31, 1907, and during the year 1912-13, and half such profit for the years 1907-08 and 1908-09 were placed to the credit of a separate fund termed the Gold Standard Reserve, with the object of ensuring the stability of the currency policy of Government. Any profit arising from this source is at present credited entire to the Gold Standard Reserve. On August 31, 1920, the Reserve amounted to 37,179,138*l*.

On July 16, 1861, an Act was passed by the Government of India providing for the issue of a paper currency through a Government department, Public Issue, by means of promissory notes. Circles of issue were established from time to time, as found necessary, and the notes were made legal tender within the circle for which they were issued, and rendered payable at the place of issue, and also at the capital city of the Presidency. Subsequent legislation has relaxed the rigidity of the circle system. Notes of the value of one, two-and-a-half, five, ten, fifty, and a hundred rupees are now legal tender throughout British India, and the limitation of currency to the circle of issue is confined to notes of higher denominations. There are now seven circles of issue with their headquarters at Calcutta, Bombay, Madras, Rangoon, Cawnpore, Lahore, and Karachi.

10 Rupees . . . . .	= 1l.

Prior to September, 1920, 15 rupees = 1l.

The rupee weighs one tola (a tola = 180 grains), .916 fine.

Nickel 4 and 8 anna pieces have been introduced into India (1919).

The sum of 1,00,000 rupees is called a 'lakh,' and of 1,00,00,000 a 'crore' of rupees. A 'lakh' of rupees is now equivalent to 10,000l.

The Maund of Bengal of 40 sers . . . . .	= 82 $\frac{1}{2}$ lbs. avoirdupois.
„ „ Bombay . . . . .	= 28 lbs. nearly.
„ „ Madras . . . . .	= 25 lbs. nearly.
„ Tola . . . . .	= 180 gr.
„ Guz of Bengal . . . . .	= 36 inches.

An Act to provide for the ultimate adoption of a uniform system of weights and measures of capacity throughout British India was passed by the Governor-General of India in Council in 1871. This Act, however, has never been brought into operation. The matter was again considered by a Weights and Measures Committee, appointed in 1913, and the evidence was generally in favour of a uniform system, provided there is not a too radical change from the existing practice. The report of the Committee is under the consideration of the Government of India.

BALUCHISTAN.

Government, &c.—A country occupying the extreme western corner of the Indian Empire, approximately between lat.  $24^{\circ} 54'$  and  $32^{\circ} 4' N.$ , and between long.  $60^{\circ} 56'$  and  $70^{\circ} 15' E.$ ; extreme length from E. to W. about 550 miles; breadth about 450; area, 134,638 square miles; population (1911 census), 834,703. Bounded on the N. by Afghánistán and the North West Frontier Province, on the E. by Sindh, the Panjáb, and a part of the Frontier Province, on the S. by the Arabian Sea, on the W. by Persia; the boundary disputes with which were settled in 1905. The main divisions constituting an area of 134,638 square miles are: (1) British Balúchistá proper, with an area of about 9,096 square miles, consisting of tracts assigned to the British Government by treaty in 1879; (2) Agency Territories, with an area of about 45,132 square miles, composed of tracts which have from time to time been acquired by lease, or otherwise brought under control, and placed directly under British officers; and (3) the native State of Kalát and Las Bela, with an area of about 80,410 square miles, the former consisting of a confederation of tribes under the Khán of Kalát, and stretching westwards to Persia, while the latter occupies the alluvial valley between the Pab and Hálá ranges from the sea to Bela.

British and Administered Territory.—British Residents were appointed to the courts of the Kháns of Kalát from the middle of the nineteenth century and British expeditions passed through the Bolán on their way to Kandahár and Afghánistán, but up to 1876 the country was considered independent. In 1875 Sir Robert Sandeman, the founder of the Balúchistán Province, first entered the country; in 1877 the cantonment of Quetta, which is now the headquarters of the Administration, was occupied by British troops, and in 1879 the administration of the district was taken over on behalf of the Khán of Kalát. After the Afghán war, 1878-81, the districts of Pishir, Shorarúd, Duki, Sibi, and Sháhrig were assigned to the British and i November, 1887, were formally constituted as British Balúchistán. In 1888, the districts of Quetta and Bolán were made over by the Khán to the British on an annual quit-rent of 25,000 rupees and 30,000 rupees respectively. In 1886, the Bori valley, in which is now the cantonment of Loralai, was occupied. In 1887, the Khetrán country, now known as the Bárkhán tahsil, was brought under British control; in 1889 British authority was established in the Zhob valley and Kákar Khurásán; in 1896 Chágai and Western Sinjrání were included in administered territory; in 1899, the Nuskhi Niabat was made over by the Khán of Kalát on an annual quit-rent of 9,000 rupees; and in 1903 the Nasirábád tahsil was acquired from the Khán on an annual quit-rent of 117,500 rupees. The area of British and administered territory, including tribal areas, is 54,228 sq. miles, and the population (1911) 414,412. The head of the civil administration is the Chief Commissioner and Agent to the Governor-General. The area under his direct administration is divided into 6 districts, each in charge of a Political Agent as follows: Quetta-Pishín, Sibi, Zhob, Loralai, Bolán Pass, Chágai. The Political Agent in charge of the Bolán Pass is also Political Agent for Kalát and Las Bela. The revenue administration of the Province is entrusted to an officer who is styled the Revenue and Judicial Commissioner.

In the directly administered territory the chief items of revenue are: Land revenue, excise, court fees and stamps, and judicial fines. In some places the land revenue is levied in money in accordance with a fixed assessment, but generally it is levied in kind. This is usually one-sixth of the crop; but in the Sibi tahsil it is two-ninths, and on the lands of the Shebo and Khushdil irrigation canals, constructed by the Government, the proportion is one-third. In Nasirábád the assessment per acre of the cultivated area varies from 8 annas to Rs. 4 according to the crops raised and means of water-supply. For revenue purposes each district is divided into tahsils, each of which is in charge of an Indian official known as a Tahsildar, who has a Naib-Tahsildar, Kanungos and Patwáris subordinate to him. The revenue from all sources in 1919-20 was Rs. 20,01,948; and in 1918-19, Rs. 18,49,523.

Almost all cases in which local men are concerned are referred to 'councils of elders' (locally called jirga) for settlement along the well-tried lines of the ancient customary and tribal law. This system of settlement of cases forms an integral and essential part of the machinery for the administration of Civil and Criminal justice in Balúchistán. During 1916 5857 cases were disposed of by Jirgahs. Appeals from, or rather applications for revision of, the jirga decisions when confirmed by the district officers, lie to the Agent to the Governor-General and Chief Commissioner in Balúchistán. Cases in which aliens are concerned are settled by Regular Courts and the highest court of appeal in such cases is the Judicial Commissioner in Balúchistán.

Regular troops are cantoned at Quetta, Chaman, Fort Sandeman, and Loralai, and detachments are stationed at different places, principally in the Zhob and Loralai Districts, for the preservation of law and order. There is also a police force, supplemented by levies and the Zhob militia, Makrán and Chagái Levy Corps. The latter are recruited from the local tribes, and have their own leading men as officers.

The medical work of the Province is under the Residency Surgeon and Chief Medical Officer, and there are Civil Surgeons at Quetta, Sibi, Loralai, Fort Sandemana and Chaman, and Civil Assistant-Surgeons at Quetta, Sibi, Kaiat and Pangur, and Railway Assistant-Surgeons at Shahrig and Mach.

The Native States of Kalát and Las Bela.—The leading chief of Kalát is His Highness Sir Mír Máhmúd Khán, G.C.I.E., Beglar Bégi Khán, Wali of Kalát, who succeeded on the abdication of his father, the late Mír Khudádád Khán, in November, 1893.

The Khán of Kalát is the head of a confederacy of chiefs, but the extent of his control has now been considerably reduced. In all important matters he is amenable to the advice of the Agent to the Governor-General in Balúchistán, who also arbitrates in disputes between the Khán and minor chiefs. The area of Kalát State, including Mikrán and Khárán, is 73,200 square miles, and the population 359,086 (1911 census).

The Khán's revenue, including the subsidies and rents for the leased areas paid by the British Government, amounts to about 12,00,000 rupees annually. The Khán has an irregular force of 301 cavalry, infantry, and artillery, and 12 guns. The chief towns in the State are Kalát, Mastung, Bhág, Gandáwá, Dádhar, Turbat, and Panjgur.

The ruling chief of Las Bela has the title of Jám. Jám Mír Khán, the grandfather of the present chief, succeeded in 1840; Jám Ali Khán, his father, succeeded in 1889; and Jám Mír Kamál Khán, C.I.E., the present chief, succeeded in 1896. The area of the State is 7,132 square miles; population, 61,205 (1911 census); revenue varies from 3 to 4 lakhs; military force, 112 infantry, 10 cavalry, and 3 guns; military police force, 59 men. Before the British occupation the ruler of Las Bela was a feudatory of the Khán of Kalát, but in recent times the connection has almost entirely ceased. The State is under the control of the Political Agent in Kalát.

General.—The most numerous races in Balúchistán are the Brahú Pathan and Baloch, 554,800. The Brahuis occupy the centre of the country stretching through Chágai to meet the Baloch of Western Sanjrán and southwards to the Lásis and the Baloch of Makrán. The Pathans are chiefly contained within British and administered territory. The Baloch are distributed through the southern regions in the Marri and Bugti country, the Kachhi plain, the Nasirábád tahsil, the Dombki, Umráni, and Kahé country, and Makrán. The Lásis (27,800), are almost wholly confined to Las Béla, the term Lási being of modern invention. The other inhabitants are either scattered, as the Chuttás and Saiads, or are subject races and occupational groups such as the Jat cultivators of the Kachhi plain, the Dehwár cultivators of the uplands, the Darzádahs and Naqíbs of Makrán and the Ghuláms who are of servile origin. There are also indigenous Hindus (15,000) living under the protection of the tribes and carrying on the trade of the country.

Religion and Instruction.—The religion of the native population is either Mussulmán, in general of the Sunni sect, or Hindu. The Mussulmáns numbered (1911) 782,648; Hindus, 37,602; Christians, 5,085; Sikhs, 8,390; others, 978. At the close of 1919–20 there were 76 Government and aided and unaided schools in the province; 7 of these were for girls. Of the 3,684 pupils 605 were girls. Nearly half the pupils were Hindu children of men from Sind and the Panjab in trade or in Government service. Besides these there were 201 private schools with 2,826 pupils.

Production and Industry.—The country consists largely of barren mountains, deserts and stony plains; its climate is subject to the extremes of heat and cold, and the rainfall is uncertain and scanty. Here and there the mountains are tree-clad, and cultivation is carried on wherever water is found. An attempt is being made to bud the wild olive trees of the country with buds from cultivated European olives. If the experiment is successful, an olive-oil industry may be subsequently established. The agricultural products are wheat, barley, millet, lucerne, rice maize, and potatoes; while grapes, apricots, peaches, apples, and melons are grown in abundance. Panjgúr in Makrán is famous for its dates. Among wild animals are the markhór, urial (wild-sheep), Sind ibex, ravine-deer, bear, and panther, and the chief domestic animals are the camel, horses, oxen and cows, and donkeys.

Little is yet known of the mineralogy of the country. Iron and lead are found near Khuzdár; coal is worked at Khost on the Sindh-Pishin railway, and in the Sor hills near Quetta. Asbestos and chromite have been found in Zhob, and chromite also in the Quetta Pishin district. There are oil springs at Khattan in the Marri country, but these are not now worked. Sulphate of iron has been found in Kalát and sulphate of aluminium in Chagái. Salt is manufactured in Pishin, in the Zhob district, and in the Kalát State. Promising deposits of salt were discovered in 1917-18 in the Chagái district, development of which is under consideration. Local manufactures are unimportant. A few matchlocks and other weapons are made, and various kinds of ironwork for agricultural purposes. The nomad tribes make felts, rough blankets, and rugs. Brahúi women are famous for their needle-work. Leather-work and pottery are manufactured in Kachhi. There is a brewery as well as a government distillery for the manufacture of country spirit at Quetta, and also mills for grinding flour, pressing chaff, manufacturing patent coal-fuel, and ice. A museum at Quetta was opened in 1906. The Indian Staff College was opened at Quetta in 1907.

Commerce.—The land traffic with India passes either by railway or by the routes from Kalát and Las Bela to Sind, and through the Loralai district, to the Punjáb. The value of the trans-frontier imports (excluding purely transit trade between places in Balúchistán, and the trade by road between Karachi and Kalát and Las Bela) from Kalát and Las Bela into India in 1918-19 was Rs. 14,46,561, and of the exports from India to Kalát and Las Bela, Rs. 5,51,355. (This trans-frontier trade is regarded since April 1, 1919, as internal traffic, and statistics are discontinued.) The chief exports from the Province are fruit, drugs, fish, mats, and wool; imports consist of piece-goods, chiefly of Indian manufacture, metal ware, tea, sugar, and canned goods.

Over-sea trade is carried on through ports on the Makrán coast with India, the exports consisting of dates, matting and dried fish, and the imports chiefly of piece-goods and food grains. The greater part of this trade is with the Bombay Presidency.

The principal imports into Balúchistán from foreign countries, viz., Afghanistan and Persia, are fruit, ghee, wool, sheep, horses and ponies. Piece-goods in large quantities, indigo, tea, sugar, and metals are sent to these countries through Balúchistán.

Communications.—Good roads connect the more important centres in the directly administered places. There are 976 miles of metalled and partly metalled roads and 2,130 of unmetalled roads and paths.

The North-Western railway, which has the standard gauge of 5ft. 6in., enters Balúchistán near Jhatpat and crosses the Kachhi plain to Sibi, where it bifurcates, one branch going by Harnai and the other by Quetta, and reunites at Bostán, whence the line runs to Chaman. A line of railway to Nushki 82½ miles long, which cost about 7,000,000 rupees, was opened for traffic in 1905, and an extension of the railway line from Nushki up to Duzdap on the Persian border, and also a short line from Khanai to Hindubagh, a distance of about 45 miles, were completed in 1917.

There is a complete and frequent postal service in British and administered territory, extending to Kalat and through Duzdap to Seistan and Meshed.

A network of telegraph wires covers the north-eastern portion of the Province and extends to Kalat, and westwards viâ Nushki to Killá Robá where it connects with the Indo-European system, while a further line laid down in 1907 connects India with Persia and Europe, via Las Bela, Panjgur and Nok Kundi.

SIKKIM.

An Indian State in the Himálayas, bounded on the N. by Tibet, on the E. by the Tibetan district of Chumbí, and by Bhután, on the S. by the British district of Darjiling, and on the W. by Nepál. Extreme length from N. to S. 70 miles; extreme breadth, 50 miles; area, 2,818 square miles.

In March, 1890, a treaty was signed by the Viceroy of India and the Chinese representative, by which the British protectorate over Sikkim is recognised by China. The British Government has direct and exclusive control over the foreign relations. The present Maharájá is H. H. TASHI NAMGYAL, C.I.E., who succeeded on December 5, 1914. His Highness and the members of the Council carry on the administration, full powers having been granted to him in April, 1918.

Population in 1911, 87,920. The inhabitants are Bhutias, Lepchas and Nepalese, the last-named being now the most numerous. Principal towns are Gangtok, the capital, Rhenok, Pakyong, Rangpo, Lachen, and Lachung. The State religion is Buddhism, but the majority of the people are Hindu.

The gross revenue is about 37,000*l.* per year. The landlords exercise limited jurisdiction within their districts; important cases being referred to the Sikkim chief court.

Sikkim produces rice, Indian corn, and other millets, cardamom, oranges, apples, and woollen cloth. Fruit gardens are maintained by the State. There are extensive forests in the State and wide tracts of unoccupied waste. The principal trade route from Bengal to Tibet passes through Sikkim. Imports into Sikkim from, and exports from Sikkim to, India :—

ANDAMAN AND NICOBAR ISLANDS.

The Andaman Islands lie in the Bay of Bengal, 590 miles from the mouth of the Hugli, 120 miles from Cape Negrais in Burma, the nearest point on the mainland. Five large islands closely grouped together are called the Great Andaman, and to the south is the island of Little Andaman. There are some 200 islets, the two principal groups being the Andaman Archipelago and the Labyrinth Islands. The total area is 2,260 square miles. The Great Andaman group is about 219 miles long and, at the widest, 52 miles broad. The group, densely wooded, contains many valuable trees, the best known of which is the paduk or Andaman redwood (Pterocarpus dalbergioides). The islands are hilly, the highest point, Saddle Peak, being 2,402 feet, and Mount Harriet, 1,196 feet in height. The islands possess a number of harbours and safe anchorages, notably, Port Blair, Port Cornwallis, and Stewart Sound, the last being most favourably situated for forest trade. The climate is tropical, the rainfall irregular and often excessive. The aborigines, 1,317 (628 males and 689 females) in 1911, against 1,882 in 1901), live in small groups over the islands ; they are savages of a low Negrito type. The total population of the Andaman Islands in 1920 was 16,316 (14,297 males and 2,019 females). In 1918-19 the forest area, the result of convict and free labour, amounted to 11,84,864 rupees. The coconut, rubber (Hevea brasiliensis), Manila hemp (Musa textilis), and Bahamas aloe (Agave sisalana) are successfully cultivated. In 1920 there were 10,753 head of cattle. Wireless telegraphy with Burma was established in 1904. A mail steamer connects Port Blair with Calcutta, Rangoon, and Madras. The islands are used by the Government of India as a penal settlement for life and long-term convicts. The settlement possesses about 22,468 acres of cleared land and 83 square miles of reserved forest. There were, in 1920, 15,553 convicts (including 404 women) in the place, of whom some 1,211 were on ticket-of-leave in the settlement supporting themselves. Of the women, about half are on ticket-of-leave, and married convicts. The Andaman Islands are under the Government of India and the Officer in Charge is the Chief Commissioner. The Civil, Military and convict population of Port Blair in 1919 was 16,316.

The Nicobar Islands are situated to the South of the Andamans, 7 miles from Little Andaman. There are nineteen islands, seven uninhabited gross area, 635 square miles. The islands are usually divided into three groups Southern, Central and Northern, the chief islands in each being respectively Great Nicobar, Camorta with Nancowry, and Car Nicobar. There is a fine land-locked harbour between the islands of Camorta and Nancowry, known as Nancowry Harbour. The Nicobarese inhabitants, numbering 8,818 (4,818 males and 3,985 females) in 1911, are a variety of the Malay (more probably Talaing) race. They are known to have eagerly pursued the coconut trade for at least 1,500 years. English and Hindustani are understood in most villages. The coconut production is estimated at 15 million nuts per annum, of which some 5 million are sold by barter and exported. Small native craft and Chinese junks in the form of copra. The climate is tropical and, except, perhaps, at Car, unhealthy for Europeans. The Government is represented by a permanent agent and an assistant agent. The islands are attached to the Chief Commissionership of the Andamans and Nicobars.

LACCADIVE ISLANDS.

A group of 14 islands (9 inhabited), about 200 miles off the west or Malabar coast of the Madras Presidency. The northern portion is attached to the collectorate of South Kánara, the remainder to the administrative district of Malabar. Population 10,600, nearly all Muhammadans. The language is either Malayalam or Mahl. The staple product is the fibre known as coir.

THE STRAITS SETTLEMENTS.

Constitution and Government.

THE Straits Settlements, a Crown colony, which comprises Singapore, Penang (including Province Wellesley and the Dindings), and Malacca, were transferred from the control of the Indian Government to that of the Secretary of State for the Colonies on April 1, 1867. The Cocos Islands were placed under the Straits Settlements in 1886, and Christmas Island in 1889. Christmas Island was annexed to the Settlement of Singapore in 1900, and the Cocos Islands in 1903.

By a proclamation dated October 30, 1906, the boundaries of the Colony were extended so as to include the Colony of Labuan, with effect from January 1, 1907.

The administration of the colony is in the hands of a Governor, aided by an Executive Council, composed of the General Officer commanding the troops, the Colonial Secretary, the Resident Councillor of Penang, the Attorney-General, the Treasurer, and the Colonial Engineer. There is a Legislative Council, presided over by the Governor, of ten official and eight unofficial members, nominated by the Crown.

Governor.—Sir Laurence N. Guillemard, K.C.B., K.C.M.G.

The governor is also High Commissioner for the Federated Malay States of Perak, Sēlangor, Negri Sembilan, and Pahang, High Commissioner of Brunei, and British Agent for North Borneo and Sarawak.

There are municipal bodies in each settlement, the members of which are appointed by the Governor.

Area and Population.

Singapore is an island about twenty-seven miles long by fourteen wide, with an area of 217 square miles, separated from the southern extremity of the Malay Peninsula by a strait three-quarters of a mile in width. A number of small islands adjacent form part of the settlement. The seat of government is the town of Singapore, at the south-eastern point of the island. Penang is an island of 108 square miles, off the west coast of the Malayan Peninsula, and at the northern entrance of the Straits of Malacca. On the opposite shore of the mainland, distant from two to ten miles, is Province Wellesley, a strip of territory forming part of the Settlement of Penang, averaging eight miles in width, and extending forty-five miles along the coast, including ten miles of territory to the south of the Krian; total area 280 square miles. The chief town of Penang is George Town. Off the coast of Perak is the small island of Pangkor, which, together with a strip of the mainland, is British territory, the whole being known as the Dindings. Malacca is on the western coast of the peninsula between Singapore and Penang—about 110 miles from the former and 240 from the latter; it is a strip of territory 42 miles in length, and from eight to 24 miles in breadth.

The population, according to the census of 1911, was 714,069 (467,374 males and 246,695 females). The estimated population for 1918 and 1919, inclusive of the military, is as follows:—

In 1918 there were in the Settlements : about 274,574 Malays ; 432,700 Chinese, and 94,213 natives of India.

The births and deaths in 1918 were as follows :—

—	Singapore	Penang	Dindings	Province Wellesley	Malacca	Labuan	Total
Births .	9,585	4,110	349	4,109	5,300	249	23,702
Deaths .	15,372	6,685	730	5,676	7,633	198	36,294

Totals 1919 : births, 25,638 ; deaths, 27,957.

In 1919 there were 70,912 immigrants from China, and 101,433 from Southern India.

Education.

Instruction, not yet compulsory throughout the colony, is partly supported by the Government in the case of grant-in-aid schools, and wholly in the case of Government English and Government Vernacular Schools. In Malacca, Penang Island outside Municipal limits, and Province Wellesley there is compulsory attendance of Malay boys within a certain radius of a Malay vernacular school, where free instruction is given in their own language.

The numbers of schools and pupils were as follows in 1918 :—

—	Schools	Enrolment	Attendance
Government English schools . . . . .	8	3,012	2,800
Grant-in-aid English schools . . . . .	35	13,516	12,511
Government vernacular boys' and girls' schools . . . . .	192	12,259	10,821
Grant-in-aid vernacular boys' schools . . . . .	11	470	381
Total . . . . .	246	29,257	26,513

The expenditure on the schools in 1919 was 70,446*l*.

There is a training college for Malay teachers in Malacca.

Justice and Crime.

The law in force is contained in local ordinances and in such English and Indian Acts and Orders in Council as are applicable to the colony. The Indian Penal Code, with slight alterations, has been adopted, and there is a Civil Procedure Code based on the English Judicature Acts. There is a Supreme Court which holds assizes at Singapore and Penang every two months, and quarterly at Malacca, civil sittings monthly at Singapore and Penang, and once a quarter at Malacca.

There are, besides, district courts, police courts and marine magistracy courts. Convictions before the Superior Courts in 1918 were 604 ; before the other courts, 36,715 persons. Police force, 2,727 in 1919. Criminal prisoners admitted to the gaols in 1919, 4,235.

Finance.

Public revenue and expenditure for six years (1 dollar = 2*s*. 4*d*.) :—

1916	2,021,381	1,288,741	1919	3,979,321	4,071,811

The leading items of revenue for 1919 were—licences, excise, and internal revenue not otherwise classified, 2,601,913*l.*; posts and telegraphs, 127,643*l.*; fees of court or office, payments for specific services, and reimbursements in aid, 85,948*l.*; rents of Government property, 144,755*l.*; interest, 160,318*l.*; land sales, 526,547*l.*; and of expenditure—military expenditure, 509,796*l.*; marine, 53,108*l.*; police, 140,978*l.*; legal, 45,072*l.*; hospitals and dispensaries, 91,574*l.*; medical, 33,403*l.*; education, 44,972*l.*; post office, 79,101*l.*; Government monopolies, 56,561*l.*; public works, 294,076*l.*; pensions, 73,574*l.*; war expenditure, 171,080*l.*

The total assets of the colony, December 31, 1919, amounted to 7,388,505*l.*, and liabilities 2,527,386*l.* The debt on December 31, 1919, amounted to 6,913,352*l.*, borrowed for public works; and 7,621,558*l.* war loan.

Commerce.

The Straits ports are free from customs duties, and their trade, centred at Singapore, is a transit trade. Excise duties are levied on wines, petroleum, and tobacco. The chief exports comprise tin, pepper, nutmegs, mace, sago, tapioca, buffalo hides and horns, rattans, gutta-percha, rubber, gambier, gum, copra. The cultivation of rice is giving place to rubber and coconuts.

Imports and exports for six years (inclusive of treasure and inclusive of trade with the Federated Malay States), including the trade of Labuan and Christmas Island :—

There may be said to be three classes of trade—passing, transit, actual; passing trade being goods in vessels merely passing through Singapore for China, &c.; transit trade goods changing bottom at Singapore, or landed and stored awaiting re-shipment. The two classes of trade are not included in the import and export statistics. Actual trade may be defined as goods brought for sale into Singapore and purchased there, either for consumption or for sale to other places whither they are said to be exported. The trade is a transit trade in the sense only that what is imported is exported without undergoing any process of manufacture. Exchange fluctuations affect the value of past statistical results, in times of low exchange the dollar value of goods having their origin in gold countries being enhanced; the same probably holding good, to a less extent, the case of produce exported, but the dollar value having been fixed early in 1906 at 2s. 4d., this is the rate adopted since.

The following figures are taken from the British Board of Trade Returns for the imports including produce from Borneo, Sarawak, and other eastern places transhipped at Singapore, which is thus entered as the place of export:—

The principal imports into the United Kingdom in 1919, were tin, 4,750,638*l.*; rubber, 7,107,882*l.*; sago and sago meal and flour, 1,320,542*l.*; Cassava powder and tapioca, 1,395,619*l.*; coconut oil, unrefined, 277,932*l.*; fruit, canned or bottled, 478,486*l.*; copra, 1,808,867*l.*; gutta percha, 697,173*l.*; pepper, 1,236,973*l.*; hides, raw, 214,991*l.*; gambier, 282,144*l.*. The principal exports from the United Kingdom were:—cottons and cotton yarn, 2,612,663*l.*; iron and iron and steel manufactures, 1,011,247*l.*; machinery, 389,158*l.*; soap, 95,437*l.*; tobacco, 133,607*l.*; spirits, 67,920*l.*

Shipping and Navigation.

The total tonnage of merchant vessels entered and cleared at the ports of the Colony during 1919, exclusive of native craft, was 18,885,183 tons.

including British, 10,081,120 tons; Japanese, 4,102,800 tons; Dutch, 2,348,999 tons. The number of native and small craft entered and cleared was 63,770, with a tonnage of 2,566,091 tons.

Communications.

There is a railway from Singapore to Woodlands on the Johore Straits, communication between Woodlands and Johore being maintained by steam ferries. The Federated Malay States Railway extends from Parit Buntar in Krian to Kuala Prai in Province Wellesley, whence are steam ferries to Penang. There is a railway from Malacca to Tampin in the Negri Sembilan. All the railways have a gauge of one metre, and connect with the Federated Malay States Railway system, a continuation of which through Johore was opened in 1909. It is proposed to connect Singapore with the mainland by the construction of a causeway, carrying two lines of railway and a 20-foot roadway, across the Johore Straits. There are electric tramway systems in Singapore and Penang. There are cables connecting Singapore, Malacca and Penang, and land lines from Singapore to Kuala Lumpur and Penang, and from Malacca to Tampin.

In 1919, 13,182,061 letters and other articles of correspondence were posted, and 9,355,950 delivered. The number of letters sent to China in 1918 in clubbed packets was 1,011,228. The parcels posted (1918) numbered 105,347, those delivered 76,561.

From Labuan there are telegraph cables connecting with Hong Kong, Singapore, Sandakan, and the Continent.

Money, Weights, and Measures.

There are thirteen banks with establishments in the Colony. The amount of deposits in the Government Savings Bank on December 31, 1919, was 1,488,261 dollars, equivalent to 173,631*l*.

The dollar, value 2*s*. 4*d*., is the standard coin of the Colony, and with the half-dollar and the British sovereign is legal tender for the payment of any amount. Subsidiary silver coins are 20, 10, and 5 cent pieces; copper coins are cents, half-cents, and quarter-cents. On December 31, 1916, Government currency notes to the value of 68,394,140 dollars (7,979,316*l*.) were in circulation in the Colony and Federated Malay States.

The measure of length in use in the Settlements is the English yard, with its divisions and multiples, and land is measured by the English acre. The native terms are, however, still in use. Commercial weights are :—

1 Kati	= 16 Tahil=	1½ lb. avoirdupois.
1 Pikul	= 100 Kati =	133½ lbs. „
1 Koyan	= 40 Pikul=	5,333½ „ „

The kati of 1½ lbs. is known as the Chinese kati. Another weight, known as the Malay kati, and still in partial use in Penang, is equal to the weight of 24 Spanish dollars, or 9,984 grains. This gives 142·628 lbs. as the weight of the pikul, and 5,705·143 lbs. as the weight of the koyan. The measures of capacity throughout the Colony are the gantang or gallon, and chupak or quart.

The Cocos or Keeling Islands, a group of about twenty small coral islands, lie about 700 miles S.W. of Sumatra and 1,200 miles S.W. of Singapore. The estimated population in 1918 was 832. (Census population, 1911, 749).

Christmas Island is 200 miles S.W. of Java and 700 miles E. of the Cocos Islands. It is 9 miles long and about 9 miles wide. The estimated population in 1918 was 2,180, most of the inhabitants, except the District Officer and his staff, being employed directly or indirectly by the company which works the enormous phosphate deposits which the island contains. Revenue, 1919, 3,051*l.*; expenditure, 1,490*l.* Imports, 1917, 26,581*l.*, chiefly machinery, tools, railway material, locomotives, and lorries; exports, 187,541*l.* The sole source of wealth of the Island is phosphate of lime; 53,370 tons were exported in 1918, and 68,621 tons in 1919. Tonnage entered and cleared, 1919, 81,197 tons; 1918, 71,926 tons. There is a railway in the island.

The island of Labuan lies about 6 miles from the north-west coast of Borneo, and since January 1, 1907, it has been incorporated with Singapore. Area 28½ sq. miles; the estimated population in 1918 was 6,848, mostly Malays from Borneo, with some Chinese traders and about 30 Europeans. Capital, Victoria, which has about 1,500 inhabitants. Revenue, 1919, 4,469*l.* expenditure, 9,558*l.* Shipping entered and cleared, 1919, 141,686 tons.

THE FEDERATED MALAY STATES.

The Federated Malay States of Perak, Selangor, Negri Sembilan, and Pahang, which occupy a large portion of the Malay Peninsula, are under British protection. The officer administering the Government of the Straits Settlements is ex officio H.M.'s High Commissioner for these States and the other Malay States in the British sphere.

High Commissioner.—Sir Lawrence Nunns Guillemard, K.C.B., K.C.M.G.
Chief Secretary to Government.—

The following are the Rulers and Residents of the four States:—

Ruler of Perak.—H. H. Sultan Iskandar Shah. Resident.—W. G. Maxwell, C.M.G.

Ruler of Selangor.—H. H. Sultan Sir Ala'u'd-din Sulaiman Shah K.C.M.G. Resident.—A. H. Lemon, C.M.G.

Ruler of Negri Sembilan.—H. H. Yang di-pertuan Besar Sir Muhammad K.C.M.G. Resident.—A. H. Lemon, C.M.G. (J. R. O. Aldworth, acting.)

Ruler of Pahang.—H. H. Sultan Abdullah. Resident.—C. W. C. Parr O.B.E.

In Perak, Selangor, and Sungai Ujong, which State was subsequently amalgamated with other States to form the Confederation of Negri Sembilan, Residents were appointed in 1874, with a staff of European officer whose duty was to aid the native rulers by advice, and to exercise executive functions. The supreme authority in each State is vested in the State Council, consisting of the Sultan, the Resident, the Secretary to the Resident, and some of the principal Malay chiefs and Chinese merchants. The Residents are under the control of the Chief Secretary and the High Commissioner.

In 1883 the relations of the Straits Settlements with the small Native States on the frontier of Malacca were consolidated. These States were confederated in 1889, under the name of Negri Sembilan (signifying Nine States). In January, 1895, Sungai Ujong (including Jelebu, which had been administered by a Collector and Magistrate under the Resident of Sungai Ujong since 1888) and Negri Sembilan were placed under one Resident; and in July, 1895, a treaty was signed by which the administrations were amalgamated. The new federation, which retains the ancient name of Negri Sembilan, comprises the States of Sungai Ujong, Johol, Jelebu, Rembau and five smaller States. In 1887, by agreement with the Raja of Pahang, the control of his foreign relations, &c., was surrendered to the British Government. This was followed by a further agreement in 1888 with the Raja (now styled Sultan), under which Pahang was taken under British protection, on the same terms as the Protected Native States on the west coast of the peninsula. Pahang is situated on the east coast, within 200 miles by sea from Singapore. In July, 1896, the treaty between the four Protected Native States, Perak, Selangor, Pahang, and Negri Sembilan, and the British Government came into force by which the administrative federation of these States under a Chief Secretary is provided for, and the States agree to furnish a contingent of troops for service in the Colony should His Majesty's Government be at war with any foreign nation.

The areas of these States, in square miles, are approximately:—Perak, 7,800 sq. miles; Selangor, 3,156 sq. miles; Negri Sembilan, 2,550 sq. miles; Pahang, 14,000 square miles; total, 27,506 sq. miles. Perak, by agreement with Siam, has been extended by about 1,000 square miles (included in the figures given above).

Population, census 1911: Perak, 494,057 (344,238 males and 149,819 females); Selangor, 294,035 (220,939 males and 73,096 females); Negri Sembilan, 130,199 (87,651 males and 42,548 females); Pahang, 118,708 (72,234 males and 46,474 females); total 1,036,999, (725,062 males, and 311,937 females). The population contained 420,840 Malays, 433,244 Chinese, 172,465 natives of India, 3,284 Europeans and Americans, and 2,649 Eurasians. The preponderance of males over females is due to the number of Chinese immigrants. Estimated population, 1919, 1,315,700. The largest town in the States is Kuala Lumpur (in Selangor) with about 60,000 inhabitants. Births, 1919, 32,335; deaths, 38,645.

The police force, with European officers, consists of an Indian and a Malay contingent. In 1919 there were 93 European officers, the Indian contingent numbered 279 non-commissioned officers and 1,554 constables, and the Malay contingent numbered 285 non-commissioned officers and 1,565 constables; total, 4,677 officers and men. There is also a detective branch, in charge of Europeans, consisting of Chinese, Tamils, Malays, &c. Finger-print registration of all criminals in the Malayan Peninsula is carried out under the direction of a Federated Malay States police officer stationed in Kuala Lumpur.

In Perak, Selangor, Negri Sembilan, and Pahang, in 1919, there were a number of English schools maintained or assisted by Government, with an average enrolment of 6,606 boys and 1,787 girls, and an average attendance of 6,143 and 1,651 respectively, and 390 (335 for boys and 55 for girls) Malay Vernacular schools, with an average enrolment of 20,261 scholars, and an average attendance of 16,851. The total number of schools (1919) was 533 with an average attendance of 27,323. There are several Chinese schools, but they are not under the control or supervision of the Education Department. Expenditure on education (excluding buildings) in 1919, 91,841*l*.

The laws in force in each State of the Federation are contained in enactments passed by the State Councils, up to December, 1909, and from that date, where more than one State is affected, by the Federal Council.

This Council consists of the High Commissioner as President, the Chief Secretary, the Sultans of Perak, Selangor, and Pahang, the Yang di per Tua Besar of Negri Sembilan, the four British Residents, the Legal Adviser, and five unofficial members, and in addition to legislation deals with the annual estimates of revenue and expenditure. All legislative enactments are submitted to the High Commissioner and the Secretary of State for the Colonies. The courts in the States are:—(1) The Supreme Court, comprising the Court of Judicial Commissioner and the Court of Appeal. (2) The Court of Magistrate of the first class. (3) The Court of a Magistrate of the second class. (4) The Court of a Kathi and the Court of Assistant Kathi. (5) The Court of a Penghulu. The Court of Appeal consists of two or more Judicial Commissioners, the chief Judicial Commissioner being President. There is a final appeal in civil matters to the Privy Council.

The number of cases of murder, homicide, robbery, &c., reported in 1917 was 729, discovered 226; in 1918, reported 821, discovered 258. The number of prisoners in gaol on December 31, 1919, was 1,602.

Efficient Government hospitals are established in all districts, with separate hospitals for Europeans. A very complete Institute of Medical Research has been established at Kuala Lumpur.

The revenue of the States in 1919 was 8,415,758*l.*, war tax, 562,710*l.* and the expenditure, 8,245,645*l.* (1918, revenue, 7,985,700*l.*; expenditure 5,283,473*l.*).

Leading items of revenue in 1919 were—licences, 2,090,861*l.*; customs 2,102,889*l.*; railways, 1,745,037*l.*; land revenue, 355,953*l.*; fees of court and office, 296,679*l.*; interest, 595,650*l.*; municipal, 242,175*l.*; war tax, 562,710*l.* and of expenditure—railways, 3,082,546*l.*; public works, 1,009,113*l.*; miscellaneous service (including war contribution), 1,894,230*l.*; persons' emoluments, 993,577*l.*, other charges, 962,500*l.*; interest on advances 105,000*l.* Public debt, 1919, 1,750,000*l.*

The staple cultivations of the Federated Malay States are coconuts, rice, rubber, sugar, tapioca, pepper, gambier, and nipah palms. The chief industrial enterprises are the cultivation of rubber, and the mining of tin. The Krian irrigation works in Perak irrigate 70,000 acres of rice (paid land and supply drinking water to the district. The canal is 21 miles long with 16½ miles of branches and 188½ miles of distributory channels. The total area of rubber estates of over 100 acres at the end of 1919 was 499,500 acres (78,284 tons were exported in 1918 and 106,453 tons in 1919), and coconut estates, 54,800 acres (the total acreage under coconuts was 182,000 acres). The forests produce many excellent timbers, besides gutta-percha, oils, resins, and canes. In 1919 the total quantity of timber of all kinds taken from the forests, on which payment was made, was 955,960 tons, in addition to a large quantity used free of royalty by the native Malay population and the tin miners. The gross revenue of the Forest Department for 1919 amounted to 213,829*l.* The duty on the export of tin forms the largest item of the revenue of the States on the West Coast. In 1919 the tin export amounted to 36,938 tons, and in 1918 to 37,370 tons. Duty paid in 1919, customs, 1,160,170*l.*, war-tax, 47,939*l.* In 1919, 16,402 ounces of gold, and in 1918, 18,309 ounces were produced in the Federated Malay States. Besides gold and tin, many minerals are found, including lead, iron, copper, mercury, arsenic, manganese, wolfram (exports 1919, 430 tons), scheelite (exports 1919, 225 tons), plumbago, silver, zinc, and coal, but with the exception of coal, they have not so far been discovered in workable form. The exports of tungsten ore in 1919 were 655 tons. The labour force engaged in mining at the end of 1919 was 113,107.

The trade (excluding bullion and specie) was as follows in 1919 and 1918:—

—	Perak	Selangor	Negri Sembilan	Pahang	Total 1919	Total 1918
	£	£	£	£	£	£
Imports .	5,118,277	6,500,221	1,582,796	670,118	13,866,412	8,720,921
Exports .	14,552,210	11,765,624	4,933,756	1,314,173	32,565,762	26,024,400

Shipping, 1919 (excluding native craft): entered, 3,545 vessels, 1,444,899 tons; cleared, 3,538 vessels, 1,444,124 tons. Native craft, entered and cleared, 13,925 vessels, 372,117 tons.

There were in the 4 States in 1919, 2,362 miles of metalled cart roads and 1,791 miles of bridle roads and paths. There are also 700 miles of paths maintained by the Forest Department. The Government has made, purchased, leased, or is making, the railway systems of the whole peninsula south of the Siamese boundary, including the railway on Singapore Island. When the system is complete, there will be a main trunk line extending throughout the peninsula, diverging at Gemas in Negri Sembilan into West Coast and East Coast lines, and linking up with the Southern Siamese railway system on the Perlis-Siam and Kelantan-Siam boundaries respectively. The two Siamese lines converge at Ootapao, in Singora, and hence a single line continues north to Bangkok. On the West Coast, the line is now open for traffic from Singapore as far as Padang Besar (Perlis Siamese boundary), a distance of 596 miles, and on the East Coast it is open from Singapore as far as Padang Tungka (in Pahang). A section in Kelantan from Tumpat to Tanah Merah (32 miles), and one from Pasir Mas to Golok (Kelantan-Siam boundary) (12 miles) are also open for traffic. The section in Johore, extending from Johore Bahru to Gemas (120 miles), is leased from the Johore Government. The line is of metre gauge. The total mileage open for traffic, including leased lines, was 1,003 miles in 1919. The lines under construction (1920) were about 72 miles, besides 2 miles of Hill Railway, in Penang, and doubling of lines in Singapore Island (16 miles) and in neighbourhood of Kuala Lumpur (37 miles). The construction of a causeway carrying a double line of railway and a roadway is now proceeding (1920), connecting the island of Singapore with the mainland across the Johore Straits. An extensive scheme of deep-water wharves at Prai, on the mainland, opposite Penang, is also in progress.

There are (1919) 96 post offices and 39 other places for postal business. In 1919, 24,025,009 postal packets (registered letters, 707,639, and parcels, 171,718) were received and delivered. In 1919 there were 2,372 miles of telegraph and telephone line (12,000 miles of wire) under the Post Office department. The net revenue collected by the department amounted to 151,587*l.*, and expenditure to 145,512*l.*, Savings Banks, 10,270 depositors, and 106,061*l.* deposits on December 31, 1919. The current money consists of Straits Settlements dollars with subsidiary silver and copper coins. In February, 1906, the value of the dollar was fixed at 2s. 4d. or 60 dollars = 7l. Currency notes and bank notes also circulate and the sovereign is legal tender for any amount at the above rate. Weight and measures (as well as currency) are as in the Straits Settlements.

THE MALAY STATES NOT INCLUDED IN THE FEDERATION.

The Malay States not included in the Federation are five in number, namely, Johore, Kedah, Perlis, Kelantan, and Trengganu.

The relations of Johore with Great Britain are defined by a treaty dated December 11, 1885; and, by an amendment to this treaty made on May 12, 1914, the Sultan agreed to accept, and to act upon the advice of, a British officer called the General Adviser. The Sultan is assisted in the administration of the State by an Executive Council, and by a Legislative Council consisting of official and unofficial members.

The rights of suzerainty, protection, administration and control of the other four States were transferred from Siam to Great Britain by the Anglo-Siamese treaty of March 10, 1909. In all four States the Rulers are assisted in the administration by State Councils. In Kedah, Perlis, and Kelantan the Ruler has the assistance of a British Adviser appointed by the British Government.

In these States the currency, weights and measures are the same as in the Straits Settlements and the Federated Malay States. Their trade is almost entirely carried on with the Straits Settlements.

The religion of the Malays is Muhammadanism.

Johore (area 7,500 square miles, population in 1911, 180,417, of whom 102,219 were Malays, 63,405 Chinese, and 5,659 Indians) lies at the southern extremity of the Malay Peninsula. Births registered (1919), 9,320; deaths, 9,807. There were (1919) 3 English schools and 71 vernacular schools, and an English College (with 75 boys in residence).

Revenue (1919), 11,052,777 dollars; expenditure, 8,228,862. The public debt of 8 millions was extinguished in 1918. Imports (1919), 29,524,700 dollars (foodstuffs, drinks, and narcotics, 20,905,117; raw materials, 2,699,281; manufactured articles, 5,147,919; coin and bullion 52,561 dollars). Exports 71,279,930 dollars (rubber, 58,208,400; gambier, 1,719,200; pepper, 385,775; copra, 4,834,699; areca-nuts, 3,817,700; tin, 2,638,600; tapioca, 2,322,228; forest produce, 876,100 dollars). Rubber output, 1919, 27,890 tons.

The military force of the State consists of 400 Malay infantry, 100 Pathan artillery, and nearly 100 bandsmen. In addition there is a Volunteer Corps of Europeans and Malays (400). The Police force, which is armed, numbers 23 officers and 701 rank and file (1919).

During 1919, 20 additional miles of road were opened to traffic, and 44 miles were under construction. At the beginning of 1920 over 400 miles of metalled road had been constructed. The railway from Penang to Singapore traverses Johore for a distance of 120 miles. The Johore section has been leased to the Federated Malay States Government for a term of years. Rubber estates are situated on either side along practically the whole length, and thus, with the help of roads and navigable rivers, good communication is available. A light railway runs from Muar for 14 miles southwards through Malay holdings, which are thus afforded an easy outlet for their products.

An efficient medical service and eight public hospitals are maintained by the Government.

The Postal revenue (1919) was 61,381 dollars. Letters, parcels, &c., received, 1,828,137; despatched, 920,549.

Ruler.—His Highness Sultan Ibrahim, G.C.M.G., K.B.E.

General Adviser.—J. F. Owen (Acting).

Kedah, on the west coast of the Peninsula, and north of Province Wellesley and Perak, has an area of 3,800 square miles. The population (census 1911) is 245,986, of whom 195,411 were Malays, 33,746 Chinese, 8,135 Siamese, and 6,074 Indians. The estimated population in 1920 was 325,000. The capital is Alor Star on the Kedah River, about sixty miles from Penang by sea. Owing to the Sultan's ill-health, the head of the Government is the Regent. There are (1920) 39 Europeans in the Government service principally in the Public Works, Survey and Police Departments. The police force distributed in 60 stations, had a strength (December, 1920) of 698 men (principally Malays). There were at the end of 1920, 63 Government schools (about 6,000 pupils), 10 telegraph offices, and 17 post offices. A telephone system extends throughout the State, the mileage in 1920 being 1,144. The railway connecting the Federated Malay States and Siam passes through the State. A metalled road (39 miles) connects Alor Star with Perlis, and with Singora frontier (Siam), and a metalled road (48 miles) connects it with Province Wellesley. Another metalled road (45 miles) connects Baling with Upper Perak in one direction and with Province Wellesley in the opposite direction. 160 miles were maintained in 1920. The revenue of the State for the year 1920 (Muhammadar 1338) was 6,650,000 dollars, including Chandu monopolies, 2,977,000; export duties, 56,000; lands, 819,000; and liquors, 284,000 dollars; and the expenditure, 4,305,000 dollars. The principal produce of North Kedah is rice. There are rubber (output, 1920, 8,655 tons), coconut, and tapioca estates in South Kedah. About four or five steamers ply daily between Penang and the various ports of Kedah. Kedah-Penang trade (1919): imports, 4,194,810 dollars; exports, 6,980,384 dollars. Postal and telegraph revenue, 1920, 63,378 dollars; expenditure, 99,116 dollars. Postal articles dealt with, 1,649,000.

Ruler.—H.H. Sultan Sir Abdul Hamid Halim Shah, K.C.M.G. (succeeded in 1881).

Regent.—H.H. Tunku Ibrahim.

British Adviser.—M. S. H. McArthur.

Perlis, on the west coast of the Peninsula and north of Kedah, has an area of about 316 square miles and a population (1911 census) of 32,746. Malays numbered 29,499; the population, Chinese 1,627, and Siamese 1,338. Police force, 1919, 58 n.c.o.'s men. Fourteen schools were maintained in 1920; average attendance, 1,100. The principal products are rice, tin, and coconuts. There are tin (output of tin-ore in 1919, 113 tons) and guano deposits. There are 17 miles of metalled, 11 miles of gravelled road, and miles of earth road in the State. The revenue for 1920 was 443,442 dollars, and expenditure 277,994 dollars. Public debt, 1920, 495,394 dollars.

Ruler.—H.H. Syed Alwi.

British Adviser.—E. W. N. Wyatt (Acting).

Kelantan, on the east coast of the Peninsula, has an area estimated at 6,870 square miles and a population (1911 census) of 286,751, including 5,355 Siamese and 9 Chinese. Kota Bharu, the capital, has a population of about 12,000. There are Government elementary schools in the State. The High Court, the Central Court, the Small Court are at Kota Bharu, and there are District Courts at Kuala Krai, Kuala Puteh, Pasir Mas, and Tumpat respectively. The revenue of the State in 1919 amounted to 1,141,444 dollars (licences, excise, &c., 407,203 dollars; customs, 340,875 dollars; revenue, 266,137 dollars), and the expenditure to 1,065,012 dollars. Public debt (1919) 2,683,948 dollars.

The chief industry is agriculture. About 843,338 acres were under cultivation in 1919. Chief products: rice (152,739 acres), coconuts (60,087 acres), betel-nuts, rubber (35,346 acres), resin and gharu, rattan, bamboo, pepper, tapioca, sugar-cane, and maize. A large part of the State is covered with jungle comprising numerous kinds of serviceable timber. The State supports cattle (estimated at 120,000 head), buffaloes (25,000), sheep, goats, and poultry. The almost unworked mineral resources believed to comprise gold, galena, pyrites, and tin. Large planting and mining concessions are held by British companies. The principal manufacturing industries are silk-weaving, boat-building, and brick-making. In 1919, total exports, 5,467,000 dollars; total imports, 3,876,679 dollars (1918, 8,615,079 and 2,582,408 dollars respectively). Chief exports, 1919: Cattle, sheep, and goats, 187,993 dollars; betel-nuts, 157,797 dollars; fish, 222,131 dollars; copra, 1,093,666 dollars; Para rubber, 3,577,000 dollars. Chief imports, 1919: cattle, 24,860 dollars; fish, 25,715 dollars; rice, 3,000 dollars; wheat and flour, 46,289 dollars; milk, 51,991 dollars; sugar, 122,288 dollars; tobacco, 140,704 dollars; salt, 18,804 dollars; gambier, 30,089 dollars; petroleum, 193,000 dollars; cotton goods, 953,805 dollars; silk goods, 38,503 dollars; timber, 36,972 dollars; cement, 54,368 dollars; machinery and metal goods, 876,231 dollars.

Tonnage of steamships inwards and outwards, 1919, 88,616 tons (73,577 tons in 1918). Over 5,905 are registered. There is regular steamship communication between Bangkok and Singapore. Roads (except for the Kota Bharu-Pasir Puteh road, 26 miles) extend only a few miles from the capital; communication inland is by the rivers. There is bi-weekly connection by rail and steamer between Tumpat and Kuala Lebir 60 miles river. Kota Bharu is in direct telegraphic communication with Bangkok and Penang and possesses a telephone service. There were (1919) 4 post offices and 2 sub-post offices in the State.

Trengganu, with an area of about 6,000 square miles, and a population, at the census, 1911, of 154,037, lies on the east coast between Pahang and Kelantan. The capital is Kuala Trengganu, with a population of 14,000. There are four Malay schools and one Chinese school. Trengganu was the last British possession to tolerate slavery for debt. The practice has been abolished by an enactment passed in 1919. Police force, 1919, about 240. There are about 11 miles of metalled cart road at the capital, and a telephone exchange, but no trunk roads, railways, or telegraphs. Communication with the interior is by rivers, and good native paths. Steamers connect regularly with Singapore and Bangkok, and locally-built motor-boats maintain passenger services along the Trengganu coast. The industries are similar to those of Kelantan, and the country is of the same general character. Revenue, 1919, 762,455 dollars; chiefly from farms, 94,133 dollars; chandu, 337,944 dollars; export duty on tin and wolfram, 93,096 dollars; other export duties, 141,911 dollars. Expenditure 1919, 756,977 dollars. Debt, 1919, 15,000 dollars. The total imports in 1919 were 1,911,014 dollars, and the total exports about 3,816,670 dollars. Chief exports, 1919: dried fish, 1,044,966 dollars; tin ore, 828,966 dollars; copra, 455,322 dollars; black pepper, 185,873 dollars; wolfram ore, 611,670 dollars. Chief imports: Rice, 624,463 dollars; cotton piece goods, 419,340 dollars; tobacco, 106,723 dollars; petroleum 120,054 dollars; sugar, 45,582 dollars. The above figures relate to trade with Singapore only.

Ruler.—H.H. Sultan Muhammad bin Zenalabidin. He is assisted by a State Council on the Johore model.

The revenue of the State for the year 1920 (Muhammadan year 1340) including Chandu monopolies, 2,977,000; export duty, 254,000 dollars; and the expenditure, 4,305,000 dollars. The produce of North Kedah is rice. There are rubber (output about four or five hundred tons) and tapioca estates in South Kedah. About four or five miles of metalled road connects the various ports of Kedah. Kedah-Penang road, 44.5 miles; exports, 6,980,384 dollars. Postal and telegraph revenue, 44,500 dollars; expenditure, 99,116 dollars. Postal articles dealt with, 1,116,000.

Ruler—Raja Hamid Halim Shah, K.C.M.G. (succeeded in 1881).

Resident—M. S. H. McArthur.

Location—on the west coast of the Peninsula and north of Kedah, has an area of about 32,746. Malays numbered 29,497 of the population (1911 census), and Siamese 1,338. Police force, 1919, 58 n.o.s. and 1,100. The principal crops are rice, coconuts, and tin (output of tin ore in 1919, 113 tons). There are 17 miles of metalled, 11 miles of gravelled road, and 21 miles of unmetalled road in the State. The revenue for 1920 was 443,442 dollars, and the expenditure, 495,394 dollars.

Ruler—Raja Awi.
Resident—K. W. N. Wyatt (Acting).

Location—on the east coast of the Peninsula, has an area estimated at 5,870 square miles and a population (1911 census) of 266,751, including 5,355 Siamese and 9,844 Malays. The capital, has a population of about 12,000. There are 16 primary schools in the State. The High Court, the Central Court, and the District Courts are at Kota Bharu, and there are District Courts at Kuala Krai, Pasir Tuar, and Tumpat respectively. The revenue of the State in 1919 amounted to 407,293 dollars; customs, 340,875 dollars; land revenue, 1,065,012 dollars. Public debt (1919) 1,065,012 dollars.

The principal industry is agriculture. About 343,235 acres were under cultivation in 1919. The products are rice (1,027,732 acres), coconuts (60,087 acres), betel-nuts, rubber, and gambier, rattan, bamboo, pepper, tapioca, sugar-cane, and maize. The State is covered with jungle comprising numerous kinds of trees. The State supports cattle (estimated at 120,000 head), buffaloes, sheep, goats, and poultry. The almost unworked mineral resources are iron, coal, and tin. Large planting and mining concessions are held by British companies. The principal manufacturing industries are rubber, tin, and brick-making. In 1919, total exports, 5,467,424 dollars (1918, 3,615,079 and 2,551,406 dollars respectively). The exports, 1919: Cattle, sheep, and goats, 157,225 dollars; betel-nuts, 1,093,856 dollars; copra, 1,093,856 dollars; Para rubber, 3,577,127 dollars; tin, 24,560 dollars; fish, 25,715 dollars; rice, 3,691 dollars; gambier, 45,259 dollars; milk, 31,201 dollars; sugar, 122,288 dollars; oil, 15,944 dollars; gambier, 30,689 dollars; petroleum, 123,344 dollars; machinery and metal goods, 87,231 dollars.

Imports, 1919: 88,016 tons (73,577 tons in 1918). There is regular steamship communication with Singapore. Roads (except for the Kota Bharu-Pasir Tuar road, 26 miles) are few miles from the capital; communication inland is by the rivers. There is a direct telegraphic communication with Bangkok and Penang, and a telephone service. There were (1919) 4 post offices and 2 sub-post offices in the State.

apricots) are grown, and oak-fed silk is produced. Seedlings of fir trees, acacias, willows, and plane trees have done well. Those of the inhabitants who are not farmers are mostly fishermen. Some rope and line making, boat building, and stone-cutting are carried on. The territory contains gold. The trade is carried on by junks and steamers. In 1919, 512 steamers of 487,526 net tons entered the port, exclusive of Admiralty colliers and government transports. 4,535 junks entered and cleared, as against 2,483 in 1918. The chief imports, 1919: cotton yarn, 120,910*l.*; raw cotton, 84,640*l.*; groundnut kernels, 168,610*l.*; piece goods, 61,895*l.*; sugar, 23,520*l.*; Chinese wine, 22,590*l.*; paper, 22,340*l.*; flour, 46,068*l.*; salt, 52,670*l.*; kerosene, 17,580*l.*; gunny bags, 24,910*l.*; treasure, 57,590*l.* Chief exports, 1919, groundnut kernels, 308,810*l.*; fish, 18,720*l.*; sugar, 19,780*l.*; groundnut oil, 12,780*l.*; salt, 104,520*l.* Total value of imports by junk and steamer, 1919, 1,074,828*l.*; exports, 547,134*l.* 1918, imports, 788,038*l.*; exports, 572,936*l.* Weihaiwei is a duty-free port.

Good roads have been made round the coasts and into the interior of the Territory. The value of land is rising, which is a sign of the increasing prosperity of the place. There is a regular weekly mail service to and from Shanghai. Many Europeans visit the place in summer on account of the excellence of the climate, which is unsurpassed in the Far East.

ASCENSION ISLAND.

ASCENSION is a small island of volcanic origin, of 34 square miles, in the South Atlantic, 700 miles N.W. of St. Helena. It is entirely under the control and jurisdiction of the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty and is fortified. There is an excellent sanatorium up Green Mountain (2,820 ft.) for crews of ships visiting the island, whose health is impaired from service on the coast. There are 10 acres under cultivation, producing vegetables and fruit for the garrison. The population was estimated (August 1, 1918) at about 250, consisting of officers, their wives and families, seamen and marines, kroomen, members of the staff of the Eastern Telegraph Co., and servants. Garrison station, Georgetown, on north-west coast.

The island is the resort of the sea turtle, which come in thousands to lay their eggs in the sand annually between January and May. In 1914, 113 were taken from 500 to 800 lbs. in weight; they are stored in ponds, and eventually killed and distributed among the people, a few being sent to the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty. Rabbits, wild goats, and partridges are more or less numerous on the island, which is, besides, the breeding ground of the sooty tern or "wideawake," these birds coming in vast numbers to lay their eggs about every eighth month. The island is included in the Postal Union, and is connected by the Eastern Telegraph Company with St. Helena, St. Vincent, Sierra Leone, and Buenos Aires; with England and with the Cape of Good Hope by telegraph.

Commandant.—Major H. G. Grant, R.M.L.I.

BRITISH EAST AFRICA.

British East Africa consists of a large area on the mainland, together with the Islands of Zanzibar and Pemba. For details as to international agreements, &c., with regard to the British sphere in East Africa, see the STATESMAN'S YEAR BOOK for 1907, pp. 216 and 217.

KENYA COLONY AND PROTECTORATE.

Government.—The Kenya Colony and Protectorate extends from the Umba to the Juba River, and inland as far as the borders of Uganda. Kenya Protectorate (so named by Order in Council dated August 13, 1920) includes certain mainland dominions of the Sultan of Zanzibar, viz., a strip, extending 10 miles inland along the coast from the German frontier to Kipini, the islands of the Lamu Archipelago, and an area of 10 miles round the fort of Kismayu, these territories having been leased to Great Britain for an annual rent of 17,000*l.* The colony and protectorate were formerly known as the East Africa Protectorate. On April 1, 1905, this was transferred from the authority of the Foreign Office to that of the Colonial Office. By an Order in Council dated November 9, 1906, the Protectorate was placed under the control of a Governor and Commander-in-Chief. By Order in Council the Protectorate (except the Sultan of Zanzibar's dominions) was annexed to the Crown, as from July 23, 1920, under the name of the Kenya Colony, and thus becomes a "Crown Colony." An Order in Council of October 22, 1906, constituted an Executive and a Legislative Council, the former consisting of 4 members, in addition to the Governor, the latter of 8 official and 4 unofficial members. Under an Ordinance of July, 1919, the Legislative Council is to consist of 11 elected representatives of the European community, three nominated members, two representing the Indian population and one the Arabs, and a sufficient number of official members to give a majority in the Council. Legislation is by Ordinances made by the Governor with the advice and consent of the Legislative Council. In 1908 foreign consular jurisdiction in the Zanzibar strip of coast was transferred to the British Crown. There are 9 provinces and a tract of territory partially organised lying to the north. The provinces are as follows: Seyidie (capital Mombasa), Ukamba (capital Nairobi), Tanaland (capital Lamu), Jubaland (capital Kismayu), Kenya (capital Nyeri), Naivasha (capital Naivasha), the Nyanza Province (capital Kisumu), Northern Frontier District (capital Moyale). For administrative purposes the Colony is to be divided into white-settled areas under Resident Magistrates, and native reserves under Native Commissioners.

Area and Population.—The territory has an area of 246,822 square miles; population estimated at 2,807,000, including 5,362 Europeans and 17,000 Asiatics. On the coast the Arabs and Swahilis predominate; further inland are races speaking Bantu languages, and non-Bantu tribes such as the Masai, the Somali, and the Kalenjin. Mombasa is the largest town; population about 30,000, of whom 130 are Europeans. The harbour is situated on the eastern side of an island of the same name, and is the terminus of the Uganda Railway. Kilindini harbour on the south-western side of the island is the finest land-locked and sheltered harbour on the east coast of Africa and is accessible to vessels of deep draught. There is good warehouse accommodation and a pier connected with the Uganda Railway. The two principal rivers in the North are the Tana and Juba which flow into the Indian Ocean. They are both navigable for about 400 miles by shallow draught steamers. Nairobi, the capital and the headquarters of the administration, has 14,000 inhabitants, of whom about 800 are Europeans and 3,000 Indian. There are also 400 European farmers and 50,000 natives in the immediate neighbourhood of Nairobi.

Religion, Instruction, Justice.—The prevailing religious beliefs are Pagan; but on the coast Mohamedanism has made great progress. There are many Christian mission societies, British, French, German, Italian, Swedish, and American, two being Roman Catholic. There are Government schools at Nairobi, Mombasa, Nakuru, and Uasin Gishu. The High Court is at Mombasa and sessions are held at Nairobi, Naivasha, Kisumu, and other places. District Courts presided over by magistrates are held in each district. In native cases local ideas and customs are considered. The legal status of slavery has been abolished throughout East Africa.

Finance.—Revenue and expenditure for 6 years:—

Year	Revenue	Expenditure	Year	Revenue	Expenditure
	£	£		£	£
1913-14	1,123,798	1,115,899	1917-18	1,368,329	1,490,571
1915-16	1,165,561	1,072,917	1918-19	1,548,703	1,570,705

In 1917-18 the expenditure included 140,951*l.* for Protectorate share war expenses; grant-in-aid, nil. Of the revenue for 1917-18, customs inland accounted for 170,510*l.*; licences and internal revenue, 335,622*l.*; Government railways, 650,941*l.*; rents, 33,236*l.*; posts and telegraphs, 62,216*l.*; fees of court and other fees, 43,870*l.* Public debt, 552,674*l.*

Agriculture and Mining.—The agricultural products of the lowland are essentially tropical, and include rice, maize, various native grains, casava, cocoanuts, etc. The cultivation of sisal hemp and Ceara rubber is now being undertaken on an extended scale. Cotton growing is receiving attention on the banks of the Juba River. Other plants of economic value are being experimented with. In the highlands almost all crops of the temperate zone are grown, viz.: oats, barley, wheat, potatoes, all European vegetables, beans, peas, linseed, etc. There is now a large acreage under wheat. Maize culture is rapidly extending, and a large export in this commodity is likely to be developed. Many coffee plantations are established. The growing of black wattle is becoming one of the principal industries of the country and suitable land commands a high price in the market. Ostrich farming has practically become an established industry. Sheep farming is proving very profitable, and many pure-bred merinos have been imported. Dairying is also proving a profitable branch of farming.

The forest area extends over 3,200 square miles, of which the tropical forest covers about 183 square miles, the remainder being upland or highland, containing valuable timber trees. Near the coast are mangroves, and various rubber trees, besides ebony, copal, and other trees. The Taveta forest is supposed to contain useful timber. The Scrub forest which covers a large lowland area is capable of being turned to useful purposes. The Tana and Juba rivers are bordered by trees of tropical growth, and the Witu forest timber trees are furniture woods. But the valuable forests are within the highland area to the west and north of Nairobi. The Kenya forests of about 625 square miles contain cedar, yellow woods, camphor, jarrah, cork, iron-wood, pillar-wood, oil and many other useful species. The Aberdare forests (about 750 square miles) contain abundance of similar trees. The Mau forest (about 1,200 square miles) is incompletely surveyed, but is known to contain many excellent timber trees. The forest on Mount Elgon (about 50 square miles) is little known.

The mineral resources are not yet fully explored, but do not appear to be very extensive. There are large deposits of natron in the Rift Valley, particularly at Lake Magadi. Diatomite also occurs in large quantities in the same region. Gold has been discovered in S. Kavirondo, but not in sufficient quantities to warrant mining. Graphite and marble are found in the metamorphic rocks in various localities, and limestone is worked at various places for building purposes. Manganese is found in the sandstones near the coast; opals have been found in some of the streams on the west side of the Rift Valley, but up to now have not been considered of commercial importance.

Commerce, Shipping, Communications, &c.—Imports (excluding government stores and treasure) and exports (including those also of Uganda and the Congo), and the gross tonnage entered and cleared (excluding coasting trade):—

Years	Imports	Exports	Customs	Tonnage entered and cleared
1913-14	2,147,937	1,482,876	196,197	3,565,795
1914-15	1,469,210	1,004,796	145,545	2,362,317
1915-16	1,708,333	1,469,210	185,249	1,635,457
1916-17	3,024,123	1,613,853	311,496	1,441,877
1917-18	2,809,681	1,741,939	254,256	1,170,472
1918-19	3,397,810	2,498,574	270,561	922,653

Of imports, 1918-19, 1,619,993*l.* came from the United Kingdom; 1,062,245*l.* from British Possessions; 242,411*l.* from the United States of America; 65,215*l.* from Japan, and 57,190*l.* from Holland.

Of exports, 1918-19, 1,335,582*l.* went to the United Kingdom; 939,591*l.* to British Possessions; 58,507*l.* to Italy; 94,902*l.* to Japan.

The shipping to this coast has been, during recent years, dependent on such ships as could be spared from time to time by the Ministry of Shipping, but arrivals from and sailings to Bombay by British India steamers have been fairly regular. Communication between the ports of Kenya kept up by small steamers owned by Messrs. Cawasji Dinshaw Brothers at Aden.

The Mombasa-Victoria (Uganda) Railway is a State railway, length

618 miles, gauge 39·33 inches. The construction cost to March 31, 1919, was 6,523,555*l*. A line is projected from Nakuru to Nasin Gishu, a settlement 100 miles north of the main railway line. There is a telegraph along the line, and ten steamers on the Lake in connection with the railway. In 1918-19, 237,976 tons of goods, exclusive of railway material, and 521,434½ passengers were carried; revenue, 645,468*l*.; expenditure, 493,213*l*. The country is fairly well provided with roads and tracks.

The Post Office of the Colony (exclusive of the Uganda Post Office, which is worked by the Kenya Post Office) received and despatched 5,850,686 letters, packets, &c., and 502,278 telegrams during the year 1918-19. The telegraph system has 3,415 miles of wire (exclusive of Uganda). A cable connects Mombasa with Zanzibar. The currency is the Indian rupee, but the British sovereign is also legal tender. An East African Currency Board is to be established in London to maintain a stable rate of sterling exchange. The Board will issue a new local rupee currency in coin and notes, in place of the existing currency. The rupee has been fixed at 2*s*. The florin has been introduced and standardised at 2*s*. There are subsidiary nickel coins. Notes issued in Zanzibar are not interchangeable with those issued in Kenya nor are German rupees, in use in the late German East Africa, legal tender.

TANGANYIKA TERRITORY (LATE GERMAN EAST AFRICA).

German East Africa was conquered in 1918. As the conquest of the territory proceeded Civil Administration was established passu, and the whole Colony passed under the effective control of the present Administration in the beginning of 1919, when the forces engaged in military operations were finally evacuated. The country has been divided between the British and Belgians, and is to be administered under mandates approved by the League of Nations. The official designation of the sphere under British occupation is now "Tanganyika Territory" with headquarters at Dar-es-Salaam. The Belgian sphere of occupation includes the provinces of Ruanda and Urundi, bordering on Lake Tanganyika, and administered under the "Commissaire Royal du Gouvernement Belge" whose headquarters are at Kigali.

Under an Order in Council, dated July 22, 1920, the chief official in the British sphere is to be styled Governor, and he will have the help of an Executive Council, all of whose members will be nominated. There is provision for the representation of white settlers, but the Governor is enjoined to respect native laws and custom unless they are opposed to justice and morality. Rights in or in relation to any public lands vest in the Governor but the Secretary of State for the Colonies may appoint, if he sees fit, another trustee or trustees to exercise such right.

The country has a coast line of about 620 miles; estimated area, 384,000 square miles. The Sultan of Zanzibar's rights over the narrow strip of coast territory were acquired by Germany in 1890 for a payment of 4,000,000 marks. The coast line extends from the mouth of the Umba to the mouth of the Rovuma River. Dar-es-Salaam is the capital.

The native population, consisting mostly of tribes of mixed Bantu and Hamitic, numbered, according to official returns on January 1, 1913, 7,659,898. The number included in the area under British administration is approximately 3½ million. The coloured population (other than native) was 14,000. According to German law every native born after 1905 is free, but a serfdom continued in the protectorate under German rule, and it is estimated that there were about 185,000 serfs in German East Africa. The total white population was 5,336 in 1913.

Education is not compulsory. In 1913 there were 109 Government schools, including 4 for handicrafts, with 18 European and 159 native teachers and 6,177 pupils. Five Protestant and three Catholic missionary societies had schools with 108,000 pupils.

Near the coast forests of mangrove, coco-palm, baobab, tamarind, &c. ; in the higher regions the acacia, cotton-tree, sycamore, banian, and other trees. Government forests, 652,067 acres. There are a number of plantations of coco-palms, coffee (on the higher lands), caoutchouc, sugar, cotton, cardamom, cinchona. Fibre plants, especially sisal, are successfully cultivated. In 1912 there were 48,617 cattle, 41,647 sheep and goats in the possession of Europeans, and 3,950,250 cattle and 6,398,300 sheep and goats in the possession of natives. Minerals known to exist within the Protectorate are coal, iron, lead, copper, mica, and salt. Agates, topaz, moonstones, tourmalin, and quartz crystals are found, and garnets in large quantities.

The chief seaports are Dar-es-Salaam, Bagamoyo, Saadani, Pangani, Kilwa, Lindi, Mikindani, and Tanga, but few of these are accessible to ocean-going vessels, though gradual improvements are being introduced. Wide, well-kept roads (on some of which rest-houses and stores are provided) run all through the colony. There are two railway lines in the Protectorate—the Usambara railway from Tanga to New Moshi (220 miles), commenced in 1905 and completed in February, 1912, and the Central Railway (780 miles) from Dar-es-Salaam to Kigoma, completed in February, 1914. There are also Government coasting and lake steamers. Dar-es-Salaam is in telegraphic communication with the coast towns, Zanzibar, Mombasa, and many inland centres. There are 62 post offices and telegraph stations. Three Battalions of the King's African Rifles are stationed in Tanganyika Territory.

The revenue of German East Africa for the year 1914 was put at £25,500L., and the expenditure 1,188,500L. Tanganyika Territory estimates, 1920-21: revenue (ordinary), 671,620L., extraordinary (grant-in-aid), 330,000L., total, 1,001,620L.; expenditure, 1,111,809L. Approximate excess of assets over liabilities on March 31, 1920, 140,250L.; on March 31, 1921, 30,063L.

Imports and exports for 6 years:—

Chief exports 1919-20: Sisal (16,744 tons, 436,000L.), cotton (1,629,851 L., 62,000L.), hides (78,890 cwts., 227,000L.), skins (4,897 cwts., 29,000L.), wax (106,615 cwts., 105,000L.), coffee (78,530 cwts., 187,000L.), ghee (11,051 L., 40,000L.), ground nuts (16,485 cwts., 100L.), grain (231,624 cwts., 91,000L.), simsim (33,076 cwts., 85,000L.), ivory (2,141 cwts., 6,000L.), ivory (257 cwts., 13,000L.). Chief imports 1919-20: cotton piece goods (554,000L.), rice (51,000L.), other foodstuffs (4,000L.), kerosene (39,000L.), cigarettes (32,000L.), tobacco (27,000L.), wine and beer (55,000L.). The trade is chiefly with Zanzibar, the Bay of Kenya and India. In 1919-20 59 steamers (exclusive of coastal boats) of 193,440 tons, and 1,792 vessels (dhows) of 46,157 tons, entered the various ports from places beyond the territory

THE UGANDA PROTECTORATE.

The territories now comprised within this Protectorate came under British influence in 1890, and a portion of them was for a time administered by the Imperial British East African Company. In 1894 a British Protectorate was declared over the kingdom of Uganda and some of the adjoining territories. The present limits are approximately as follows :—On the north, the Uganda-Sudan boundary ; on the east, a line drawn down the middle of Lake Rudolf, and along the west boundary of the Colony of Kenya and the eastern shores of Lake Victoria ; on the south by Tanganyika Territory (late German East Africa) ; and on the west by the eastern boundary of the Belgian Congo. Within these boundaries lie part of the Victoria Nyanza,<sup>1</sup> part of Lake Edward, the whole of Lake George, half of Lake Albert, the whole of Lake Kioga, the whole of Lake Salisbury, part of Lake Rudolf, and the course of the Nile from its exit from Lake Victoria to Nimule, where the Egyptian Sudan commences. Total area 110,300 square miles, including 16,377 square miles of water. For administrative purposes it is divided into 5 provinces : (1) the Eastern Province, comprising the districts of Busoga, Bukedi, Teso, Lango, Karamoja, and Lobar ; (2) the Rudolf Province, comprising the districts of Turkwel, Turkana, and Dabossa (this province is at present only partially administered) ; (3) the Northern Province, comprising the districts of Bunyoro, Gulu, Chua, and West Nile ; (4) the Western Province, comprising the districts of Toro, Ankole, and Kigezi ; and (5) Buganda Province, with islands in Lake Victoria, comprising the districts of Mengo, Masaka, Mubendi, and Entebbe. Owing to sleeping sickness the islands of Lake Victoria have been entirely depopulated, and the inhabitants, numbering about 20,000, settled on the mainland in fly-free districts.

With the exception of the Rudolf Province and the districts of Karamoja and Lobar, the whole Protectorate is now under direct administration ; but the native kings or chiefs, whose rights are in some cases regulated by treaties, are encouraged to conduct the government of their own subjects. The province of Buganda is recognised as a native kingdom under a “Kabaka,” with the title of “His Highness” ; the present Kabaka being H.H. Daudi Chwa, grandson of the celebrated Mutesa. He is assisted in the government by three native ministers and a Lukiko, or native assembly. In Buganda, and in Bunyoro, Ankole and Toro, also ruled over by native “Kings,” purely native matters are dealt with by the various Lukikos, but in serious cases there is an appeal to higher courts. For Europeans and non-natives justice is administered by his Majesty’s courts. The principal British representative is the Governor, who makes Ordinances for the administration of justice, the raising of revenue, and other purposes.

There are local and special courts of justice, and a High Court with civil and criminal jurisdiction. The appeal court consists of the judges of the High Courts of the Colony of Kenya, Uganda, Nyasaland, and Zanzibar. In 1919, there were 2,601 criminal cases tried, 135 of which were cases of serious crime. There is an armed constabulary force, under a British Commissioner of Police and British officers. There is also a volunteer reserve of Europeans.

The total population of Uganda (March 31, 1919) was estimated as 3,318,000, composed as follows: Natives, 3,314,000; Asiatics, 3,500; Europeans, 847. Among the natives approximately 785,000 belong to the intelligent, civilised Baganda, a race converted to Christianity by British and French missionaries. Educational work is undertaken by the various Missionary Societies, who receive grants amounting to 2,225*l.* towards scholarships, &c., for students and teachers. The attendance at the Mission Schools in 1918-19 was 51,000 boys and 28,000 girls. About 1,700,000 natives speak Bantu languages; there are a few Congo pygmies living near the Semliki river; the rest of the natives belong to the Masai, Nilotic, and Sudanese groups.

Cotton is the principal product, and is grown almost entirely by natives. The area under cultivation in 1920 is estimated at about 155,000 acres, and a crop of at least 50,000 bales is expected. Other products are coffee, Para rubber, cocoa, oil-seeds. There are valuable forests.

In 1918-19 total exports, 1,247,457*l.*; 1919-20, 1,828,537*l.*; the import figures are now merged in those of the Colony of Kenya. The export trade, which is increasing, is mainly in cotton, 1,209,663*l.*, in 1919-20: coffee, 161,714*l.*; chillies, 10,251*l.*; oil seeds, 57,868*l.*; rubber, 25,992*l.*; ivory, 65,952*l.*; hides and skins, 270,472*l.* The trade is chiefly with Great Britain, the United States, and India.

The revenue and expenditure for 6 years (ending March 31) were:—

Year	Revenue	Grant-in-aid	Expenditure	Year	Revenue	Grant-in-aid	Expenditure
	£	£	£		£	£	£
1913-14	256,559	35,000	290,180	1917-18	326,366	—	292,913
1915-16	287,025	—	285,072	1918-19	351,834	—	323,691
1916-17	315,453	—	289,308	1919-20	495,548	—	465,117

In 1919-20 the poll-tax amounted to 247,371*l.*, and customs to 90,849*l.* Debt, 282,931*l.*

The headquarters of the British administration is at Entebbe; the native capital of Buganda is at Mengo, Kampala. Nile steamers from Khartum ply to Rejaf, which is about eight days march from Nimule, the Sudan port of the Lake Albert Marine Service. A regular steamer service is maintained by the Uganda Railway Administration between Kisumu, the railway terminus, and Entebbe, Port Bell, and Jinja, the principal Uganda ports on Lake Victoria. The Busoga Railway Marine, which, with the Busoga Railway, is controlled by the Uganda Railway, deals with the traffic on Lake Kioga. There are two steamers and a large number of lighters on that waterway. An additional steamer and subsidiary craft ply on Lake Albert and the Nile between Butiaba, Nimule and the Belgian Port of Kasenye at the South of Lake Albert. The Busoga Railway of the same gauge as the Uganda Railway, 62 miles in length, runs from Jinja (on Lake Victoria) to Namasagali, a point on the Nile below the rapids. It was formally opened for business on January 1, 1912. This railway was built to deal with the cotton output in the regions round Lake Kioga, and connects that lake with Lake Victoria. There is a railway from Port Bell to Kampala, 7½ miles in length. There is a fleet of government motor vans.

In June, 1912, East Africa received a loan of 500,000*l.* from the Imperial Government. Uganda's share amounted to 125,000*l.* and was devoted to the construction of the Port Bell-Kampala railway, and to the improvement of communications in the Eastern Province, with a view to dealing more effectively with cotton transport.

Mail services by motor and relays of runners radiate from Entebbe, Kampala and Jinja. Money and postal orders and parcel post exchange systems are working in most districts. The Sudan-Egyptian telegraph and telephone system is established to Rajaf. The Uganda telegraph line is extended to Mutir and to Nimule, 89 miles from Rajaf. The length of telegraph line in the Protectorate is (1919) 1,225 miles, with 24 telegraph offices. Telephone exchanges are installed at Entebbe, Kampala, and Jinja.

The currency was based on the rupee (originally valued at 1s. 4d., but in 1920 at 2s.), and consisted of silver rupees, with a subsidiary coinage of silver 50 and 25 cent pieces, and nickel 10 cent, 5 cent, 1 cent, and  $\frac{1}{2}$  cent pieces. The florin has been introduced, and standardised at 2s. Both florins and rupees are current for the present at the same value. E. Africa Government currency notes of 500, 100, 50, 20, 10, 5, and one florin, are also in circulation. New cental coins were issued during 1907-08. See also under Kenya, p. 182. The Savings Bank had 7,711l. deposits and 618 depositors on March 31, 1920. The National Bank of India (Limited) has branches at Entebbe, Kampala, Jinja, and the Standard Bank of South Africa has opened branches at Kampala and Jinja.

ZANZIBAR.

Situation and Area.—The Island of Zanzibar is situated in 6° S. latitude, and is separated from the mainland by a channel 22½ miles across at its narrowest part. It is the largest coralline island on the African coast, being 48 miles long by 15 broad, and having an area of 640 square miles. To the north-east, at a distance of some 30 miles, lies the Island of Pemba in 5° S. latitude. It is smaller than Zanzibar, being 40 miles long by 10 broad, and having an area of 380 square miles.

Constitution and Government.—The Sultan, Seyyid Khalifa bin Harub, K.C.M.G. (Hon.) K.B.E. (Hon.) (born 1879), succeeded on the abdication of his brother-in-law, Ali bin Hamoud bin Mahomed, December 9, 1911. The Government is administered by a High Commissioner and a British Resident, who are appointed by commissions under His Majesty's Sign Manual and Signet, and exercise their functions under the Zanzibar Order-in-Council, 1914.

Legislation consists of certain British and Indian Statutes and also of Decrees of His Highness the Sultan, which latter are binding on all persons when countersigned by the British Resident under the Order-in-Council.

There is a Council for the Protectorate, which exercises functions of an advisory and consultative nature, and consists of his Highness the Sultan as President, the British Resident as Vice-President, and three official and four unofficial members.

It was during the sixteenth century that the Arabs of the East Coast sought the assistance of the Imams of Muscat to drive out the Portuguese. On the ruins of the Portuguese power arose that of the Imams of Muscat. The allegiance to Muscat, however, was of a more or less nominal character until Seyyid Said, after having subdued his enemies on the mainland, transferred his capital to Zanzibar in 1832. On his death in 1856 the African possessions were, under an arbitration by Lord Canning (then Governor-General of India), declared independent of the parent state. In 1890 the supremacy of the British interests in the Island was recognised by France and Germany, and it was declared a British Protectorate in accordance with conventions by which Great Britain waived all claims to Madagascar in favour of France and ceded Heligoland to Germany. In the same year the mainland possessions which extended over the coast of East Africa, Warsheikh in 3° N. latitude to Tunghi Bay 10° 42' S. latitude, were ceded to Italy, Great Britain, and Germany, respectively, Great Britain and Italy paying rent for the territories under their protection, while Germany acquired the Sultan's rights by the payment of a sum of 200,000*l.* At a later date Italy also acquired similar rights by payment of a sum of 144,000*l.* In 1891, a regular Government was formed for Zanzibar with a British representative as first minister. In 1906 the Imperial Government assumed more direct control over the Protectorate and re-organised the Government. On April 20, 1914, the control of the Protectorate was transferred from the Foreign Office to the Colonial Office. In July, 1920, the Sultan's coast dominions were named 'Kenya Protectorate.'

Population, Religion, Education, &c.—The population of Zanzibar and Pemba, according to the Census of 1910, was 196,783. Zanzibar, 113,624; Pemba, 83,109. The registered birth rate in 1919 was 18·5 per 1,000. The Arabs, about 10,000, are the principal landlords and employers of labour. The black population is mostly Swahili, but there are representatives of nearly every African tribe. There are nearly 200 Europeans most of whom are English; about 10,000 British Indian subjects, through whose hands almost the whole trade of East Africa passes. Zanzibar town has a population of 35,000.

Most of the natives are Mohammedans (Sunnis of the Shafi school), the Sultan and relatives are of the Ibadhi sect. There are 3 Christian Missions: The Universities Mission to Central Africa (Church of England), the Catholic Mission (Roman Catholic), and the Friends' Industrial Mission.

There are Government schools mainly for Moslems, with a course of instruction extending over seven years. Education is voluntary and free. There are a number of mission schools, Indian schools supported by different communities for the children of their sects, private schools and a non-sectarian school. The total number of children attending these schools in 1919 was 1,920.

There are two Government hospitals, one for Europeans and one for Government subordinate employees and poor natives, in Zanzibar, and one in Pemba.

Justice.—For the administration of justice in Zanzibar, one Court, his Britannic Majesty's, consisting of a Judge and one or more Assistant Judges, deals with all actions to which a British, or British protected, person or the subject of a foreign Power is a party, and others, the Sultan's Local Courts, deal with cases in which the subjects of the Sultan are alone concerned. The total number of convictions in 1919 was 1,682 (1,518 in 1918).

Appeal lies to H.M.'s Court of Appeal for Eastern Africa, many of the cases tried being cases affecting British Indians, in whose hands is a large proportion of the trade of Zanzibar. The British Court has also certain Admiralty jurisdiction by virtue of the Zanzibar Order in Council, 1914.

The Sultan's Courts, under the general superintendence of H.M. Judge, administer justice in the town of Zanzibar by two European Magistrates assisted by Arab Kathis. In Pemba, and the country districts, criminal or civil cases are tried by a Magistrate or a District Commissioner, or Assistant District Commissioner. The final appeal, in all cases, lies to the British Judge sitting as Sultan's Judge.

Finance.—The revenue and expenditure for 6 years were as follows :—

Year	Revenue from Customs	Total Revenue (excluding loans)	Expenditure	Year	Revenue from Customs	Total Revenue (excluding loans)	Expenditure
	£	£	£		£	£	£
1913	167,363	275,126	248,356	1917	152,620	297,746	259,961
1915	162,284	267,405	203,968	1918	222,442	387,871	271,874
1916	156,935	281,162	280,203	1919	225,044	407,505	323,418

Production and Industry.—The clove industry is by far the most important in the Protectorate, the Islands of Zanzibar and Pemba yielding the bulk of the world's supply. It is estimated that there are in both islands about 52,000 acres under cloves and about 4½ million trees in bearing, the average output of recent years being 14 million lbs. The output in 1919–20 was about 29,000,000 lbs., the largest on record. The large plantations are chiefly owned by Arabs, but many natives possess small holdings. The coconut industry ranks next in importance after cloves, the conditions in both islands being favourable to the growth of the tree and its nut-bearing properties. It is estimated that there are about 48,000 acres under cultivation and 2½ million trees in both islands. The export of copra, which is steadily increasing, amounted in 1919 to 14,177 tons. Much is produced by the small grower or trader, neither of whom possesses proper drying facilities, with a result that the quality of the product compares unfavourably with that of Cochin and Ceylon.

The manufactures are pottery, coir fibre and rope, soap, oil (coconut and simsim), jewellery, and mats. There are no mines in the Protectorate.

Commerce.—The total imports, exports, and shipping for 6 years, were :—

Years	Imports (Including bullion and specie)	Exports (Including bullion and specie)	Shipping entered (gross tonnage)

Shipping and Communications, &c.—The port of Zanzibar is one of the finest in Africa and was for long a main centre of commerce between India, Arabia, and the mainland. Of late years, however, the importance of Zanzibar as a port of transshipment and distributing centre has largely decreased owing to the development of the mainland, to the opening up of the coast ports to direct steamship service with Europe, and to the transfer to Aden of the seat of trade with the Benadir Coast. Recent figures, nevertheless, tend to indicate that the Island will continue by reason of its geographical position to retain control of the local traffic.

The British India Steam Navigation Company and the Union Castle Steamship Company maintain monthly services between London-Zanzibar-Durban and Southampton-Zanzibar-Durban respectively, the Clan-Ellerman-Harrison Line, between Glasgow-Liverpool-Zanzibar-Beira (cargo only), the Compagnie des Messageries Maritimes between Marseilles-Zanzibar-

Madagascar, the Italian Royal Mail Service (fortnightly) between Genoa-Zanzibar-Durban, and vice versa, and the Portuguese Government (periodical services) between Lisbon and their East and West African Colonies, via Suez Canal and the Cape. The British India Steam Navigation Company also maintain a service twice a month between Bombay-Zanzibar-Durban, and there are local services between Zanzibar-Mombasa-Aden and the Benadir Coast. The Government possesses two steamers which maintain regular weekly connection with Pemba, as well as making calls at Mombasa, Tanga, Dar-es-Salaam, and Mafia.

Ocean-going shipping dealt with in 1919, 440,737 tons (104 vessels); coastwise, 59,734 tons; dhows, 82,334 tons.

There is cable communication with Europe either via Aden or via Durban.

There are 75 miles of roads throughout the Island of Zanzibar suitable for motor traffic. A light railway runs north from the town to Bububu seven miles distant.

The Government maintains wireless stations in Zanzibar and Pemba, and a telephone system in the town of Zanzibar, which is connected with the District and Agricultural stations in the country. There are seven post-offices in the two islands. Total number of articles dealt with at the post office in 1919 was 565,648 (letters, 324,792); in 1918, 665,580 (404,720 letters). The Post Office Savings Bank was started in 1907. At the end of 1919 there were 1,817 depositors, with 8,426*l.* on deposit.

The British Indian rupee is universally current; currency notes of 5 to 500 rupees are in circulation. The value of notes in circulation on December 31, 1919, was 85,57,490 rupees. Seyyidieh copper pice are legal tender up to 64 pice (= one rupee). A frasla (or frasila) of cloves is equivalent to 35*lbs.* av.

High Commissioner.—Major-General Sir Edward Northey, K.C.M.G., C.B.

British Resident.—Major F. B. Pearce, C.M.G.

MAURITIUS.

Constitution and Government.

Mauritius, acquired by conquest in 1810, was formally ceded to Great Britain by the Treaty of Paris of 1814. Under Letters Patent of 1881, 1901, 1904, and 1912, partially representative institutions have been established. The government of the Colony, with its dependencies, Rodrigue, Diégo Garcia, &c., is vested in a Governor, aided by an Executive Council consisting of the officer in command of His Majesty's troops, the Colonial Secretary, the Procureur-General, the Receiver-General, and of such other persons holding office in the service of the Government of the Colony as the Governor, through instructions from the Secretary of State, may from time to time appoint. There is also a Council of Government, consisting of the Governor and twenty-seven members, ten being elected under a moderate franchise, eight ex-officio, and nine nominated by the Governor. The official councillors comprise the four Executive members, the Collector of Customs, the Protector of Immigrants, the Director of Public Works and Surveys, and the Director of the Medical and Health Department.

Governor of Mauritius.—Sir H. Hesketh Bell, K.C.M.G.; salary Rs. 60,000.

Area, Population, &c.

Mauritius, in the Indian Ocean, 500 miles east of Madagascar, has an area of about 720 square miles. According to the census of 1911, the population of the island, including Dependencies (6,690), Military (1,602) was 377,083, consisting of general population, 115,146, Indian population 258,251, Chinese population, 3,686.

NYASALAND PROTECTORATE (BRITISH).

The Nyasaland (until 1907 British Central Africa) Protectorate, constituted on May 14, 1891, lies along the southern and western shores of Lake Nyasa, and extends towards the Zambezi. It is administered under the Colonial Office by the Governor and Commander-in-Chief, assisted by an Executive and a Legislative Council, both consisting of nominated members, and the Governor having the right of veto (Order in Council of September 4, 1907). The Laws consist of local Ordinances duly enacted, with such British Acts as are of general application.

Area, 39,573 square miles, divided into fifteen districts, each administered by a Resident and his assistants. Population, 1920, 1,015 Europeans (mostly in the Shiré Highlands), 515 Asiatics, and 1,202,208 natives. The chief settlement is Blantyre, in the Shiré Highlands; others are Zomba (the seat of Government), Port Herald, Mlanje, Limbe; on Lake Nyasa are Fort Johnston, Kota-Kota, Bandawe, Chintechi, Nkata, Likoma, and Karonga. Good roads are being made in all directions, and life and property are safe. There are no Government schools, native education being undertaken by various missionary societies. Eleven Christian missions are at work; in 1918-19 there were 1,991 schools, with about 110 European teachers, 125,159 pupils and 77,952 in average attendance. Ten of the missions divide 1,000*l.* Government aid for their schools.

Justice is administered in the High Court, which has jurisdiction in civil and criminal matters, and also as a Court of Admiralty. Subordinate courts are held by magistrates and assistant magistrates in the various districts. Appeals from decisions of the High Court are heard in H.B.M.'s. Court of Appeal for Eastern Africa, sitting at Mombassa. In 1918-19, 3,044 offences were reported, 18 being cases of serious crime.

Within the Shiré province coffee is cultivated; in 1916-17, 131,390 lbs.; in 1917-18, 2,774 lbs.; in 1918-19, 188,865 lbs.; in 1919-20, 112,055 lbs. were exported. Tobacco exported, after local demands were supplied, in 1916-17, 4,304,124 lbs.; in 1917-18, 2,025,372 lbs.; in 1918-19, 5,805,396 lbs.; and in 1919-20, 4,845,045 lbs. The area under tobacco in 1919 was 6,027 acres. Cotton cultivation is very promising. Crop in 1915-16, 3,065,248 lbs.; in 1916-17, 3,462,500 lbs.; in 1917-18, 1,779,200 lbs.; in 1918-19, 2,670,834 lbs.; and in 1919-20, 930,048 lbs. Tea-growing is tried on estates aggregating about 4,433 acres; in 1915-16, 88,341 lbs.; in 1916-17, 420,685 lbs.; in 1917-18, 155,338 lbs.; in 1918-19, 700,455 lbs.; and in 1919-20, 801,890 lbs. were exported.<sup>1</sup> Cattle (1919), 84,338; sheep, 40,369; goats, 148,681; pigs, 21,403; horses, mules, and asses, 253, mostly belonging to the natives.

The trade ports are Port Herald (Lower Shiré), Kota-Kota, Karonga, and Fort Johnston (Lake Nyasa).

The revenue is derived from Customs (62,582*l.* in 1918-19), licences (6,037*l.*), land tax (8,006*l.*), &c., and from a hut-tax, yielding in 1915-16, 76,679*l.*; in 1916-17, 78,478*l.*; in 1917-18, 75,448*l.*; and in 1918-19, 79,304*l.*

Public debt, March 31, 1919, 3,190,800*l.*, including 2,998,000*l.* War advances.

There are military, volunteer reserve, and civil police forces. A European police force is being created (1920). There is a Marine Transport Department on the Upper Shire River and on Lake Nyasa, consisting of three vessels. For ordinary traffic there are small steamers, besides small sailing vessels.

There is communication with the coast at Chinde by river steamers. Chinde is situated on the only navigable mouth of the Zambezi, and the Portuguese Government has granted a small piece of land, called the 'British Concession,' where goods in transit for British Central Africa are free of customs duty, and in addition a large area for residential purposes styled 'the Extra Concession.'

There are 27 post offices through which, in 1915-16, 2,174,405 postal packets passed. A postal savings bank was opened on July 1, 1911. Depositors at end of 1918, 522; deposits, 14,490*l.* A railway, of 3 ft. 6 in. gauge, from Chinde on the Zambezi in Portuguese East Africa to Blantyre has been constructed (174 miles) and an extension made to the Zambezi River. A railway thence to the Port of Beira in Portuguese East Africa is to be constructed. There is a telegraph line through the Protectorate to Tanganyika and Ujiji connecting with Cape Town, with a branch to Fort Jameson. At Zomba there is a water-power electric light installation which provides for the whole settlement.

At Blantyre and Zomba there are branches of the Standard Bank of South Africa and of the National Bank of South Africa. The currency consists of British coin, gold, silver, and bronze. There is no note circulation.

Governor and Commander-in-Chief.—Sir George Smith, K.C.M.G.

Chief Secretary.—R. S. D. Rankine, C.M.G.

Imports <sup>3</sup>	43,894	46,514	51,301	49,487	44,084

Public debt, nil. But the Colony's liabilities at December 31, 1919, exceeded the assets by 1,365*l.*

The principal export in 1919 was fibre and tow, 27,108*l.* for 603 tons.

Savings-bank deposits on December 31, 1919, 16,680*l.*, belonging to 163 depositors.

Fruit trees, Norfolk pines, eucalyptus, and cedars flourish in St. Helena. Cattle do well, but there is no outside market for the meat. The flax (phormium) industry is now established, and a Government mill commenced operations in 1908. In 1919 the exports of fibre and tow were 603 tons. Two private mills produced 410 tons of fibre and 115 tons of tow in 1919. At the four mills 183 males and 59 females were employed at the end of 1918. The area of land under flax is estimated at 1,000 acres (1918). A lace-making industry has been started. The number of vessels that called at the Island in 1919 was 28 (26 British), with a total tonnage of 59,548.

The Post Office traffic from St. Helena in 1917, 26,415 letters and post-cards, besides books, papers and parcels. The Eastern Telegraph Company's cable connects St. Helena with Cape Town and with St. Vincent. There are telephone lines, with 40 miles of wire.

St. Helena is an Admiralty coaling station. About two of the Cape of Good Hope Squadron visit St. Helena every year.

Tristan da Cunha, a small group of islands in the Atlantic, half-way between the Cape and S. America, in  $37^{\circ} 6' \text{ S. lat. } 12^{\circ} 1' \text{ W. long.}$  Besides Tristan da Cunha and Gough's Island, there are Inaccessible and Nightingale Islands, the former two and the latter one mile long, and a number of rocks. The population consists mainly of the families of shipwrecked sailors and wives from St. Helena, and numbered 105 at the end of 1916. There is no form of government. Education is almost totally neglected. Potatoes grow well, but grain crops are destroyed by rats. Apple and peach trees are productive. Bullocks, sheep, and geese are reared. Fish are plentiful.

SEYCHELLES.

Seychelles and its Dependencies consist of 90 islands and islets with a total estimated area of 156 square miles. The principal island is Mahé (55½ square miles), smaller islands of the group being Praslin, Silhouette, La Digue, Curieuse, and Félicité. Among dependent islands are the Amirantes, Alphonse Island, Bijoutier Island, St. François, St. Pierre, the Cosmoledo Group, Astove Island, Assumption Island, the Aldabra Islands, Providence Island, Coetivy, and Flat Island. The Seychelles were formerly administered from Mauritius, but in 1888 the office of Administrator was created, an Executive Council of 2 ex-officio members and 1 nominated member was appointed and a Legislative Council of 3 official and 3 unofficial members, the Administrator being president of both Councils and having an original and casting vote in the Legislative Council. In 1897 the Administrator was given full power as Governor, and in November, 1903, he was raised to the rank of Governor.

Governor and Commander-in-Chief.—His Excellency (Lt.-Col.) the Hon Sir Eustace Piennes, Bart.

The population at December 31, 1919, was estimated to be 24,650 (12,396 males and 12,257 females); census of April 2, 1911, 26,000 (13,140 males and 12,854 females). The death-rate for 1919 was 16·84; the birth-rate 25·19; marriages, 74. Number of births, 619; deaths, 414. The capital is Victoria, which has a good harbour and a coaling station. There were in 1919, 20 grant-in-aid schools. In addition, there is a secondary school for boys with a preparatory branch, and a Government free school. There is a Catholic secondary school for boys, and one for girls. Total number of children attending school in 1919 was 2,226; average attendance 885. In 1919, 425 persons were convicted in the Supreme Court. The police force numbers 86 of all ranks (1919).

Revenue, expenditure and debt for 6 years :—

Year.	Revenue.	Expenditure.	Debt.
1913 (pre-war)	37,144	37,245	13,269
1915	25,419	31,196	12,006
1916	27,998	30,850	11,348
1917	31,102	29,038	10,692
1918	27,256	29,416	9,978
1919	38,243	41,790	9,265

The surplus funds invested on December 31, 1919, amounted to 12,849*l*.

Chief items of revenue, 1919 : Customs, 13,834*l*. ; Crown lands, 1,357*l*. licences, excise, and internal revenue, 3,974*l*. ; taxes, 2,952*l*.

Chief products, coconuts (over 23,000 acres under cultivation : 26,000,000 coconuts produced in 1919) and vanilla (4 tons exported in 1919) ; about 184,000 plants of Para rubber are growing ; on some islands mangrove-bark is collected and phosphate deposits are worked. A good deal of attention is being given to the distillation of oil from the leaves of the cinnamon tree, which grows profusely in the island. Live-stock at end of 1919 : Cattle, 1,000 ; goats, 500 ; sheep, 200 ; horses, 150. Fishing is actively pursued, chiefly for local supply, but will probably be extended.

The Somali Coast stretches from Lahadu, west of Zeyla, to Bandar Ziyada 49° E. long. After 1884, when Egyptian control ceased, the territory was administered by the Government of India, but was taken over by the Foreign Office on October 1, 1898, and was transferred to the Colonial Office on April 1, 1905.

By an arrangement with Italy in 1894 the limits of the British Protectorate were defined; but in 1897, by an arrangement with Abyssinia, a fresh boundary as required by that country was determined, and about 15,000 square miles were ceded to Abyssinia. An agreement for the regulation of Anglo-Italian relations in Somaliland was concluded on March 19, 1907. The area is about 68,000 square miles; population about 300,000—Mohammedan, and entirely nomadic, except on the coast, where considerable towns have sprung up during the British occupation.

The chief town, Berbera, had, at the 1911 census, 30,000 inhabitants in the trading season; Zeyla, 7,000; and Búlhar, 7,300. There are 3 Government schools: average attendance, 1919-20, 127. Police, 510 officers and men on March 31, 1920. Convictions in 1919-20, 738. The revenue in 1919-20 was 81,870*l.* (54,498*l.* in 1918-19), mainly from customs duties (71,446*l.* in 1919-20); the expenditure, 322,989*l.* (147,328*l.* in 1918-19). The grant in aid for 1919-20, 199,000*l.* (83,000*l.* in 1918-19). Imports (1919-20), Zeyla, Berbera, and Búlhar, 503,213*l.* (324,947*l.* in 1918-19), exports (1919-20), 231,011*l.* (221,838*l.* in 1918-19). Bullion and specie are excluded. The imports are chiefly rice (170,646*l.* in 1919-20), textiles, dates (82,703*l.*), sugar (28,710*l.*), and specie; the exports skins and hides, gum and resins, ghee, cattle and sheep, and specie. Tonnage entered in 1919-20, 48,278; cleared, 48,913. The rupee is the basis of the currency, and is of the same value as in India. Bank of England and Government of India notes are also in circulation. Transport is by camels; there are no porters. Besides ordinary telegraphs there are wireless telegraph stations at Berbera, Burao, Búlhar, Hargeisa, and Las Dureh. A wireless station in Aden is also maintained from Protectorate funds.

The Protectorate forces now comprise a Camel Corps of 400, including 1 Indian Company, and 500 Police.

Governor and Commander-in-Chief.—His Excellency Sir G. F. Archer, K.C.M.G. Appointed May, 1914.

SOUTH AFRICA.

BASUTOLAND.

Basutoland, an elevated but rugged plateau, forms an irregular parallelogram on the north-east of the Cape of Good Hope Province. The provinces of the Orange Free State, Natal, and the Cape of Good Hope form its boundaries. Area, 11,716 square miles. The territory, which is well watered and has a fine climate, is stated to be the best grain-producing country in South Africa, and the abundant grass enables the Basutos to rear large herds of cattle.

Basutoland has been directly under the authority of the Crown since 1884. The Paramount Chief is Griffith, brother of Letsie, the late chief. Griffith was installed on April 11, 1913. The territory is governed by a Resident Commissioner under the direction of the High Commissioner for South Africa, the latter possessing the legislative authority, which is exercised by proclamation. The country is divided into seven districts, namely: Maseru, Leribe, Mohale's Hoek, Berea, Mafeteng, Quthing, and Qacha's Nek. Each of the districts is subdivided into wards, mostly presided over by hereditary chiefs allied to the Moshesh family.

In 1891 the population consisted of 578 Europeans and 218,324 natives. The census of 1911 gave a total of 408,111 natives and 1,396 Europeans. European settlement is in general prohibited, and is more or less limited to the few engaged in trade, government, and missionary work. Maseru, the capital and largest town, has a population of (approximately) 1,200 natives and 300 Europeans. A fresh census is being arranged to take place on May 3, 1921.

The productions are wool, wheat, mealies, and Kaffir corn. There are indications of iron and copper, and coal has been found and is used in some parts. Stock, &c. (1911): 433,000 cattle, 86,600 horses, 22,800 ploughs, 1,722 waggons.

There were 390 native elementary schools with over 30,000 pupils at the end of December, 1919; expenditure in connection with education amounted during the year ended March 31, 1919, to 23,862*l*. There are some Normal and Industrial schools (aided). There is also a large and well-fitted Government native industrial school at Maseru. There are 7 white schools with 133 pupils.

The police force numbered, 1918, 12 white officers and 7 European constables, 3 native officers, and 293 men (natives), also 191 special natives police for Border work.

The imports consist chiefly of blankets, ploughs, clothing, iron and tin ware, and groceries, and the exports of stock, grain and wool. Basutoland is in the South African Customs Union. The total trade in recent years was: Imports, 1916, 666,979*l*.; 1917, 901,332*l*.; 1918, 882,339*l*.; 1919, 1,137,037*l*. Exports: 1916, 825,949*l*.; 1917, 812,031*l*.; 1918, 1,007,612*l*.; 1919, 1,380,119*l*.

The currency is exclusively British. The revenue arises mainly from the Post Office, native tax, licences, and customs rebate from neighbouring territories. Under the new Native Tax Law every adult male native pays 1*l*. per annum, and if he has more than one wife by native custom he pays 1*l*. per annum for his wives up to a maximum of 3*l*.

202 THE BRITISH EMPIRE :—BECHUANALAND PROTECTORATE

Native tax yielded 107,291*l.* in 1919-20, and customs, 63,281*l.* Balance of assets over liabilities, March 31, 1920, 129,000*l.*

There are no navigable waterways, the rivers being low in winter and generally flooded in summer. The roads in the country are now in fair condition for any kind of transport.

There are telegraph offices at the various magistracies in connection with the systems of the Cape Province and Orange Free State.

A railway built by the C.S.A.R., 16 miles, connects Maseru with the Bloemfontein-Natal line at Marseilles Station.

Resident Commissioner.—Lieut.-Col. E. C. F. Garraway, C.M.G.

BECHUANALAND PROTECTORATE.

The Bechuanaland Protectorate comprises the territory lying between the Molopo River on the south and the Zambezi on the north, and extending from the Transvaal Province and Matabeleland on the east to South-West Africa. Area is about 275,000 square miles; population, according to the census taken on the 7th May, 1911, 125,350, of whom 1,692 were Europeans. The most important tribes are the Bamangwato (35,000), under the chief Khama, whose capital is Serowe (population 17,000) 40 miles west of the railway line at Palapye Road; the Bakhatla (11,000) under Lenchwe; the Bakwena (13,000) under Sebele II.; the Bangwaketse (18,000) under Tshosa, acting paramount chief during minority of Bathoeñ, a boy of 12 years of age, the eldest son of the late chief Gaseitsiwe; the Batawana under Mathibe; and the Bamalete (4,500) under Seboko Mokgosi, who assumed the Chieftainship on July 9, 1917. In 1885, the territory was declared to be within the British sphere; in 1889 it was included in the sphere of the British South Africa Company, but was never administered by the company; in 1890 a Resident Commissioner was appointed, and in 1895, on the annexation of the Crown Colony of British Bechuanaland to the Cape of Good Hope, new arrangements were made for the administration of the Protectorate, and special agreements were made in view of the extension of the railway northwards from Mafeking. Each of the chiefs rules his own people as formerly, under the protection of the King, who is represented by a Resident Commissioner, acting under the High Commissioner. The headquarters of the Administration are in Mafeking, in the Cape Province, where there is a reserve for Imperial purposes, with ample buildings. There are assistant commissioners at Gaberones in the southern, and Francistown in the northern portion of the Protectorate. There is a tax of 1*l.* on each hut and 3*s.* for a Native Fund established by virtue of Proclamation No. 47 of 1919, for education, &c. Licences for the sale of spirits are granted only at certain railway stations.

Cattle-rearing, and agriculture to a limited extent (production of maize and Kaffir corn), are the chief industries, but the country is more a pastoral than an agricultural one, crops depending entirely upon the rainfall. Cattle numbered on May 7, 1911, 323,900 head, sheep and goats, 358,000. During the year 1919-20 23,569 head of cattle were exported. The police force consists of 58 Europeans and 116 Basutos, and 86 local natives as messengers. Education is provided (there were 8 European, 1 coloured, and 59 native schools, 1919-20), with Government assistance (2,250*l.* being granted in 1919-20), in the London Missionary Society (Church of England), Dutch Reformed Church, and other schools. There are schools for Europeans, subsidised by the Government, at Francistown, Serowe and Magalapye, and at Lobatsi, Hildavale, Pitsani, and Molopolole. Total Government expenditure on education, 1919-20, 1,880*l.*

Gold and silver to the total value of 7,349*l.* were mined in 1919-20.

Revenue and expenditure for six years :—

Chief items of revenue, 1918-19: customs, 19,383*l.*; hut-tax, 40,750*l.*; licences, 5,133*l.*; posts, 7,555*l.*; export duty on cattle, 3,321*l.* Chief items of expenditure, 1918-19: Resident Commissioner, 5,869*l.*; district administration, 5,864*l.*; posts, 3,846*l.*; Police, 33,590*l.*; public works (extraordinary and recurrent), 5,961*l.*; veterinary, 4,833*l.* There has been no Imperial grant-in-aid since 1911-12, when the grant amounted to 10,000*l.*

There is no public debt. Excess of assets over liabilities on April 1, 1920, 13,664*l.*

The Protectorate was within the South African Customs Union, and when the Union of South Africa was completed, an agreement was made with the Union Government under which duty on all dutiable articles imported into the Protectorate is collected by the Union Customs Department and paid into the Union Treasury, a lump sum representing a certain portion of the annual Customs Revenue of the Union being paid over to the Protectorate. Under this arrangement figures relating to imports and exports are not available.

The telegraph from the Cape of Good Hope to Rhodesia passes through the Protectorate and is owned by the British South Africa Company. Similarly the railway extending northwards from the Cape of Good Hope traverses the Protectorate. It is the property of the Rhodesia Railways, Limited. In the Protectorate are 13 post offices; receipts, in 1919-20, 7,555*l.*; expenditure, 3,846*l.* Postal business, 1919-20, 337,765 letters, 5,980 post-cards, 4,472 newspapers, 2,184 book packets, samples, and circulars, and 1,196 parcels.

The currency is British money. There is no bank in the Protectorate.

RHODESIA.

UNDER the title of Rhodesia is included the whole of the region extending from the Transvaal Province northwards to the borders of the Congo State and the late German East Africa (now Tanganyika Territory), bounded on the east by Portuguese East Africa, Nyasaland, and the Tanganyika Territory, and on the west by the Congo State, Portuguese West Africa, and Bechuanaland. The whole territory is under the administration of the British South Africa Company, which holds a Royal Charter dated October 29, 1889. The region south of the Zambezi (Matabeleland and Mashonaland) is called Southern Rhodesia; that north of the Zambezi is known as Northern Rhodesia.

The administrative system of the Company in Southern Rhodesia is prescribed by Orders in Council, the last dated 1916. To assist the Company's Administrator there is an Executive Council consisting of not less than three members appointed for three years by the Company with the approval of the Secretary of State. There is also a Legislative Council which consists of the Administrator (president), six nominees of the Company approved by the Secretary of State, and twelve members elected by the registered voters. Women have the vote. The duration of each Legislative Council is three years, unless it be sooner dissolved. Ordinances passed by the Legislative Council when assented to by the High Commissioner take effect immediately, but within a year may be disallowed by the Secretary of State. There is a Resident Commissioner appointed by the Secretary of State, with a seat on both the Executive and Legislative Councils but without a vote. For the administration of justice there is a High Court with civil and criminal jurisdiction. In the districts there are Magistrates' Courts. There is a chief Native Commissioner, with subordinate Superintendents of Divisions, Native Commissioners and Assistant Native Commissioners, and, except with respect to arms, ammunition, and liquor, natives and Europeans are under the same conditions.

Land has been set apart for tribal settlements, the mineral rights being reserved ("native reserves") to the Company. It has been decided that the ownership of the unalienated land vests in the Crown, but the Company, so long as it is responsible for the government of the country, may dispose of such land in the due course of administration.

Southern Rhodesia has an area of 149,000 square miles. According to the census taken on May 7, 1911, the European population was 23,606, but at the end of 1919 it was estimated to be about 38,000. The native population of Southern Rhodesia is estimated (1919) at about 770,000. There are also approximately 3,000 Asiatics and other coloured persons. The chief towns are Salisbury (the capital of Southern Rhodesia), Bulawayo, Victoria, Umtali, Gwelo, Enkeldoorn, Melsetter, Hartley, Selukwe, Gwanda, and Gatooma.

The schools in Southern Rhodesia for Europeans numbered, at the end of 1919, 77 public and 4 aided. The pupils in 1919 numbered 4,674, and the total expenditure on education was 125,564*l.* There were also 21 private schools, with 107 pupils in 1919. In addition there were 696 native schools, the number of pupils enrolled being 89,381.

The country is rich in gold reefs and other minerals, and is well adapted for agriculture and European settlers. Live stock (1919): cattle, 1,326,000; sheep, 367,000; goats, 761,000. Acreage under crops (1919): European, 210,000; native, 1,204,000. Tobacco acreage (1919): 4,197; yield, 1,468,000 lbs. estimated. Large fruit orchards have been planted, and nearly all fruit trees thrive, the cultivation of oranges and lemons constituting a rapidly expanding industry. Regular shipments of oranges are now being made to the United Kingdom, and have realised eminently satisfactory prices. In March (1920) the British South Africa Company completed the construction of an important dam across the Mazoe River, the storage capacity of which, in a normal season, is approximately 4,000 million gallons, equivalent to 15,000 acre feet, or sufficient to supply 6,000 acres with  $2\frac{1}{2}$  feet of water per acre per annum. An adequate supply of water will be assured for the irrigation of the Company's orange groves on the Mazoe Estate, and negotiations are at present taking place with regard to the sale of surplus water to other landowners in the Mazoe Valley. The sale of dairy produce is a profitable industry in the neighbourhood of the towns. Creameries, a bacon factory, an oil-expressing plant, and a meat-canning factory have been successfully established.

A Land Bank makes loans to settlers on easy terms of repayment, for the purpose of improving and developing their agricultural holdings, and numerous companies have been formed with the purpose of developing land and minerals.

The total output of gold from 1890 to December 31, 1919, is valued at 45,227,793*l*. The gold output (1919) was 593,222 oz., valued at 2,499,498*l*. (1920), 552,497 oz., 3,056,549*l*. The output of other minerals in 1919 was: silver, 172,000 oz., valued at 34,099*l*.; copper, 3,012 tons, valued at 207,470*l*.; chrome ore, 35,282 tons, valued at 142,541*l*.; coal, 510,040 tons raised, value 189,138*l*.; asbestos, 9,799 tons, valued at 425,240*l*.; iron stone, 2,500 tons, value 312*l*. Small amounts of wolframite, scheelite, antimony, and arsenic, together with 385 carats of diamonds, were also produced. The total mineral output for 1919 was valued at 3,519,375*l*. Manganese nickel, tungsten, vanadium, molybdenum, tantalum and zirconium also exist.

The total value of imports into Southern Rhodesia in 1919 was 2,206,853*l*., the chief being: living animals, 86,692*l*.; food and drink, 422,299*l*.; textile goods, wearing apparel, boots, etc., 785,045*l*.; machinery, 123,368*l*.; railway and tramway materials, 317,374*l*. The value of the exports of South African produce, exclusive of gold, was 1,935,603*l*., the chief being: asbestos, 240,210*l*.; maize, 241,328*l*.; blister copper, 449,699*l*.; animals, 284,112*l*.; hides and skins, 141,641*l*.; tobacco, 82,613*l*. Gold exports, 2,499,498*l*. Imports of merchandise from the United Kingdom (1919), 1,309,807*l*.

The Rhodesian Railway system begins at Vryburg in the Cape Colony, and extends northwards to the Congo State border, a through communication from Cape Town to the Congo border (2,149 miles), and north-east from Bulawayo to Salisbury, and thence to the port of Beira on the Indian Ocean. There are also several branch lines in Southern Rhodesia. The total mileage of the Rhodesian Railway Systems (including the Beira Railway) at the end of 1919 was 2,468.

On December 31, 1919, there were in Southern Rhodesia 105 post offices, 36 of which are money order and savings bank offices. During the year ended December 31, 1919, 6,159,858 letters and post-cards were despatched.

The total of newspapers, books, and parcels despatched was 1,064,410, and registered articles 91,032. The postal revenue for the year was 56,910*l.*, and the expenditure, 43,705*l.* Telegraphic revenue, 57,191*l.*, expenditure, 56,321*l.*

On January 1, 1905, a Post Office Savings Bank was established, and on December 31, 1919, the deposits amounted to 108,169*l.*

On December 31, 1919, the mileage of the Rhodesia telegraph system was 8,093. There were 116 telegraph offices open. In Southern Rhodesia during the year 1919, 848,019 telegrams were received and despatched. There is an extensive telephone system in operation.

Administrative revenue of Southern Rhodesia, 1918-19, 961,871*l.* (mainly from customs and excise, 298,092*l.*; native tax, 233,367*l.*; posts and telegraphs, 100,505*l.*; stamps and licences, 69,627*l.*; income tax and excess profits duty, 60,278*l.*); administrative expenditure, 858,063*l.*; (mainly administration, 224,954*l.*; defence, 196,082*l.*; posts and telegraphs, 77,801*l.*; education, 110,892*l.*; hospitals, 77,595*l.*; agriculture and veterinary, 68,643*l.*). Administrative revenue, 1919-20, 1,050,879*l.*; expenditure, 1,309,807*l.*

Northern Rhodesia.—By an Order in Council, dated May 4, 1911, the two provinces of North-Eastern and North-Western Rhodesia were amalgamated under the title of Northern Rhodesia, the amalgamation taking effect as from August 17, 1911. The limits of the territory, as defined by the Order in Council, are 'the parts of Africa bounded by Southern Rhodesia, German South-west Africa (now South-west Africa), Portuguese West Africa, the Congo Free State, German East Africa (now Tanganyika Territory), Nyasaland, and Portuguese East Africa.'

Northern Rhodesia has an area of about 291,000 square miles, and consists for the most part of high plateau country, covered with thin forest. Much of the country is suitable for farming and contains large areas carrying good arable and grazing land. The permanent European population was estimated at 2,945 in 1919. The native population is estimated at about 928,000. The territory is divided into ten magisterial districts. The administrative headquarters are at Livingstone, on the Zambesi. The most important centres are Fort Jameson, Fife, Abercorn, Fort Rosebery, Broken Hill, Ndola, and Lealui. The police force, called the Northern Rhodesia Police, is composed of natives, with European officers and non-commissioned officers.

Agricultural products are maize, cotton, tobacco, wheat, and European fruits. Rubber is also produced. There is plenty of timber of various kinds. There are gold, copper, zinc, and lead mines in the territory; and coal has been discovered. (Lead mined in 1919, 14,174 tons, 226,777*l.*).

The trunk line of the Rhodesian railway system traverses Northern Rhodesia from Livingstone to the Congo border. The Zambesi, Kafue, Chambesi, and other rivers of Northern Rhodesia are navigable for a considerable portion of their extent.

In Northern Rhodesia there are 39 post offices, 12 being money order offices. There is a telegraph line alongside the railway from Livingstone to the Congo border. The African Transcontinental telegraph system extends to Abercorn, Fife, and Fort Jameson.

The Northern Rhodesia Order in Council (May 4, 1911), provides for the appointment of an Imperial officer, styled the Resident Commissioner, who may be the officer holding the same position in Southern Rhodesia, and of an Administrator appointed by the British South Africa Company with the approval of the Secretary of State. The Administrator has an Advisory

Revenue, 1918-19, 152,099*l.* (native tax, 88,485*l.*; customs, 36,421*l.*; stamps and licences, 7,571*l.*; medical, 6,547*l.*; posts and telegraphs, 9,679*l.*; fines and fees, 2,764*l.*); expenditure, 199,170*l.* Revenue, 1919-20, 149,792*l.*; expenditure, 215,288*l.* Imports, exclusive of specie, 1919, 434,354*l.*; exports, 454,366*l.*, including living animals, 70,852*l.*, copper ore, etc., 26,821*l.*; pig lead and ingot, 208,045*l.*; corn, grain, and flour, 63,305*l.*; hides, skins, and horns, 17,333*l.*

The capital of the Company was originally 1,000,000*l.*; in 1908 it amounted, by successive additions, to 9,000,000*l.*; amount issued and paid up at March 31, 1917, 8,937,533*l.*; debentures (5 per cent. free of tax), 1,250,000*l.*

Administrator of Southern Rhodesia.—Sir Drummond Chaplin, K.C.M.G.

Acting Administrator of Northern Rhodesia.—H. C. Marshall, C.M.G.

Resident Commissioner.—C. Douglas Jones, C.M.G.

SWAZILAND.

Swaziland, at the South-eastern corner of the Transvaal, was, by the Convention of 1894, placed under the administration of (but not incorporated with) the South African Republic; the British Government has now the control of the territory. The paramount chief, Sobhuza, son of the late paramount chief Bunu, is about twenty-one years of age, and the chief regency is in the hands of his grandmother, Nabotsibeni, widow of Mbandeni. On June 25, 1903, an Order in Council was issued conferring on the Governor of the Transvaal authority over Swaziland, and by Order in Council of December 1, 1906, this authority was transferred to the High Commissioner for South Africa. The numerous mineral and land concessions and monopolies granted by Mbandeni, many of which carried exemption from customs dues or invested private individuals with powers properly exercisable by the Crown, rendered any satisfactory form of Government difficult. A Proclamation, therefore, provided for the constitution of a Commission to inquire into the question of these concessions. Under this Proclamation the High Commissioner has exercised the power to expropriate monopolies conferring exclusive rights, compensation for which has been made out of loans raised for the purpose. The agricultural and grazing rights of natives have been safeguarded, and delimited; a general survey of the territory in connection with concession claims has also been carried out.

Gold is subject to a tax of 10 per cent. on profits; base metals to a royalty of 2½ per cent. on output, in addition to any rentals now payable, plus 5s. in the £ Excess Profits Tax.

A Special Court, having the full jurisdiction of a Superior Court, and Assistant Commissioners' Courts have been established. A local Swaziland police force was created in 1907. Authorised strength (1920) 24 Europeans and 161 natives. During the year ended March 31st, 1920, there were 1,939 summary convictions, and 80 convictions in the Superior Court.

Native chiefs continue to exercise jurisdiction according to native law and customs in all civil matters between natives, subject to a final appeal to the Resident Commissioner.

The present seat of the administration is at Mbabane; altitude 4,000 feet.

Area, 6,678 square miles; population (1911), 99,959, of whom 98,733 are natives (of Zulu type), 143 other coloured persons, and 1,083 whites. The European population is now (1920) about 1,800. The Government maintains 11 European schools at different centres, and 1 native school at native schools and a school for coloured children.

Zombode, the kraal of the Regent.

The Government also subsidises other

Since 1904 177,412*l.* has been spent on the expropriation of monopolies and in connection with the Swaziland Concessions Commission and the Partitions of Concessions. The public debt of Swaziland amounts (1920) to 92,500*l.*

The agricultural products are tobacco, maize (the staple product), millet, pumpkins, ground nuts, beans, and sweet potatoes, grown in insufficient quantities for local supply. Attempts are being made to introduce cotton-growing. Stock numbers approximately (1920): horses, 600; cattle, 230,000; native sheep and goats, 250,000; pigs, 9,000. Approximately 300,000 sheep are brought into Swaziland from the Transvaal each year for winter grazing. The territory is reported to be rich in minerals, but it has not yet been systematically prospected. Alluvial tin is being mined and shipped. In 1919-20 the output of tin was 449 tons, valued at 66,676*l.* There are several gold mines, but only one was worked in 1919-20, the output being 33·7 oz. valued at 168*l.* By agreement (dated June 30, 1910) with the Union of South Africa, Swaziland is treated for customs purposes as part of the Union and receives a pro rata share of the Customs dues collected. During the year 1919-20 this share amounted to 11,376*l.* Separate returns of Swaziland imports and exports are not available. The exports consist almost entirely of cassiterite tin.

There is tri-weekly communication by motor between Bremersdorp, Mbabane and Carolina. Elsewhere communication is by small carts or runners. Post offices working in 1919-20, 14. There are telegraph offices at Mbabane, Pigg's Peak, Bremersdorp, and Ezulweni. Post Office Savings Banks deposits, 2,311*l.* on March 31, 1920, belonging to 204 depositors.

The currency is British coin and coins of the late South African Republic, which are of similar denomination to the British. The National Bank of South Africa, Ltd., has branches at Mbabane and Hlatikulu, and sub-branches at Mahamba and Bremersdorp. The deposits on March 31, 1920, amounted to 64,052*l.* This bank also conducts savings bank business—111 depositors, 1920, total deposits 1,981*l.*

THE UNION OF SOUTH AFRICA.

Constitution and Government.

The Union of South Africa is constituted under the South Africa Act, 1909 (9 Edw. 7, Ch. 9), passed by the Parliament of the United Kingdom on September 20, 1909. Under the terms of that Act the self-governing Colonies of the Cape of Good Hope, Natal, the Transvaal, and the Orange River Colony were united on May 31, 1910, in a legislative union under one Government under the name of the Union of South Africa, these Colonies becoming original provinces of the Union under the names of the Cape of Good Hope, Natal, the Transvaal, and the Orange Free State respectively. Under the Act constituting the Union, the Sovereign appoints a Governor-General, who, with an Executive Council (of which the members are chosen and summoned by him), administers the executive government of the Union as the Governor-General in Council. Departments of State have been established, the Governor-General appointing not more than ten officers to administer them. Such officers are King's Ministers of State for the Union and members of the executive Council.

Legislative power is vested in a Parliament consisting of the King, a Senate, and a House of Assembly. The Governor-General has power to summon, prorogue, and dissolve Parliament, either both Houses simultaneously or the House of Assembly alone; but the Senate may not be dissolved within 10 years of the establishment of the Union. There must be a session of Parliament every year.

The Senate consists of forty members. For ten years after the establishment of Union eight (four being selected mainly for their acquaintance with the reasonable wants and wishes of the coloured races) are nominated by the Governor-General in Council and thirty-two are elected, eight for each Province. The first election was made prior to the establishment of the Union by the two Houses of each of the Colonial Legislatures sitting as one body, and a vacancy is filled by the choice of the Provincial Council in respect of whose Province a vacancy occurs. The Constitution of the Senate after ten years may be provided for by Parliament, but if no such provision is made the arrangements made in the South Africa Act are to hold good. Each senator must be a British subject of European descent at least 30 years of age, qualified as a voter in one of the provinces and resident for five years within the Union; an elected senator must be a registered owner of property of the value of 500*l.* over any mortgage. Result of elections in February, 1921: S. African Party, 17; Nationalists, 13; Labour, 2.

The House of Assembly consists of 134 members chosen in Electoral Divisions in numbers as follows:—The Cape of Good Hope, 51; Natal, 17; Transvaal, 49; Orange Free State, 17. Parliamentary voters must have the qualifications as existing in the several colonies at the time of the Union. Each electoral district in each province returns one member, who must be a British subject of European descent, qualified as a registered voter and resident five years within the Union. A House of Assembly is to continue five years from the date of its first meeting unless sooner dissolved.

Each member of each House must make Oath or Affirmation of Allegiance. A member of one House cannot be elected to the other, but a Minister of State may sit and speak, but not vote in the House of which he is not a member. To hold an office of profit under the Crown (with certain exceptions) is a disqualification for membership of either House, as are also insolvency, crime, and insanity. Certain disabilities which members of Parliament had, or might have, become subject in assisting in Naval and Military operations during the war were made the subject of special legislation in 1915.

The House of Assembly, not the Senate, must originate money bills, but may not pass a bill for taxation or appropriation unless it has been recommended by message from the Governor-General during the Session. Restrictions are placed on the amendment of money bills by the Senate. Provision is made for adjusting disagreements between the Houses, and for the Royal Assent to bills to be given or reserved, and for laws assented to by the Governor-General being disallowed.

The first Parliamentary election under the South Africa Act was held on the 15th September, 1910. The position of the various parties after the general election of February, 1921, was:—South African Party, 79; Nationalists, 45; Labour Party, 9; Independents, 1.

Pretoria is the seat of government of the Union, and Cape Town is the seat of Legislature.

Governor-General.—H.R.H. Prince Arthur of Connaught, K.G., K.T., G.C.M.G., G.C.V.O., C.B., A.D.C. (salary £10,000 per annum).

The Executive Council is constituted as follows:—

Prime Minister and Minister of Native Affairs.—General The Right Honourable J. C. Smuts, P.O., C.H. (3,500*l.*).

Minister of the Interior, Public Health and Education.—The Honourable Patrick Duncan (2,500*l.*).

Minister of Mines and Industries.—The Honourable F. S. Malan (2,500*l.*).

Minister of Railways and Harbours.—The Honourable — Jagger (2,500*l.*).

Minister of Finance.—The Honourable H. Burton, K.C. (2,500*l.*).

Minister of Justice.—The Honourable N. J. de Wet, K.C. (2,500*l.*).

Minister of Defence.—Colonel The Honourable H. Mentz (2,500*l.*).

Minister of Posts and Telegraphs and of Public Works.—The Honourable Sir Thomas Watt, K.C.M.G. (2,500*l.*).

Secretary for Agriculture.—The Honourable Sir Thomas Smarth.

Minister of Lands.—The Honourable Colonel Reitz.

In each province there is an Administrator appointed by the Governor-General for five years, and a Provincial Council elected for three years, each council having an executive committee of four (either members or not of the council), the administrator presiding at its meetings. Members of the Provincial Council are elected on the same system as members of Parliament, but the restriction as to European descent does not apply. The number of members in each Provincial Council is as follows:—Cape of Good Hope, 51; Natal, 25; Transvaal, 49; Orange Free State, 25. The provincial committees and councils have authority to deal with local matters such as provincial finance, education (elementary), charity, municipal institutions, local works, roads and bridges, markets, fish and game, and penalties for breaches of laws respecting such subjects. Other matters may be delegated to these Councils. All ordinances passed by a Provincial Council are subject to the veto of the Governor-General-in-Council.

The first Provincial elections for the Cape of Good Hope and the Transvaal were held on the 15th September, 1910; those for Natal and the Orange Free State on the 12th October, 1910.

There is a provincial Revenue Fund in each province. The old colonial capitals are the capitals of the provinces.

A Harbour and Railway Board of not more than three commissioners appointed for five years, with a Minister of State as chairman, have the management of the railways, ports, and harbours. There is a Railway and Harbour Fund for the Union and into it are paid revenues from the administration of railways, ports, and harbours, and such Fund is appropriated by Parliament. Into a Consolidated Revenue Fund is paid all other money received for the purposes of the Union. On this fund the interest on debts of the colonies forms a first charge. To the Union has been transferred the public property, real and personal, of the colonies.

The English and Dutch languages are both official. The administration of native affairs and affairs specially or differentially affecting Asiatics vests in the Governor-General-in-Council. It is provided that the British South Africa Co.'s territories may be received into the Union, and the government of native territories may be transferred to the Union Government.

High Commissioner in London.—Sir E. Walton.

Area and Population.

The total area of the Union is 473,096 square miles divided between the Provinces as follows:—Cape of Good Hope, 276,966; Natal, 35,291; Transvaal, 110,450; Orange Free State, 50,389.

The census taken in 1904 in each of the four Colonies which subsequently (in 1910) were incorporated in the Union was the first simultaneous census taken in South Africa. While comparisons are possible in respect of the numbers of the population of separate Provinces for earlier periods than 1904, full comparison is only possible in respect of the whole area of the Union for the years 1904 and 1911—the latter being the year in which the first Union census was taken; and for the year 1918 as to the European population only.

The following tables give the returns of population at the various censuses classified according to race and sex:—

Year	All Races			White		Coloured

Instruction.

Under the South Africa Act, for a period of five years after the establishment of the Union and thereafter subject to decree of Parliament, control of education other than higher education was granted to the four Provincial Administrations. This arrangement still obtains. For practical purposes it has been provisionally determined that all post-matriculation instruction shall be deemed to constitute Higher Education,

Higher Education.—By legislation enacted in the Session of 1916 three Universities, with teaching and examining functions, were established in the place of the University of the Cape of Good Hope, provision being made for the conversion of the South African College into the University of Cape Town, of the Victoria College into the University of Stellenbosch, and of the University of the Cape of Good Hope into a federal University, styled the University of South Africa, with the remainder of the University Colleges as constituent colleges, the names of which, with appropriate details, will be found in the table hereunder. The actual establishment of the three new Universities took place on April 2, 1918.

The University Acts of 1916 also established two Boards, one consisting of representatives of the three Universities (South Africa, Cape Town and Stellenbosch), the Provincial and Union Education Departments, and of the teachers of public and private secondary schools, which is charged with the conduct of the matriculation examination, and the other for the conduct of the professional examinations in law and surveying.

Justice.

The Common Law of the Union is the Roman-Dutch Law, that is, the uncodified law of Holland as it was at the date of the cession of the Cape in 1806. The sources of the law are the Dutch Commentaries and text-books of the seventeenth, eighteenth, and early nineteenth centuries. The Law of England as such is not recognised as authoritative, though by Statute the principles of English Law relating to mercantile matters—e.g., companies, patents, trademarks, insolvency and the like, have been introduced. In shipping, insurance, and other modern business developments English Law is followed, and it has also largely influenced civil and criminal procedure. In all other matters, family relations, property, succession, contract, &c., Roman-Dutch Law rules, English decisions being valued only so far as they agree therewith. The prerogatives of the Crown are, generally speaking, the same as in England.

The Supreme Court consists of an Appellate Division with a Chief Justice and two ordinary and two additional Judges of Appeal. In each Province of the Union there is a Provincial Division of the Supreme Court; while in the Cape there are two Local Divisions, and in the Transvaal one, exercising the same jurisdiction within limited areas as the Provincial Divisions. The Judges hold office during good behaviour. The Circuit System is fully developed.

Each Province is further divided into Districts with a Magistrate's Court having a prescribed civil and criminal jurisdiction. From this Court there is an appeal to the Provincial and Local Divisions of the Supreme Court, and thence to the Appellate Division. A distinctive feature of the Criminal system is that Magistrate's convictions carrying sentences above a prescribed limit are subject to automatic review by a Judge.

Persons convicted, all courts, 1919: males, 210,131, females, 21,400.

Chief-Justice of South Africa.—The Rt. Hon. Sir James Rose-Innes, P.C., K.C.M.G. (Appointed 19 October, 1914).

Finance.

Prior to 1913-14 the expenditure of the four Provinces was entirely met from grants by the Union Government. Under the Financial Relations Act 1913, which came into operation on April 1, 1913, certain revenues were transferred or assigned to the Provinces, and the grants by the Union Government were limited to 50 per cent. of the total normal or recurrent expenditure of the Provinces, with additional subsidies to two Provinces in which the funds so provided were shown to be inadequate to meet the necessary expenditure. The Act also provided that the capital expenditure of the Provinces should be financed by redeemable loans from the Union Treasury the interest and sinking fund charges on which should be included in the normal or recurrent expenditure and thus be subject to the 50 per cent grant.

The estimated expenditure for 1920-21 is : railways, 24,220,680*l*. ; harbours, 903,918*l*.

There is a provincial revenue fund in every Province, into which all revenues raised or received by the Province are paid. Appropriations are effected by Ordinance of the Provincial Council. It is only under the authority of such an Appropriation Ordinance that any withdrawal from the fund can take place. The provincial accounts are audited in each case by an auditor appointed and paid by the Union Government.

Defence.

During the latter part of the Great War the Union of South Africa provided the whole of the military forces necessary for its defence, and the last of the regular British troops were withdrawn. The forces of the Union are raised under a Defence Act under which all citizens are liable to service within the Dominion. As this would provide an unnecessarily large force, only a proportion of the younger men are annually enrolled, and it is hoped that this proportion will volunteer. If sufficient volunteers are not forthcoming the balance will be obtained by ballot. Men who do not undergo training are liable to pay 1*l.* a year for 24 years. The period during which men are liable to training is four years between the ages of 17 and 25. There is a period of preliminary recruit training followed by annual training of from 8 to 25 days. Men so trained form the Active Citizen Army. After completing four years training in the Active Citizen Army, men join the Citizen Reserve Force until they are 45. In addition to the Active Citizen Army there is a Coast Garrison Force composed of Garrison Artillery and Engineers, which is voluntarily enlisted and receives payment for its services. There is also a Permanent Force which includes the staffs of the defensive forces, five regiments of mounted riflemen, and some batteries of artillery. The Coast Defence Force and the Permanent Force have their own reserves formed from the men who have passed through their ranks.

Boys between the ages of 13 and 17 are compulsorily enrolled in cadet corps, where this is practicable, but it is recognised that this is not possible in sparsely populated districts. Trained cadets enjoy certain exemptions from recruit training on joining the Active Citizen Army.

Finally there is the National Reserve, comprising all citizens between the ages of 17 and 60 who do not belong to any of the above forces.

During 1920 the demobilization of the defence forces of the Union was completed, and a peace establishment was introduced.

Production and Industry.

Agriculture.—Wheat-growing has made a big forward movement, as will be seen from the following table giving the quantity of wheat produce during the years 1904, 1911, and 1918 :—

Year.	Cape of Good Hope.	Natal.	Transvaal.	Orange Free State.	Union.

Other products, including Native Reserves, &c., 1919: barley 50,789,000 lbs. ; oats, 214,039,000 lbs. ; Kaffir corn, 383,524,000 lbs. ; potatoes, 220,066,000 lbs. ; tobacco, 16,603,000 lbs.

In dairying, too, good progress has been made. In 1919-20 the production of butter amounted to 13,783,000 lbs., and of cheese, 3,756,000 lbs.

The 1919 census (Agriculture) showed that the numbers of various classes of livestock in the Union were as follows :—5,575,488 cattle ; 695,138 horses ; 81,150 mules ; 498,616 donkeys ; 282,070 ostriches ; 28,491,500 sheep ; 5,842,270 goats ; 724,007 pigs. (This census covered rural areas only, to the exclusion of towns, villages, and native reserves.)

The production of wool and mohair (1919 exports : wool, 184,952,800 lbs. ; mohair, 16,942,021 lbs.) is being maintained. The slump in ostrich feathers during the war seriously reduced the output, though with the signing of the Armistice toward the close of 1918 the feather industry underwent a rapid revival (exports, 1919, 105,000 lbs., 1,646,000*l.*). In 1919 hides and skins valued at 4,992,597*l.* and wattle bark valued at 386,096*l.* were exported.

Cotton-growing is now undertaken by many farmers, the plant being found a better drought resistant than either tobacco or maize. The 1919 yield was approximately 1,418,600 lbs. of seed cotton. The production of sugar continues to increase, the output in the Union in 1916-17 being estimated at 114,500 tons ; in 1917-18, 106,250 tons ; in 1918-19, 146,553 tons. The area under tea is approximately 4,136 acres, from which the yield for 1918-19 was 5,744,000 lbs. (green leaf). It is estimated that some 15,000 acres of land suitable for tea plantations are available.

The total extent of forest reserve areas in March, 1919, was about 2,092,000 acres.

Irrigation.—Irrigation development has made rapid strides in the past ten years. Technical and financial assistance is given by the State under the Union Irrigation Law of 1912, which was designed to encourage irrigation. The Government expenditure on irrigation in 1918-19 was 384,810*l.* from Loan Funds and 147,733*l.* from revenue ; total 532,543*l.*

Manufactures.—The conditions brought about by the war gave an impetus to local manufactures. The production of leather, for which this country is most suitable, has been more than doubled ; a commencement has been made with the manufacture of tanning extract from wattle bark ; in dairy products, increasing activity is everywhere being shown ; and the output of cement is rapidly overtaking the demands of the country. The Union already produces its own requirements in beer and matches. The manufacture of tobacco satisfactorily maintains its position as one of the most important industries in the country. Amongst other commodities which the Union is producing are dynamite, soap, rope, wine, spirits, furniture, vehicles, brooms and brushes, biscuits, earthenware pipes, and firebricks.

The report on the industrial census in the Union in 1918-19 gives the value added by process of manufacture, &c., as 29,199,000*l.*, and the value of the gross production of the industries covered at 70,136,000*l.* The total number of factories which made returns was 6,042. Value of land and buildings, 16,193,000*l.*, machinery, plant, and tools, 20,983,000*l.*, of the fuel used, 2,065,000*l.*, and of materials used 41,017,000*l.* Average number of persons employed, 143,088 (whites, 53,601). Wages paid, 14,476,000*l.*

The gross value of the output of the principal groups of industries was : food, drink, &c., 27,098,000*l.* ; metals, engineering, &c., 12,963,000*l.* ; chemicals, &c., 5,616,000*l.* ; heat, light, and power, 3,743,000*l.* ; building, &c., 3,349,000*l.* ; clothing, textiles, &c., 2,940,000*l.* ; books, printing, &c., 2,750,000*l.* ; leather, &c., 2,664,000*l.* ; stone, clay, &c., 1,679,000*l.* ; vehicles, 1,462,000*l.* ; furniture, &c., 1,332,000*l.*

Mining.—The table hereunder gives the total value of the principal minerals produced in the Union from the earliest dates of existing records to December 31, 1919. The value of gold is calculated at 4·24773*l.* per

The total exports, excluding gold and specie, in 1919, were 52,098,752*l.*, of which 29,770,104*l.* went to the United Kingdom; 4,101,186*l.* to the rest of the Empire; 7,961,115*l.* to the U.S.A.; and 3,779,613*l.* to Japan.

Shipping and Communications.

Oversea shipping 1919: entered, 1,075 vessels of 3,647,000 tons net; cleared, 1,070 of 3,586,000 tons. Coastwise: entered, 2,124 vessels of 4,013,000 tons net; cleared 2,100 of 4,040,000 tons.

Prior to Union, which took effect in May, 1910, the state railways of the several colonies now comprising the Union were operated by the separate Governments. In May, 1910, the Government lines were merged into one system, the South African Railways, under the control of the Union Government. The total open mileage of this system at the end of March, 1919, was 9,542 (comprising Cape 4,254 miles, Orange Free State 1,342 miles, Transvaal 2,644 miles, and Natal, 1,302 miles), of which 8,982 miles are 3*ft.* 6*in.* gauge, and 560 miles 2 ft. gauge. The capital expenditure on Government Railways up to March 31, 1919, amounted to 94,331,365*l.*, including 15,323,292*l.* in respect of rolling stock. Mileage of private lines, 507 miles (Cape, 453, Natal, 50, O.F.S., 4).

At the end of 1919 there were in the Union 2,665 post offices. Telegrams dealt with numbered 7,230,935. The number of money orders issued during the year was 413,607, and the value 3,046,280*l.*, while 417,279 orders of the value of 2,968,132*l.* were paid. 3,288,645 postal orders amounting to 1,939,663*l.* were issued, and 2,929,539, valued at 1,649,684*l.* paid.

The revenue of the Post Office in 1919 was 1,277,100*l.*, and the expenditure 1,367,350*l.* The revenue of the telegraph and telephone services (excluded from the previous figures) was 950,683*l.*, and the expenditure 950,194*l.*

12,842 miles of telegraph line, carrying 43,938 miles of wire, and 3,250 miles of telephone line, carrying 128,604 miles of wire, were open. 7,673 wireless messages were dealt with during the year 1919.

The number of depositors in the Government Savings Bank in the Union at the end of March, 1920, was 307,486, and the amount standing to their credit was 7,079,789*l.*

PROVINCE OF THE CAPE OF GOOD HOPE.

Constitution and Government.—The Colony of the Cape of Good Hope was originally founded by the Dutch in the year 1652. Britain took possession of it in 1795 but evacuated it in 1803. A British force again took possession in 1806 and the Colony has remained a British Possession since that date. It was formally ceded to Great Britain by the Convention of London, August 13, 1814. The original Colony has been extended from time to time. East and West Pondoland were annexed in 1894 and Bechuanaland in 1895. For many years the form of government in the Colony depended on the terms of the Royal Letters Patent and Instructions to Governors. Letters Patent issued in 1850 to Governor Sir Henry Smith declared that in the Colony there should be a Parliament which should consist of the Governor, a Legislative Council, and a House of Assembly.

A Constitution Ordinance was enacted by Order in Council of March 11, 1853, and took effect on May 1 ensuing. This Order in Council provided that nothing it contained should prevent the Parliament of the Colony from making Acts (subject to the power of Her Majesty in Council either to disallow or assent to such Acts) in amendment of the said Ordinance. This power of amending the Constitution was exercised from time to time as the bounds of the Colony were extended. In 1872 an Act was passed at the Cape and assented to by Order in Council, providing for the system of executive administration known as Responsible Government. The Constitution formed under these various Acts vested the executive in the Governor and an Executive Council, composed of certain office holders appointed by the Crown. On the 31st May, 1910, the Colony was merged in the Union of South Africa, thereafter forming an original province of the Union.

Cape Town is the seat of the Provincial Administration.

Administrator.—The Hon. Sir Frederic de Waal, K.C.M.G. (Salary 2,500*l.*)

The Province is divided into 119 magisterial districts, and the Colony proper, including Bechuanaland, but exclusive of the Transkeian territories, into 86 fiscal divisions. In each division there is a Civil Commissioner, who is, in all cases where the fiscal and magisterial areas coincide, also the Resident Magistrate. Each division has a Council of at least 6 members (14 in the Cape Division) elected triennially by the owners or occupiers of immoveable property. These Councils look after roads, boundaries, and beacons; return 3 members to the Licensing Court, and perform other local duties.

There are 128 Municipalities, each governed by a Mayor or Chairman and Councillors, a certain number of whom are elected annually by the ratepayers. There are also 75 Village Management Boards.

Area and Population.—The following table gives the population of the Cape of Good Hope at each census :—

Of the coloured population in 1911, 19,763 were Malaya, and 415,282 a mixture of various races; the rest are Hottentots, Fingoes, Kaffirs, and Bechuanas.

Chief towns : white population in 1918 :—Cape Town, 99,693 ; Kimberley 17,188 ; Port Elizabeth, 23,339 ; Graham's Town, 7,087 ; Paarl, 5,550

King William's Town, 5,685 ; East London, 17,592 ; Graaff-Reinet, 3,886 ; Worcester, 8,618 ; Uitenhage, 7,103 ; Oudtshoorn, 5,181.

Of the European population in 1911, 24,245 were professional, 143,925 domestic, 37,796 commercial, 87,795 agricultural, 50,081 industrial, 232,730 were dependants, and 5,855 indefinite and unspecified. Of the coloured population the great majority are engaged in agricultural or domestic employments.

Marriages, births and deaths in six years, so far as registered :—

Years	Marriages	Births	Deaths
1913(pre-war)	12,133	58,787	39,532
1915	11,069	59,344	37,961
1916	11,344	57,658	40,509
1917	11,814	55,529	41,023
1918	11,514	55,870	88,024
1919	14,227	47,770	45,784

Religion.—In 1911 there were 1,437,688 Christians—479,825 Dutch Churches, 282,619 Anglican Communion (including Church of England, Church of Province of South Africa, Church of Ireland, Episcopal Church of Scotland, Episcopalian), 74,005 Presbyterians, 147,378 Independents or Congregationalists, 285,283 Wesleyans, 19,161 other Methodists, 21,506 Lutherans, 21,167 Moravians, 22,953 Rhenish Mission, 12,234 other Lutherans, 13,704 Baptists, 35,934 Roman Catholics, 21,919 other Christians. Mohammedans 24,189, Jews 16,744. Of no religion, 1,077,998, of whom 1,047,233 were natives.

Instruction.—Local school administration is conducted by school boards and school committees, the unit of administration being the school district. There are now 121 such districts, each under the control of a school board, two-thirds of whose members are elected by the ratepayers and one-third nominated by Government and local authority. Boards have the power, subject to the Department, to establish and maintain schools ; subject to Departmental approval, further, they have the general financial control of schools under their jurisdiction, including the fixing of scales of fees and the hire of buildings. They also have power to enforce school attendance and in certain cases to allow free education. Every public school under a board is ordinarily managed by a committee elected by the parents or, in default, nominated by the board. Such committees have the general supervision of the school, and the selection of the teaching staff also rests with them. Grants in support of education are provided from the general revenue, the sources of revenue in the case of school boards being : Central government, 69.76 per cent. ; local education rate, 4.66 per cent. ; school fees, 25.17 per cent. ; other sources, .41 per cent. Aided schools, June 30, 1918, 4,794. There are 121,910 European pupils and 149,985 non-European. Total number of teachers 9,672.

Provincial expenditure on education (excluding Higher Education, which is under control of the Central Government), 1915-16, 917,856*l.* ; 1916-17, 976,294*l.* ; 1917-18, 1,166,059*l.* ; 1918-19, 1,435,385*l.*

Charitable Institutions, Hospitals, Pauperism.—In the hospitals and kindred charitable institutions 18,466 in-patients, and 95,682 at Government-aided Hospitals, and 70,275 at Government Chronic Sick Hospitals, making a total of 165,957 out-patients, were treated in the year 1917. There is no system of poor-law relief, but 1,303 persons received indoor relief during the year.

Finance.—Since the coming into effect of the Union there is only one financial statement for the four provinces together. Particulars are given above under the Union. Since the passing of the Financial Relations Act, 1913, the Provincial revenue consists of certain revenues assigned to the Province and an amount voted by Parliament by way of subsidy. The following figures show the provincial revenue and expenditure for five years :—

	1913-14	1914-15	1915-16	1916-17	1917-18
REVENUE:—	£	£	£	£	£

The average annual ordinary expenditure in the six years ending 1917-18 was : for General Administration, 96,679*l.* ; Education, 933,720*l.* ; Hospitals and Poor Relief, 108,869*l.* ; Roads, Bridges and Works, 119,813*l.* Capital expenditure in 1917-18 was 264,611*l.*

Production and Industry.—In 1914, 919,420 acres of Crown lands were alienated, the amount realised being 52,265*l.* Up to December 31, 1914, the total area disposed of was about 141,039,952 acres, the quantity undisposed of being 36,336,708 acres. At December 31, 1919, the area unalienated was reduced to 26,713,330 acres.

For Mineral Production, see p. 220.

Commerce.—Since the coming into effect of the Union there are no special records of trade for each of the Provinces. The British Board of Trade statistics, however, continue to give details of trade between the United Kingdom and each Province separately. The following figures show the value of the trade between the Cape of Good Hope Province and the United Kingdom for five years :—

	1913 (pre-war)	1917	1918	1919	1920 <sup>1</sup>

PROVINCE OF NATAL.

Constitution and Government.—Natal, which had been annexed to Cape Colony in 1844, was placed under separate government in 1845, and under charter of July 15, 1856, was erected into a separate Colony. By this charter partially representative institutions were established, and, under a Natal Act of 1893, assented to by Order in Council, June 26, 1893, the Colony obtained responsible government. The province of Zululand was annexed to Natal on December 30, 1897. The districts of Vryheid, Utrecht and part of Wakkerstroom, formerly belonging to the Transvaal, were in January, 1903, annexed to the colony. On May 31, 1910, the Colony was merged in the Union of South Africa, becoming an original province of the Union.

The seat of provincial government in Natal is Pietermaritzburg.

Administrator.—The Hon. G. T. Plowman, C.M.G.

Area and Population.—The Province (including Zululand, 10,424 square miles) has an area of 85,291 square miles, with a seaboard of about 360 miles. The climate is sub-tropical on the coast and somewhat colder inland. It is well suited to Europeans. The Province is divided into 40 Magisterial Divisions.

The European population has more than trebled since 1879. The returns of the total population at the last four censuses were :—

Census Year.	All Races.			White.		Coloured.
	Total.	Males.	Females.	Males.	Females.	Males.	Females.
1891 . .	543,913	268,062	275,851	25,787	21,001	242,275	254,850
1904 . .	1,108,754	550,631	558,123	56,758	40,851	493,873	517,772
1911 . .	1,194,043	564,648	629,395	52,495	45,619	512,153	583,776
1918 . .	—	—	—	62,745	59,186	—	—

The figures for 1891 exclude Zululand; those for 1904 and 1911 include the districts of Vryheid, Utrecht, Paulpietersburg, Ngotshe, and Babanango. The number of males in 1911 was 564,648, and of females, 629,395.

Population of the borough of Durban according to the census of May 7 1911, 69,187, consisting of Europeans, 31,783, natives (including half-castes) 17,784, Indians and Asiatics, 19,620; and of Pietermaritzburg, 30,555 consisting of 14,737 Europeans, 7,789 Indians and Asiatics, 8,029 natives including half-castes. The white population of Durban in 1918 was 43,413 and of Pietermaritzburg, 18,525.

So far as registered, the births in 1918 numbered 38,091 (2,924 European 35,167 coloured); deaths, 28,998 (1,577 European, 27,421 non-European) and marriages, 2,614 (1,041 European, 1,573 non-European).

Instruction.—With the exception of Higher Education, which has been placed under the control of the Union Government, Education comes under the Provincial Administration. There are, for children of European extraction 171 schools giving primary, 7 schools giving intermediate, and 10 giving secondary education, in all 188 schools, which are supported either entirely or partially by Government funds. In addition there are 3 special vocational schools, 1 training school for teachers, and 143 farm schools. For coloured children, there are 398 state and state-aided schools (including 4 for Indians), as well as 6 schools provided for the training of coloured teachers. The aggregate number of European pupils in regular attendance at the Government and inspected schools was 20,711 for 1917; the average daily attendance 90·1 per cent. of the number on the registers. The number of coloured children receiving instruction in 1917 amounted to 23,812. A sum of 50,992*l.* was spent on coloured education during 1918 out of public funds; the corresponding figure in respect of European education was approximately 384,000*l.* About 1,100 children attend private unaided schools, and it is estimated that only a very small percentage of white children are receiving no education.

	1913-14	1914-15	1915-16	1916-17	1917-18
Revenue:—	£	£	£	£	£
Provincial . . . . .	118,486	99,923	105,390	124,665	172,159
Union Subsidy . . . . .	332,000	332,500	309,000	354,323	283,778
Total Revenue . . . . .	451,486	432,423	414,390	478,993	555,937
Total Ordinary Expenditure . . . . .	451,002	448,175	439,826	477,089	532,448

The estimated ordinary expenditure for 1918-19 was 666,198*l.* The capital expenditure in 1918-19 was 157,092*l.*

Production and Industry.—At the end of March, 1918, the area of Crown land which remained unalienated and could be taken up for agricultural or pastoral purposes was 1,178,000 morgen (1 morgen = 2·1165 acres approx.). On the Coast and in Zululand there are vast plantations of sugar (output, 1917-18, 108,000 tons, value 2,700,000*l.*) and tea, while cereals of all kinds (especially maize), fruits, vegetables, the Acacia molissima, the bark of which is so much used for tanning purposes, and other crops grow prolifically.

The Province is rich in mineral wealth, particularly coal, the output of which is being maintained at a steadily progressive rate. There was in 1918 one gold mine conducting operations on a small scale (for statistics, see p. 220). Among other minerals known to exist in the Province are asbestos, copper ore, fireclay, gold, graphite, gypsum, iron ore, lead and silver ore, limestone and marble, manganese ore, mica, molybdenum ore, nickel ore, nitre, oil shale, and tin ore.

The various factory industries of Natal in 1917-18 (census of 1919) numbered 864, with an annual output valued at nearly 13,754,356*l.* They had 7,702,542*l.* invested in machinery, lands, and buildings, annually used materials worth 7,678,167*l.*, and paid over 2,255,326*l.* yearly in wages to 31,654 employees.

A Whaling Industry was commenced at Durban in 1908. Down to 1917 (nine years) 7,274 whales were captured. In 1917, 1918 and 1919, the whales captured numbered 176, 142 and 641 respectively. Only two companies, with 11 boats, were operating in 1919. The industry is now regulated by the Provincial Government, as indiscriminate slaughter was driving the whales away from the South African waters.

Commerce.—Since the coming into effect of the Union there are no special records made for each of the Provinces; the British Board of Trade statistics, however, continue to give details of trade between the United Kingdom and each Province separately. The following figures show the value of the trade between Natal Province and the United Kingdom for five years:—

PROVINCE OF THE TRANSVAAL.

Constitution and Government.—The territory comprised within the limits of The Transvaal was colonised by Boers who left Cape Colony in 1836-37. In 1852 the independence of the Transvaal Government was recognised by Great Britain, but, in 1877, in consequence of financial difficulties and troubles with the natives, and in accordance with representations and petitions from the Boers, the territory was annexed by the British Government. In 1880 the Boers took up arms for the restoration of their independence, and, in 1881, a Convention was signed restoring to the inhabitants of the territory their self-government, but with conditions, reservations, and limitations, and subject to the suzerainty of the Queen. This arrangement was modified by a Convention made in 1884, in which the name of the South African Republic was given to the Transvaal State ; but the control over external affairs, other than engagements with the Orange Free State, was reserved to her Majesty. These Conventions, however, did not preserve harmony within the Transvaal territory, or with the British Government. The discovery of gold and the conditions which followed this discovery occasioned difficulties from which the two Boer States sought release by military action. The result of this was the military occupation of the two countries, and their annexation to the British Crown, the one on September 1, 1900, under the name of The Transvaal, and the other (May 24) as the Orange River Colony. Hostilities continued till May 31, 1902, when an agreement as to terms of surrender was signed by the representatives of the burgher forces in the field. [See STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK for 1906, under The Transvaal.]

The administration was thereafter carried on under a Governor and Lieutenant-Governor, assisted by an Executive and a Legislative Council. On December 6, 1906, Letters Patent were issued providing for a Constitution of responsible Government in the Colony. The Colony was merged in the Union of South Africa on May 31, 1910, as an original Province of the Union.

The seat of provincial government for the Transvaal is at Pretoria. The position of the various parties in the Provincial Council after the election in August, 1920, was : South African Party, 10 ; Nationalists, 21 ; Labour, 11 ; Unionists, 6 ; Independent 1 ; total, 49.

Administrator.—The Hon. A. G. Robertson (salary, 2,500*l.*)

Area and Population.—The area of the Province is 110,450 square miles, divided into 24 districts. The following table shows the population at each of the last four censuses :—

CENSUS YEAR	ALL RACES			WHITE		COLOURED
	Total	Males	Females	Males	Females	Males	Females

Instruction.—The system of education was embodied in the Education Act which was passed during the first session of the first Parliament elected under responsible government, and which provides that all education except that of a university type shall be under the provincial authority. The Province has been divided for the purposes of local control and management into twenty-nine school districts, for each of which there is a school board consisting partly of elected and partly of nominated members. The board is an advisory local body with general powers of supervision over all public schools in its district except high schools and special schools or classes specified in the third schedule of the Education Act, 1907. Instruction in Government Schools, both primary and secondary, is free.

The following statistics of education are for the year ending Dec. 31, 1918:— 973 primary schools had 88,207 pupils ; 24 secondary schools, with a enrolment of 3,886 pupils ; 346 State and State-aided schools for coloured, native and Indian children, with 26,256 pupils. There are seven training institutions for European teachers, with 605 students ; and three for coloured teachers, with 290 students. An amount of 1,283,108*l.* was expended during the year for educational purposes.

In respect of the question of language, the medium of instruction up to and including the fourth standard is the home language (English or Dutch) of the pupil, but parents may request that the second language be gradually introduced as a second medium. Above the fourth standard provision is made for the instruction of pupils through the medium of English and Dutch, and the parent of each pupil may choose one of the two languages as the sole medium of instruction, or both of the languages as the media of instruction. If the parent of any pupil fails to exercise his right of choice, that pupil is instructed through the medium of the language which is the better known and understood by him, the other language being also used as far as possible as a medium of instruction. Bible History is taught in every school, but no doctrine or dogma peculiar to any religious denomination or sect may be taught.

Finance.—For financial arrangements see p. 216 above.

The following figures show the provincial revenue and expenditure for five years :—

	1913-14.	1914-15.	1915-16.	1916-17.	1917-18

A considerable proportion of the Provincial revenue is derived from Natives' Pass Fees.

The capital expenditure in 1918-19 was estimated at 800,000*l.*

Production and Industry.—The Province of the Transvaal is in the main a stock-raising country, though there are considerable areas well adapted for agriculture, including the growing of tropical crops. The extent of land under cultivation is given as over 2,000,000 acres; fallow land as about 470,000 acres; and grazing land as 29,900,000 acres. The maize and tobacco crops may be regarded as the most important.

The live stock numbered, in 1919, 3,244,840 sheep, 447,700 goats (including 90,700 of the valuable Angora breed).

For mineral production, see above, p. 220. The Transvaal Province has iron and brass foundries and engineering works, grain-mills, breweries, brick, tile, and pottery works, tobacco, soap, and candle factories, coach and wagon works, &c.

Commerce.—Since the coming into effect of the Union there are no special records of trade for each of the Provinces. The British Board of Trade statistics, however, continue to give details of trade between the United Kingdom and each Province. The following figures show the value of the trade between the Transvaal Province and the United Kingdom for five years:—

PROVINCE OF THE ORANGE FREE STATE.

The Orange River was first crossed by Europeans about the middle of the 18th century. Between 1810 and 1820, several Europeans settled in the southern parts of the Orange Free State. The Great Trek greatly augmented the number of settlers during and after 1836. At first no settled government was established. In 1848, Sir Harry Smith proclaimed the whole territory between the Orange and Vaal Rivers as a British Possession and established what was called the Orange River Sovereignty. A British Resident was appointed at Bloemfontein, with Assistant Commissioners at Winburg and Caledon River. Great dissatisfaction was caused by this step as well as by the native policy of the British Government. In 1854 the Convention of Bloemfontein, by which British Sovereignty was withdrawn and the independence of the country was recognised, was signed by Sir George Russell Clerk.

During the first five years of its existence the Orange Free State was much harassed by incessant raids by, and fighting with, the Basutos. These were at length conquered. The British Government then stepped in and arranged matters much to the dissatisfaction of the conquering party. By the treaty of Aliwal North, only a part of the territory of the Basutos was incorporated in the Orange Free State. This part is still known as the Conquered Territory.

A great deal of unpleasantness was caused by the dispute over the Kimberley Diamond Fields, which belonged to the Orange Free State, but were annexed to the Cape Colony by the British Government.

On account of the Treaty between the Orange Free State and South African Republic, the former State took a prominent part in the South African War (1899–1902), and was annexed to the British Dominions by proclamation of Lord Roberts, on May 28, 1900, as the Orange River Colony. After peace was declared Crown Colony Government was established and continued until 1907, when responsible government was introduced. On May 31, 1910, the Orange River Colony was merged in the Union of South Africa as the Province of the Orange Free State.

The seat of provincial government is at Bloemfontein.

Administrator.—The Hon. Sir C. H. Wessels, Kt. (salary, 2,000*l.*)

There are municipalities at Bloemfontein and other centres, 50 in all; local authorities have, so far as possible, the usual local administrative powers.

Area and Population.—The area of the Province is 50,389 square miles; it is divided into 24 districts. The population at the last 4 censuses and the European population at the census taken in 1918 were as follows:—

Census Year.	All Races.			White.		Coloured.
	Total.	Males.	Females.	Males.	Females.	Males.	Females.
1890 .	133,518	70,150	63,303	31,906	29,116	38,244	34,252
1890 .	207,503	108,362	99,141	40,571	37,145	67,791	61,996
1904 .	387,315	210,095	177,220	81,571	61,108	128,524	116,112
1911 .	528,174	277,518	250,656	94,488	80,701	113,030	169,955
1918 .	—	—	—	93,069	87,709	—	—

The capital, Bloemfontein, had, in 1911, 14,720 white inhabitants (8,995 males and 5,725 females), and 12,205 natives and other coloured persons (6,212 males and 5,993 females); total, 26,925. The 1918 European population was 15,631.

Vital statistics are shown as follows:—

			European	Coloured
1913	5,386	1,511	1,476	1,148	3,875

1915	4,882	1,618	1,294	1,107	3,264
1916	5,060	1,428	1,562	1,264	3,652
1917	4,959	1,488	1,562	1,228	3,526
1918	4,906	3,155	1,492	1,309	1,751

Religion.—The principal body, according to the census of 1911, is the Dutch Reformed Church with 175,311 adherents; of Wesleyans there were 88,857; Anglican Communion, 42,401; Presbyterians, 7,549; Congregationalists, 8,368; Lutherans, 8,727; Roman Catholics, 5,696; Jews, 2,808; no religion (so stated), 173,336, of whom 173,192 were natives and other coloured persons.

Instruction.—Higher education is under the control of the Minister of Education for the Union, while primary and secondary education is controlled by the Administrator of the Province. Under the School Act of 1908 the Province is divided into 55 school districts, for each of which there is a board consisting partly of elected and partly of nominated members. Each board is an advisory body, with certain powers of supervision; it is also responsible for carrying out the provisions of the law as to compulsory school attendance. The boards have certain advisory functions with regard to the appointment of teachers. Public schools, with certain special exceptions, are under the supervision of committees, the members of which are elected. The functions of these committees also are advisory, but they may nominate teachers for appointment in the discretion of the Director. Grants are given conditionally to private schools. In 1917 there were 731 public and 137 aided private schools in the Province, with a total enrolment of over 36,938 pupils. Fees are charged at all schools, exemption being granted under certain prescribed regulations, and attendance is compulsory up to Standard VI. Except where the parents object both English and Dutch are taught to all children, and where possible are used as equal media of instruction.

The Normal College trains from 80 to 90 teachers annually. The Polytechnic College, established in 1912, trains teachers in art, dressmaking, &c. The Home Industries Board directs the spinning and weaving schools throughout the country. The Government Industrial School for boys was opened at Bloemfontein in 1907. Secondary schools have been established in all the leading towns of the Province with more advanced departments preparing pupils up to University Matriculation standard.

	1913-14	1914-15	1915-16	1916-17	1917-18
Revenue:—	£	£	£	£	£

Total Ordinary Expenditure .	476,557	486,643	466,399	519,973	611,960

The capital expenditure in 1917-18 was 64,190*l*.

Production and Industry.—The Province consists of undulating plains, affording excellent grazing and wide tracts for agricultural purposes. The rainfall is moderate. The country is still mainly devoted to stock-farming, although a rapidly increasing quantity of grain is being raised, especially in the Eastern Districts.

For Mining Statistics see p. 220.

Commerce.—Since the coming into effect of the Union there are no special records of trade for each of the Provinces. The British Board of Trade statistics, however, continue to give details of trade between the United Kingdom and each Province separately. The following figures show the value of the trade between the Orange Free State Province and the United Kingdom :—

PROTECTORATE OF SOUTH-WEST AFRICA.

This Protectorate is bounded on the north by Portuguese West Africa, Angola, and Rhodesia ; on the east by Rhodesia and the Kalahari Desert (Cape Province) ; on the south by the Cape Province ; and on the west by the Atlantic Ocean. The country was captured from the Germans in July, 1915, by South African forces, and the Union of South Africa now administers the territory under a mandate from the League of Nations, dated December 17, 1920. Under this mandate the laws of the Union, subject to local modifications as necessary, may be applied to the Protectorate. The military training of the natives, except for local police or defence purposes, is prohibited, and no naval or military base or any fortifications may be established.

The whole southern part and much of the east is barren and desert. There have been extensive boring operations for water, in many cases successful. Area 322,400 square miles. European population, 1913, 14,830 (1,799 British and 12,292 German) ; but although 6,350 Germans were deported during 1919, the European population in 1919 is estimated at 16,000 to 17,000. The new-comers are mostly South Africans in search of farms. Twenty-two British schools have been established with 925 pupils. The native population is estimated at 90,000, exclusive of Ovamboland in the north, where there are probably 100,000 Ovambos.

The principal native races in the Protectorate are the Hereros, Ovambos, Bastards, Bergdamaras, Hottentots and Bushmen. The Hereros are a pastoral people, who formerly owned vast herds of cattle ; but as a result of the native wars their numbers were reduced by about 75 per cent., and their cattle either destroyed or seized. Since the British occupation they have again acquired a number of stock, and their numbers have increased considerably. They now supply a large portion of the agricultural labour. The Ovambos, like the Bushmen, are one of the native races who are not increasing in numbers.

It may be noted that the Cunene River, which formerly ran through Ovamboland into the Etoscha Pan, passes along its northern border into the Atlantic, and this change of course has made Ovamboland far less fertile. Ovambo labour is used for the mines and railways.

The Bastards are descendants of a cross between European farmers and Hottentots, who originally came from the Cape Colony half a century ago. They were never conquered by the Germans, and still manage many of their own affairs. They live in the Rehoboth District, which lies to the south of Windhuk, and number about 9,000.

The seat of the present Administration is Windhuk, which is pleasantly situated at an altitude of 5,600 feet, in the centre of the Protectorate. Its total population is nearly 10,000.

Up till 1920 the German Law has been in force. New legislation has been effected by Proclamations under Martial Law. In January, 1920, Roman Dutch was made the Common Law of the country, and a number of Union Acts have since been applied by Proclamations. Civil Courts have been established and all troops withdrawn, and although Martial Law has not yet been repealed, the Government has been conducted on a purely civil basis for some time past. A Parliamentary Commission from the Union has recently visited the country, with a view to formulating a scheme for its future administration. A start has been made with local government by the creation of Hospital Boards and Municipalities, and it appears that the Germans are anxious to co-operate in the work of reconstruction.

Mr. Gysbert Hofmeyr, C.M.G., who has been Clerk of the Union House of Assembly for the last ten years, has succeeded Sir Howard Georges, K.C.M.G., M.V.O., as Administrator.

Finance.—For the financial year 1919-20 the revenue amounted to 654,370*l.*, and the expenditure to 718,100*l.* (1918-19 : revenue, 377,049*l.* ; expenditure, 744,407*l.*). The estimates for the year 1920-1 are : revenue, 1,025,000*l.* ; expenditure, 849,674*l.* The principal source of revenue is the tax on diamonds, which is estimated to yield 800,000*l.* The tax is based on 66 per cent. of the sale proceeds less 70 per cent. of the working costs. The working life of the alluvial fields is probably less than ten years.

Customs.—Customs revenue is estimated to yield 75,000*l.*

Trade.—The total imports and exports for the last five recorded years are :—

Year	Imports	Exports	Year	Imports	Exports
	£	£		£	£
1911	2,265,097	1,734,558	1918	1,031,534	—
1912	1,624,944	1,952,667	1919	1,135,116	1,679,534
1913	2,171,230	3,446,220

Mineral Production.—Five of the German Diamond Mining Companies in the Luderitzbucht area have been acquired by the Consolidated Diamond Mines of S.W.A., Ltd., which is registered in South Africa. The stones, which are small, but of a good quality, are found in the sand along the coast, but in no case at a greater distance than 15 miles from the sea. During 1919 the yield was 462,181 carats, valued at 2,081,863*l*. The total output since 1908, when the mines were first discovered, has been 6,669,246 carats, valued at 13,349,690*l*. The copper mines at Tsumeb were handicapped at the beginning of the year by shipping difficulties. Their output in 1919 was 28,675 tons. Alluvial tin is being worked in the Karibib and Omaruru districts, and valuable deposits of coloured marble at Karibib. Prospecting has been allowed since March 1, 1920, and is being energetically conducted in many parts of the country. Coal is greatly required, but only poor seams have so far been located.

Agriculture, &c.—The Protectorate is essentially a stock-raising country. Roughly speaking, Windhuk and the country to the north is a cattle country, and the southern portion is a sheep country. Stock thrive well in nearly every part, and retain their condition in times of drought in a wonderful way. No artificial feeding is required. 17,266 cattle and 87,000 sheep were exported in 1919. In 1914 there were 240,000 cattle and 1,125,000 small stock: the estimated number in 1920 was 400,000 cattle and 2,225,000 sheep and goats. No agriculture is possible without irrigation, except in the north-west, and there unseasonable or poor rains frequently result in very poor crops.

The German Administration tried to encourage the tobacco industry, but with very little success; and although cotton and wheat do fairly well, the principal crop is maize.

Approximately 37,000,000 acres have been taken up, out of a total of 207,000,000.

A Land Board has been established, and farms are being given out on 5-year leases, with the option of purchase on an instalment principle. Personal occupation is an essential. As boring is necessary on nearly all vacant Government ground before it can be allotted, the Board can only go slowly. Fifty-eight drills have been purchased by the Administration for this purpose. The usual size of farms is 3,000 hectares in the north and 10,000 to 20,000 in the south. A hectare is roughly 2·47 acres. Large numbers of applications for farms have been received.

Harbours.—The harbours in the Protectorate are Luderitzbucht and Walvis Bay. The German Administration utilised Swakopmund, which lies 21 miles to the north of Walvis Bay, but it has now been abandoned as a port in favour of Walvis Bay. It is, however, gaining favour as a seaside resort. Better facilities for handling cargo are required at both Luderitzbucht and Walvis Bay.

Communications.—The Wireless Station (Telefunken System) at Windhuk, which in 1914 was one of the most powerful in the world, is not being used, nor is the German Cable Station at Swakopmund. Cables are sent to Cape Town for despatch.

The total length of Government railway lines is 967 miles of 3ft. 6in. gauge, and 98 miles of 2ft. gauge; and of private lines 98 miles. There are no made roads outside of the villages. The distance from Cape Town to Windhuk is 1,383 miles, and the journey occupies three days and four nights. There are two mail trains a week.

WEST AFRICA.

These Possessions are the Colony and Protectorate of Nigeria; the Gambia Colony and Protectorate; the Gold Coast Colony with Ashanti and Northern Territories; and the Sierra Leone Colony and Protectorate.

Parts of Togoland and the Cameroons are also included.

NIGERIA.

History and Constitution.—This territory comprises a number of areas formerly under separate administrations. Lagos, bought in August, 1861, from a native king, was placed under the Governor of Sierra Leone in 1866. In 1874 it was detached, together with the Gold Coast Colony, and formed part of the latter until January, 1886, when a separate "Colony and Protectorate of Lagos" was constituted. Meanwhile the National African Company had established British interests in the Niger valley, and in July, 1886, the company obtained a charter under the name of the Royal Niger Company. This Company surrendered its charter to the Crown in 1899, and on January 1, 1900, its territories were formed into the two Protectorates of Northern and Southern Nigeria. The latter absorbed the "Niger Coast Protectorate," which was formed in May, 1893, from the "Protectorate of the Oil Rivers," which had been constituted in June, 1885. In February, 1906, Lagos and Southern Nigeria were united into the "Colony and Protectorate of Southern Nigeria," and on January 1, 1914, the latter was amalgamated with the Protectorate of Northern Nigeria to form the 'Colony and Protectorate of Nigeria,' under a Governor. Lagos is the seat of the Central Government.

The Colony of Nigeria had its boundaries defined afresh, and the Protectorate was divided into two groups of provinces, the 'Northern Provinces' and the 'Southern Provinces,' each under a Lieutenant-Governor appointed by the King, and subject to the control and authority of the Governor.

The Executive Council of the Colony was made, from January 1, 1914, the Executive Council of the Protectorate also. There is an advisory and deliberative body known as the Nigerian Council, consisting of the Governor, the members of the Executive Council, and other official members; a member, resident in Nigeria, of the Lagos Chamber of Commerce, a member of the Calabar Chamber of Commerce, and a member of the Chamber of Mines, nominated by those bodies; three Europeans nominated by the Governor; and six native members, also nominated by the Governor. This Council has no legislative or executive authority. There is a Legislative Council for Lagos, consisting of the Governor, six official and four unofficial members.

Chief of Nigeria.—Sir Hugh Clifford, K.C.M.G.
Secretary to Central Government.—D. C. Cameron, C.M.G.
Assistant Governors in the Protectorates.—Vacant (Southern Provinces), and E. E. Goldsmith, C.M.G. (Northern Provinces).

Area and Population.—Area approximately 332,000 square miles; population, about 17,500,000, including, at the end of 1919, about 2,800 Europeans (Northern Province: 256,000 square miles, 8,670,000 population. Southern Provinces: 76,000 square miles, 8,900,000 population). In 1900 a proclamation was issued in Northern Nigeria which, without abolishing domestic slavery, declared the removal of children born after January 1, 1900, from the Slavery Ordinance abolished the legal status of slavery throughout the Protectorates. Slave markets have been suppressed by native rulers, and slave dealing is now practically non-existent. In 1917, 7,312, in 1918, 7,311, and in 1919, 7,091, slaves were liberated in the Northern Provinces.

Justice.—The Supreme Courts of Northern and Southern Nigeria are united under one Chief Justice of Nigeria. There are police magistrates at Lagos and Calabar. In each province is a Provincial Court consisting of the Resident and his assistants, and such justices of the peace as may be appointed by the Governor. Native courts exist in Mohammedan localities where there are chiefs and councillors, and amongst pagan tribes Judicial Councils with limited judicial powers have been established in localities where the intelligence of the natives renders such a policy possible. There are cantonments at Kaduna, on the river of the same name, Kano, Zaria, Lokoja on the Niger, and Port Harcourt, and there station magistrates have been appointed. The number of persons apprehended or summoned before the Provincial Courts in 1919 was 5,238, of whom 5,908 were convicted. Out of 14,934 brought before Magistrates' Courts in 1919, 12,267 were convicted, and 102 were convicted in the Supreme Court.

Religion and Education.—Northern Provinces.—Mohammedanism is widely diffused, the Fulani and Hausa and other ruling tribes being of that religion, but in some parts of the territory paganism is predominant. Protestant and Catholic missions are at work, and have industrial and other schools at several stations. The principles governing the education of natives in the Egyptian Sudan are being closely followed. Secular subjects only are compulsory; the acceptance of religious teaching is optional. At present the principal schools are situated at Kano, a great Mohammedan centre. In 1919 there were 18 Government schools, and 98 unassisted private schools, the total average attendance being about 998, and 2,747 respectively. It is estimated that there are also over 21,000 Mohammedan schools, with more than 205,000 pupils.

Southern Provinces.—There is a system of primary and secondary schools. There are also a residential school at Bonny, supported by Government grants, and by Chiefs' subscriptions, and a Government secondary school and union grammar school at Lagos, and a high school at Calabar. In 1919 there were 48 Government schools with 4,957 scholars on the roll, and an average attendance of about 3,686; 169 assisted schools, 25,187 on the roll, and 12,000 in average attendance; and 1,099 unassisted schools, with about 4,909 on the roll, and 40,000 in average attendance. Total expenditure from public funds, 40,216l.

Four British Protestant Societies and two French Roman Catholic

Societies are established, each with several stations, and altogether there are approximately 1,000 places of worship with an average attendance of about 130,000.

Finance.—Revenue, expenditure, and debt of Nigeria as a whole :—

	Revenue	Expenditure	Debt
1914 . . . . .	3,048,380	3,596,764	8,267,569
1916 . . . . .	2,943,184	3,609,638	8,470,593
1917 . . . . .	3,492,788	3,219,957	8,470,593
1918 . . . . .	4,014,190	3,459,774	8,470,593
1919 . . . . .	4,959,428	4,529,176	11,997,118

The expenditure in 1914 included 628,925*l.* expended on construction of Eastern Railway from Port Harcourt ; in 1915 it included 632,168*l.* expended on the Eastern Railway and 155,981*l.* on the expenses of the Cameroons campaign ; in 1916, 542,868*l.* expended on railway construction, and 95,720*l.* in war costs ; in 1917, 115,413*l.* expended on railway construction, and 8,546*l.* on war costs ; and in 1918, 30,591*l.* expended on railway construction, and 134,000*l.* on war costs. The expenditure on railway construction during 1919 was 91,812*l.*

The main items of revenue in 1919 were:—Customs, 1,897,937*l.* ; railway, 1,473,254*l.* ; direct taxes, 491,374*l.* ; fees of court, &c., 301,153*l.* The chief items of expenditure were (besides those stated above) :—Political, 233,040*l.* ; West African Frontier Force, 317,646*l.* ; Posts and Telegraphs, 109,501*l.* ; Medical, 126,197*l.* ; Prisons, 102,341*l.* ; Public Debt, 473,439*l.* ; Railway, 1,042,817*l.* ; Marine, 448,812*l.* ; Public Works Extraordinary, 113,825*l.*

There is established in each native State in the Northern Provinces a Treasury, locally known as a 'Beit-el-Mal,' which regulates the expenditure of that portion of the local revenue which is annually assigned to the native administration of each Emirate for its support and maintenance. The establishment of a Beit-el-Mal consolidates the rank and authority of the Emirs and Chiefs in each province. It strengthens the position of the native judiciary and diminishes extortion and corruption. There are also native treasuries in a few of the more advanced States in the Southern Provinces.

Production and Industry.—The products are palm-oil (exports 1919 100,967 tons) and kernels (exports 1919, 216,913 tons) ; rubber, ground-nuts, shea-butter, ivory, hides, live stock, ostrich feathers, capsicums, cotton (output 1919, estimated at 60,221 cwt.), cocoa, coffee, kola-nuts and various drugs. Tobacco is also grown. There are nurseries for rubber seedlings in the Southern Provinces, and botanical stations at Calabar, Onitsha, Oloke-Meji, and Agege, and at Maiganna, Bida, Zaria, and Ilorin in the Northern Provinces. Mahogany is exported. Sheep and goat skins are tanned and dyed. The natives have worked iron, lead, and tin for centuries. Rich alluvial deposits of tin ore have been discovered. The tin-bearing area so far as it is now known extends over 9,000 square miles of territory in the Northern Provinces, the output of tin in 1919 being 7,685 tons, and there are also deposits of tin in the Southern Provinces. A colliery has been opened by Government at Udi in the Southern Provinces, which is connected by rail with Port Harcourt on the Bonny River. The coal is of good quality.

There are rich reefs of galena carrying a considerable silver return. Pockets of native silver have from time to time been discovered in the vicinity of Orufu and Wukari. There are also deposits of manganese ore, lignite, and monazite (which contains thorium).

Mining rights are vested in the Government, but under an agreement made with the Royal Niger Company at the date of the revocation of the charter, that Company receives half the gross profits derived from royalties on minerals won between the main stream of the Niger on the west and a line running direct from Yola to Zinder on the east for a period of 99 years with effect from January 1, 1900.

Commerce and Communications, &c.—The principal ports are Lagos, Warri, Burutu, Forcados, Sapele, Brass, Degema, Port Harcourt, Bonny, Opobo, and Calabar. Numerous rivers and creeks form the chief routes for transport, and there are many well-made roads driven through the country. There is now a metalled road between Kano and Katsena, a distance of 95 miles, and it is probable that an attempt will be made to establish motor transport between these two centres. At Lagos, and Calabar, there are engineering and repairing workshops and slip-ways for the repair of hulls.

At Lagos moles are being constructed, and a deep channel is being made over the Bar which admits ocean steamers entering the harbour.

Considerable trade is carried on in the Northern Provinces, and several new trading stations have been recently opened. There is, besides, a large trade by caravans which, coming from Salaga in the west, the Sahara in the north, and Lake Chad and Wadai in the east, make use of Kano as an emporium.

The trade and shipping of Nigeria are shown as follows (bullion and specie are included):—

Year	Trade		Shipping entered and cleared
	Imports	Exports	Total	British only
	£	£	Tons	Tons
1913	7,201,819	7,352,377	1,735,036	1,041,787
1915	5,016,951	5,660,796	1,129,368	1,068,030
1916	5,780,118	6,096,586	1,042,882	976,957
1917	7,532,735	8,727,870	939,159	883,448
1918	8,318,398	9,564,858	805,981	777,248
1919	12,015,832	14,726,245	1,072,148	986,731

There were (1919) 1,126 open miles of railways. A weekly boat-train with sleeping accommodation and a restaurant car runs between Lagos and Zaria. A new trunk railway has been constructed, from Port Harcourt discovered March, 1913, on the Bonny River), to the Udi coalfields (151 miles). Construction beyond the coalfields was suspended during the war. Total capital expenditure on Nigerian railway to end of 1919, 9,277,041*l.*; Gross receipts, 1919, 1,466,872*l.*; working expenses, 843,767*l.*; net receipts, 623,105*l.* ; passengers carried, 1,709,095 ; goods and minerals transported, 631,421 tons.

There are several thousand miles of telegraph wires, and the system is connected with the French Dahomey system. There are also several hundred miles of telephone wires. A wireless station was opened for traffic at Lagos at the end of 1913.

In 1919 there were 130 Post Offices in Nigeria. The savings bank on December 31, 1919, had 5,536 depositors, with 40,597*l.* to their credit.

A special silver coinage for West Africa was introduced in 1913, the denominations being 2*s.*, 1*s.*, 6*d.*, and 3*d.*, of the same size, weight, and fineness as corresponding coins of the United Kingdom. The new currency, with adequate reserves in London, based on gold and securities, is under the control of the West African Currency Board. A nickel coinage (penny and tenth of a penny) is also in use. In 1916 local currency notes were introduced. At present the denominations are 5*l.*, 20*s.* 10*s.*, 2*s.* and 1*s.* The amount in circulation in Nigeria at June 30, 1919, was 1,048,295*l.*

The Bank of British West Africa, Ltd., and the Colonial Bank, have branches in Nigeria.

There is a mail service between Liverpool, Bonny, and Calabar via Lagos.

Standard time of one hour fast on Greenwich was introduced in Nigeria on September 1, 1919.

GAMBIA.

Governor.—Captain Cecil H. Armitage, C.M.G., D.S.O. (2,500*l.*, and 750*l.* allowances)

Gambia, at the mouth of the river Gambia, was controlled from Sierra Leone from 1807; in 1843 it was made an independent Crown Colony; in 1866 it formed part of the West African Settlements, but in December, 1888, it again became a separate Crown Colony. The Colony is administered under a Governor with an Executive and a Legislative Council nominated. There is an unofficial element in the latter. Area of Colony proper, 4 square miles; population 8,000. In the Protectorate (area, 4,130 square miles) the population is estimated at 240,000. With the exception of the Island of St. Mary, on which Bathurst, the capital, stands, the whole Colony is administered on the Protectorate system. In June, 1901, an agreement was made with the local chief for the administration of the Fuladu district by the British, both banks of the Gambia being now under direct British control up to the Anglo-French boundary.

There were in 1919 8 elementary Government-aided schools, with 1,504 pupils enrolled; and an average attendance of about 477 pupils; Government grant, proportionate to results (1919), 774*l.* Of the elementary schools three are Roman Catholic, three Wesleyan, one Anglican, and one Mohammedan. The Wesleyans have also a secondary school under native control, with 49 boys, and a technical school with 13 pupils, which receives a grant of 350*l.* Total Government expenditure on education (1919), 1,491*l.* There is a company of the West African Frontier Force of 130 men. The armed police has a strength of 92 men. In 1919, 38 cases were tried in the supreme court; 296 cases were disposed of in the police court; 609 cases were reported from the Protectorate.

There is a fortnightly mail-service between Liverpool and Bathurst. Internal communication is maintained by steamers or launches. There are two post offices. Postal packets and parcels dealt with in 1919, 151,749. Bathurst is connected with St. Vincent (Cape de Verde) and with Sierra Leone by cable, but there are no local telegraphs or railways. The Gambia savings bank had 493 depositors in 1919. A special West African silver currency was introduced in 1913 (see under Nigeria, p. 246). West African currency notes in circulation June 30, 1919 amounted to 110,300*l.* The French five franc piece is legal tender at 3*s.* 10½*d.*, and was very largely used, but its circulation diminished after the outbreak of war in 1914, owing to export restrictions from France. There are two banks in the Colony, the Bank of British West Africa and the Colonial Bank.

GOLD COAST.

The Gold Coast stretches for 334 miles along the Gulf of Guinea, between the French Ivory Coast and Togoland. The Colony is administered by a Governor with an Executive and a Legislative Council, both nominated, with nine unofficial members in latter. The area of the Colony, Ashanti, and Protectorate is about 80,000 square miles; population, census 1911, 1,503,386; Europeans, 1915, 2,206. Chief towns: Accra, 19,585; Seccondee, 7,725; Cape Coast Castle, 11,364; Quittah, Saltpond, Winnebah, Axim, and Akuse. There were in 1919 19 Government schools, and 194 assisted schools which are under the control of the Scottish, Wesleyan, Roman Catholic, Church of England (S.P.G.), and African Methodist Episcopal Zionist Missions; the former Bremen Mission Schools are at present temporarily under the control of the Education Department; average attendance of primary and secondary schools, 21,938 (1919); enrolled, 27,318; Government estimated expenditure on education in 1919, 57,716*l.* There are also a large number of non-assisted primary schools supported by the various religious bodies. The strength of the police (1919), 21 European officers and 1,365 of other ranks. This includes 2 European officers and 192 other ranks in Ashanti. The constabulary (Northern Territories) consists of 2 officers and about 320 of other ranks. Summary convictions in 1919, 8,978; convictions in Supreme Courts, 104. Staple products and exports, palm oil, kola nuts, palm kernels, cocoa, indiarubber and manganese; the export of valuable native woods is increasing. The botanical station at Aburi aids in the plantation of coconut trees, rubber, cocoa, coffee, cotton, pepper, nutmeg, pimento, and croton. Gold is found in quartz, in banket, and in alluvium. The output of gold in recent years was: 1916, 1,629,746*l.*; 1917, 1,549,275*l.*; 1918, 1,334,000*l.* (313,445 ounces). Many of the coast inhabitants are fishermen, and there is considerable traffic in dried fish by rail into the interior.

There is a Government railway, from Seccondee on the coast to Coomassie, a total length of 168 miles, with branches Tarquah to Prestea, 19 miles, and Inchaban Junction to Inchaban, 5 miles; capital expenditure to end of 1919, 3,360,983*l.* A line from Accra to Tafo (65 miles) has been constructed, and surveys for further construction are in hand to join Coomassie to Accra. Gross railway receipts 1919, 672,000*l.*, expenditure, 234,000*l.* Road construction is proceeding rapidly; there are over 320 miles of main roads and 2,100 miles of secondary roads. There are in the Colony 2,762 miles of telegraph line and 60 offices, and telephone exchanges at Accra, Seccondee and Tarquah; telegrams in 1919, 290,218. There is a wireless telegraph station at Accra. The number of letters, packets, &c., handled in the postal service in 1919 was 5,732,633. In 1919 the savings bank had 5,806 depositors with 54,437*l.* to their credit.

Ashanti was placed under British protection on August 27, 1896, and a English Resident was appointed to Coomassie. Under orders in Council of September 26, 1901, the country was definitely annexed by Great Britain, the Governor of the Gold Coast being appointed Governor of Ashanti, though the laws and ordinances of the Gold Coast do not apply to the annexed territory. The population (census 1911) was 287,814. Coomassie, the chief town, has about 24,000 inhabitants. There are Government schools at Coomassie (511 pupils in 1919), Sunyani (101), and Juaso (121), and a number of mission schools. Police force (1918), 137; convictions (1918), 4,049, but there is little serious crime. Agriculture is extending, cocoa and rubber plantations are being formed. Gold output (1918), 421,731*l*. In the western parts of the Gold Coast Colony and especially of Ashanti are rich forests with excellent timber trees (mahogany, cedar, &c.), trees yielding fruits, rich in oil, rubber-bearing plants, and species yielding gum copal. The country is well watered, and with proper restraints on wasteful native farming and on over-exploitation, would contain inexhaustible supplies of valuable forest products. On the eastern side the forests are sparser, though timber and oil trees are common and game plentiful; the products there are chiefly maize, koko, yams, bananas, ground-nuts, and cocoa, the plantations of which are rapidly extending. Imports into Ashanti, 1918, 822,300*l*.; exports, 1,292,736*l*. (mainly gold, 421,736*l*.; cocoa, 360,000*l*.; kola, 360,000*l*.; rubber, 6,000*l*.; cattle and sheep, 70,000*l*.; hides, 20,000*l*.; snails, 20,000*l*.).

In 1901 the Northern Territories lying to the north of the parallel of 8° N. lat., bounded on the west and north by the French possessions and on the east by Togoland, were placed under British protection. They are administered, under the Governor, by a Chief Commissioner with his headquarters at Tamale. The country is divided into three provinces under Commissioners; the Southern Province, with headquarters at Tamale; the North-Eastern province, with headquarters at Navarro; and the North-Western Province with headquarters at Wa. By the census taken in 1911 the population of the region to the north of Kintampo (variously estimated at from 31,000 to 50,000 square miles) is put at about 360,000. The Mohammedans have substantial mosques; there are Roman Catholic and other missions. Government schools have been established at Tamale, Gambaga, Lorha, and Wa. Good permanent roads are being made. The Northern Territories are capable of producing various agricultural crops (cereals, indigo, tobacco), and are said to contain wide auriferous areas.

The Bank of British West Africa, Ltd. and the Colonial Bank operate in the Colony. For currency, see p. 246. French, Spanish, and American gold coins are also legal tender at fixed values. For small purchases cowrie shells are still used. The natives tend to melt down the silver and nickel coins for ornaments. West African currency notes in circulation at December 31, 1919, amounted to 3,959,495*l*.

SIERRA LEONE.

Sierra Leone lies between French Guinea on the north and the Republic of Liberia on the east and south-east. Sierra Leone proper consists of a peninsula about 26 miles long, and 12 miles broad, with an area of about 300 square miles, terminating in Cape Sierra Leone. The Colony of Sierra Leone extends from the Scarcies River on the north, to the border of Liberia on the south, 180 miles. It extends inland to a distance varying from 8 to 20 miles and includes the Yellaboi and other islands toward the north, as well as Sherbro and several smaller islands to the south.

but the Isles de Los were ceded to France under the Convention of 1904. There are in the Colony Executive and Legislative Councils, nominated.

Area of the Colony 4,000 square miles approximately; population (cens us 1911), 75,572, of whom 702 were whites. The birth-rate for Freetown (1919) was 21·4 per thousand, and the death-rate 25·7; infantile mortality is very high, being 30 per cent. per 1,000 births (average 1917-19), and appears to be increasing. Chief town, Freetown, 34,090 inhabitants (1911), head-quarters of H.M.'s forces in West Africa. The battalion of the West African Frontier Force has its headquarters at Daru on the Moa River. Freetown, the greatest seaport in West Africa, is a second-class Imperial coaling station, with an excellent harbour.

In 1919 there were 169 elementary and intermediate schools, with an average attendance of 6,004; grants-in-aid to the assisted schools, 119 in number, 4,644l. The assisted schools are all denominational, belonging to 8 missionary societies. There were (1919) 10 secondary schools in the Colony, 8 of which are missionary institutions, while the remainder are owned privately. Grants-in-aid to 3 assisted schools, 269l. There is a Government Model School (secondary), with average attendance of 257 in 1919. In the Protectorate are the following Government institutions: the Bo School, for the sons of Chiefs, the Jala Agricultural Training College, and 3 Anglo-vernacular schools. Fourah Bay College is affiliated to the University of Durham. There are 5 Mohammedan schools in the Colony, with an average attendance (1919) of 392. Training classes for teachers are attached to the Bo and Government Model Schools. Police force at end of 1919 had an authorised strength of 300, including 11 European officers. In 1917, 60 persons were convicted of indictable offences in the Supreme Court, and 1,745 summarily convicted in the police courts.

The revenue from Customs in 1919 was 452,325l., and from the railway, 175,442l.

Net public debt, December 31, 1919, 1,780,048l.

Principal imports, 1919: Cotton manufacture, 461,098l.; coal, 164,171l.; spirits, 60,940l.; tobacco, 244,755l.; oil (kerosene), 40,778l. Principal exports, 1919: Ginger, 31,110l. (1,069 tons); palm kernels, 1,191,607l. (50,622 tons); kola nuts, 417,378l.; palm oil, 115,515l. (828,750 gallons).

Imports from United Kingdom in 1919, 1,372,985l.; exports thereto, 1,374,510l.

The tonnage of vessels entered and cleared in the foreign trade is given as follows (excluding vessels in Admiralty service):—

	1913 (pre-war)	1915	1916	1917	1918	1919
Total tonnage	2,931,085	1,635,119	1,553,312	1,526,640	1,736,247	2,016,699
British only .	2,051,310	1,520,998	1,410,000	1,417,894	1,669,984	1,953,760

A Government railway, a single line of 2ft. 6in. gauge, is open from Freetown to Pendembu, near the Liberian frontier, a length of 227½ miles. From Boia Junction, 64½ miles from Freetown, a branch line runs to Kamabai, a distance of 104 miles; and a further extension to Baga in the Koinadugu District is contemplated. There is also a mountain section from Freetown to the official quarters at Hill Station, a distance of 5½ miles. There are over 1,100 miles of telegraph and telephone lines. In 1919, 1,615,113 postal packets were dealt with in the Colony; money order transactions amounted to 103,842½. There are 536 miles of combined telegraph and telephone service in operation. There are 43 post offices and postal agencies. At the end of 1919 there were 6,328 depositors in the savings bank with 96,114½. (inclusive of interest) to their credit. The West African Silver Currency was introduced in 1913 (see under Nigeria, p. 242); but British coins are still largely used, and the French five franc piece is legal tender at 3s. 10½d. Currency notes of the United Kingdom and Nigeria are in circulation, the amount at June 30, 1919, being 150,250½.

The Protectorate.—On March 7, 1913, an Order in Council was issued providing for the administration of the Protectorate of Sierra Leone. The Order applies to the territories, not being portions of the Colony of Sierra Leone, lying between the sixth and tenth degrees of north latitude and the tenth and fourteenth degrees of west longitude, and beginning at the extreme southerly point of the Colony on the Anglo-Liberian boundary, as delimited under the provisions of the Anglo-Liberian Conventions, November 11, 1885, and January 21, 1911. The Protectorate extends inland about 180 miles.

The Governor and Commander-in-Chief for the time being of the Colony of Sierra Leone is also the Governor of the Protectorate. Authority is given to the Legislative Council of Sierra Leone, by ordinance, to exercise and provide for giving effect to the powers and jurisdiction acquired by the Crown.

The Protectorate has an area of 27,000 square miles, and a population, according to the census of 1911, of 1,327,560. The Protectorate was proclaimed August 21, 1896, and the whole territory has been divided into 3 Provinces, each of which is placed under a European commissioner. Circuit courts are held at the chief centres of population; convictions in 1917, 84. There are also district commissioners' courts, chiefs' courts for purely native cases (not serious crime), and combined courts (a chief and a non-native) for small debts and trivial misdemeanours (assaults, abusive language) arising between native and non-native. The chief articles of imports are cotton goods, spirits, hardware and tobacco; the chief exports are palm kernels, kola nuts, and palm oil. There are several mission and Mohammedan schools. A Government school for the sons and nominees of native chiefs was established at Bo in the Railway district of the Protectorate on March 1, 1906. The school, which is under European supervision, opened with 18 pupils; at the end of 1919 there were 140 pupils. An elementary school was opened at the end of 1915; there are also 3 Government Anglo-Vernacular Schools. An Agricultural Training College was established by the Government in 1919, with 30 pupils. There are over 92 non-Government schools, of which 49 are assisted by the Government.

Governor.—R. J. Wilkinson, C.M.G. (2,500½.).

Colonial Secretary.—Dr. J. C. Maxwell, C.M.G.

TOGOLAND.

Togo, with Little Popo and Porto Seguro, in Upper Guinea, between the Gold Coast Colony on the west and French Dahomey on the east; area 33,700 square miles; estimated coloured population (1913) 1,031,978; estimated European population, 1919, 125. Coast line about 31 miles, but inland the territory, between the rivers Volta and Monu, widens to four or five times that breadth. Lome, the only port and capital, and Anecho, are on the coast. The government stations are Lome, Anecho, Misahöhe, Atakpame, Kete-Kratchi, Sokode, Yendi and Sansane-Mangu. Togoland was surrendered unconditionally by the Germans to British and French forces in August, 1914. The Colony is now divided between the French and British. The British have obtained about one-third of the country, 12,500 square miles, bordering the Gold Coast territories, but no part of the sea-coast.

The southern half of Togoland is peopled by natives using 30 different languages, of which the principal is Efe—these may be regarded as an offshoot of the Bantu peoples. The northern half contains, ethnologically, a totally different population descended largely from Hamitic tribes and speaking in all 16 languages, of which Dagomba and Tim are the most important. The majority of the natives are pagans, but many profess Mohamedanism, while Christianity has, latterly, been making some progress in the coast districts.

In the British zone there is one Government school with 200 pupils, and Missionary Societies have 35 schools with 3,912 pupils.

The climate is extraordinarily cool for the tropics, and, although far from healthy, is not unpleasant.

Inland the country is hilly, rising to 3,600 feet, with streams and waterfalls. There are long stretches of forest and brushwood, while dry plains alternate with cultivable land. Maize, yams, cassada, plantains, ground-nuts, etc., are cultivated by the natives; oil palms, caoutchouc, and dye-woods grow in the forests; but the main commerce is the barter trade for palm oil, palm kernels, coco, rubber and copra carried on with the European factories. There are considerable plantations of oil and coco palms, coffee, coco, kola, and cassada; kapok and cotton are also being tried as well as fibrous and other plants. In the Sokode and Sansane-Mangu districts there are about 65,000 head of cattle; sheep, goats, poultry and pigs are found, but nowhere in large numbers; in some districts horses of small size are bred. Native industries are: weaving, pottery, smith-work, straw-plaiting, wood-cutting, etc. There is no mining by Europeans, but the natives in the Sokode and Misahöhe districts smelt iron. Customs revenue for 1917 was 63,578*l.*; for 1918, 54,203*l.*

Imports and exports for six years:—

Years	Imports	Exports	Years	Imports	Exports
	£	£		£	£
1912	571,391	497,945	1917	845,866	473,774
1913	531,550	456,850	1918	414,566	452,570

The principal imports in 1918 were cotton goods, provisions, salt, and tobacco. Principal exports were palm oil, palm kernels, cocoa, copra, and cotton.

There are good roads, connecting the more important centres of the Colony. There are three railways connecting Lome with Anecho (Little Popo) (27 miles), with Palime (74 miles), and with Atakpame (108 miles). Total, 204 miles. There are 13 post and telegraph stations and 4 sub-stations, connected by telegraph and telephone with the Gold Coast Colony, French Dahomey, and with Europe.

CAMEROON.

The Cameroons, lying between British Nigeria and the French Congo extend from the coast north-eastwards to the southern shore of Lake Chad. In 1911 a considerable tract of land was transferred to Cameroon from French Congo, the new acquisition being known as New Cameroon. An agreement settling the frontier between Nigeria and Cameroon from Yola to the sea was signed in London on March 11, 1913. The Colony was captured from the Germans by French and British troops in February, 1916, and is now divided between the British and French. The British portion of the country is a strip, area about 30,000 square miles, stretching from the sea along the Nigerian frontier to Lake Chad. Total area 191,130 square miles; population, 2,540,000. Bantu negroes near the coast, Sudan negroes inland. In 1913 there were 1,871 whites. The seat of Government was at Buëa. Duala (pop. 22,000), Victoria, Kribi, Rio del Rey and Campo are important trading stations, and Aquatown and Belltown are the principal native settlements.

There are four Government schools, at Duala, Victoria, Jaunde, and Garua. Four missionary societies have schools with 24,270 pupils.

The soil in the coast region is fertile, and numerous valuable African vegetable productions grow in profusion. Plantations of cocoa occupy 26,000 acres; and of rubber of various sorts, 18,000 acres. There are 345,824 oil palms. In Victoria, experiments are being made towards the cultivation of cloves, vanilla, ginger, pepper, and many other products; an active trade in ivory and palm-oil. The colony is rich in hardwood; ebony is abundant. Gold and iron have been found. Natives in the Bamenda division smelt iron. Salt is found in the Keara country, Ossidunge Division, and at Bamessing in the Bamenda division.

There is a poll tax which yielded 24,178*l.* in 1918. Estimated revenue 1920 (British sphere), 54,680*l.*

Imports into the British Cameroon in 1919, 67,000*l.*; exports, 235,000*l.* Chief exports: palm kernels, rubber, palm oil, ivory, cocoa. Chief imports: textiles, spirits, timber, salt, iron wares, and colonial produce. In 1919 there entered Victoria 30 trading vessels of 52,221 tons.

Roads are being constructed between the coast towns and from the coast inland. The total length of railway line (1913) is 149 miles. The Manenguba railway is constructed to the length of 160 kms. A line from Duala to Édea and Widimenge was in construction, and other lines near the south-west coast were being projected. The telegraph system is being rapidly extended. Cameroon is connected by cable with Bonny in Southern Nigeria. A new direct cable to Germany was opened in 1913.

The mark is still (September 1919) in use, value 7*d.* at the official rate, both in the French and British spheres, but its purchasing power in the markets is the same as the shilling.

EGYPT.

(MISR.)

Sultan.

Fuad I. Ahmed Fuad Pasha, G.C.B., was born in 1868, son of the Khedive Ismail Pasha; became Sultan on October 9, 1917; married the Princess Nazli on May 24, 1919.

The present sovereign of Egypt is the eighth ruler of the dynasty of Muhammad Ali, appointed Governor of Egypt in 1805, who made himself, in 1811, absolute master of the country by force of arms. The position of the Sultan's father, Ismail I.—forced to abdicate, under pressure of the British and French Governments, in 1879—was recognised by the Imperial Hatti Sherif of February 13, 1841, issued under the guarantee of the five great European Powers. The title given to Muhammad Ali and his immediate successors was the Turkish one of 'Vali,' or Viceroy; but this was changed by an Imperial firman of June 12, 1867, into the Persian-Arabic of 'Khîdêw-Misr,' or, as more commonly called, Khedive. By a firman issued June 8, 1873, the Sultan of Turkey granted to Ismail I. the rights hitherto withheld of concluding commercial treaties with foreign Powers, and of maintaining armies.

On December 18, 1914, a British Protectorate over Egypt was declared, and the next day a Proclamation was issued deposing Abbas Hilmi, lately Khedive of Egypt, and conferring the title of Sultan of Egypt upon Hussein Kamil, eldest living prince of the family of Muhammad Ali. The British Protectorate has been recognised by France, Russia, Belgium, Serbia, Greece, Portugal, and the United States of America. Sultan Hussein Kamil died in 1917, and was succeeded by his brother.

The new Egyptian flag consists of three white crescents with their backs to the staff, each with a five-pointed white star between the horns on a red field. This flag was the personal standard of the Khedive, and now takes the place of the former national flag, which was distinguished from the Turkish by having a star of five instead of six points.

The predecessors of the present ruler of Egypt were—

There are also Consular representatives at Suez, Mansura, Tanta, Zagazig, and Birket-es-Sab.

Government and Constitution.

The administration of Egypt is carried on by native Ministers, subject to the ruling of the Sultan. From 1879 to 1883 two Controllers-General, appointed by France and England, had considerable powers in the direction of the affairs of the country (Khedivial Decree, November 10, 1879). In the summer of 1882, in consequence of a military rebellion, England intervened, subdued the rising, and restored the authority of the Khedive. In this intervention England was not joined by France, and as a result, on January 18, 1883, the Khedive signed a decree abolishing the joint control of England and France. In the place of the Control, the Khedive, on the recommendation of England, appointed an English financial adviser, without whose concurrence no financial decision could be taken. The Khedivial Decree appended to and approved by the Anglo-French Convention of April 4, 1904, removed most of the restrictions which encumbered the management of Egyptian Finance. No modification may be introduced into the terms of the Decree without the assent of the signatory powers to the Convention of London of 1885.

In November, 1919, it was officially announced that the policy of Great Britain in Egypt was to preserve the autonomy of that country under British protection and to develop the system of self-government under an Egyptian ruler; and that the object of Great Britain was to defend Egypt from all external danger and interference by any foreign Power, and at the same time to establish a constitutional system in which, under British guidance, the Sultan, his Ministers, and the elected representatives of the people might in their several spheres and in an increasing degree co-operate in the management of Egyptian affairs. A mission under Lord Milner was sent to Egypt with the purpose of working out this policy. The Egyptian Government have now (March, 1921) been invited to discuss with the British Government the question of substituting for the protectorate a relationship which, while securing the special interests of Great Britain and enabling the latter to offer adequate guarantees to foreign powers, will meet the legitimate aspirations of Egypt.

The Egyptian Ministry, composed of ten members, is constituted (March 16, 1921) as follows:—

Prime Minister.—Adly Yeghen Pasha.

Vice-President of the Council.—Hussein Rushdi Pasha.

Minister of Interior.—Abdel Khalek Sarwat Pasha.

Minister of Education.—Gassaf Waly Pasha.

Minister of Public Works, Marine and War.—Mohammed Shafik Pasha.

Minister of Justice.—Abdel Fattah Yehia Pasha.

Minister of Agriculture.—Neguib Ghali Pasha.

Minister of Wakfs (Pious Foundations).—Midhat Yeghen Pasha.

Minister of Communications.—Ahmed Ziwer Pasha.

Minister of Finance.—Ismail Sidky Pasha.

The new Ministry of Communications, established in 1919, comprises the following services: The Egyptian State Railways, Telegraphs, and Telephones; the Postal Administration; the Ports and Lighthouses; the Harbour Works; Inland Water Transport; Mechanical Transport; Main Roads and Bridges; Supervision, licensing, and control of civil aerial traffic.

On May 1, 1883, an organic law was promulgated by the Khedive creating a number of representative institutions, including a Legislative Council, a General Assembly, and Provincial Councils. But these bodies were mainly consultative and the Khedive and his Ministers retained most of the legislative power. The above Law was replaced in July, 1913, by the present Organic and Electoral Laws, by which for the Legislative Council and General Assembly was substituted a new body called the Legislative Assembly. This consists of (i) the Ministers, (ii) 66 elected members, and (iii) 17 members nominated by the Government to represent certain minorities. The elections are indirect: every 50 electors choose an elector-delegate, and the electors-delegate elect the members of the Assembly, but are liable to be recalled before any fresh exercise of their functions. The members of this Assembly sit for six years, their numbers being renewed one-third at a time every two years: they also receive payment. The Assembly can initiate legislation and must be consulted on all measures relating to loans, land-tax assessment, or modifications of the railway or irrigation systems. The Government, however, is not bound by the resolutions of the Assembly, and, in the event of a disagreement between the two about any proposed law, the Government can eventually enact the law in such form as it may think fit. The Assembly has the right of veto on new direct, personal or land taxes, which cannot be imposed without its sanction. The ordinary session of the Assembly is from November 1 to May 31.

The Provincial Councils were endowed in 1909 with the powers of applying bye-laws, authorising public-markets, fixing the number and pay of ghafrs (village watchmen), and authorising the creation of ezbas (hamlets). They are the local authorities in connection with elementary vernacular education and trade schools. They consist of two elected representatives from each Markaz. The Mudîr is the ex-officio President of the Council.

Egypt Proper is administratively divided into 5 governorships (muhâfzas) of principal towns, and 14 mudirîas or provinces, subdivided into districts or Markazes. In 1890 the Powers consented to a decree constituting a Municipality in Alexandria, with power to impose local taxes.<sup>1</sup>

In thirteen towns (Mansûra, Medînet el-Fayûm, Tanta, Zagazig, Damanhûr, Beni-Suêf, Mahalla el-Kubra, Minya, Mît Ghamr, Zifta, Kafr el-Zayât, Benha, and Port Said), Mixed Commissions have been formed with power to impose taxes on residents who have given an express consent to be taxed for municipal purposes.

In 41 other towns a third class of town council (Local Commissions) exists, but, in general, there is no power to impose local taxes, the revenue being derived from grants from the central Government, and receipts from water supply, slaughter houses, &c. During recent years, however, 22 of the Local Commissions have, with the express consent of foreigners and Egyptians, imposed local taxation for municipal purposes.

Area and Population.

The total area of Egypt proper, including the Libyan Desert, the region between the Nile and the Red Sea, and the Sinai Peninsula, but excluding the Sudan, is about 350,000 square miles ; but the cultivated and settled area, that is, the Nile Valley and Delta, covers only 12,226 square miles. Canals, roads, date plantations, &c., cover 1,900 square miles ; 2,850 square miles are comprised in the surface of the Nile, marshes, and lakes. Egypt is divided into two great districts—'Masr-el-Bahri,' or Lower Egypt, and 'El-Said,' or Upper Egypt.

The following table gives the area of the settled land surface, and the results of the census taken in March, 1917 :—

The growth of the general population of the country is exhibited by the following figures :—

1800 (French estimate) . . .	2,460,200	1897 (Census) . . .	9,734,405
1821 (Muhammad Ali) . . .	2,536,400	1907 (Census) . . .	11,287,359

1882 (Census) . . .	6,831,131

The average annual increase from 1846 to 1882 was 1·25 per cent. ; from 1882 to 1897, 2·76 per cent. ; 1897–1907, 1·49 per cent. ; from 1846–1907, 1·53 per cent.

For details of the census of 1907, see THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK for 1915, pp. 250–1.

Estimated population, July 1, 1919 : 12,878,000. Births registered, 1919, 493,507 ; deaths, 383,872.

The principal towns, with their populations, according to the results of the census of 1917, are :—Cairo, 790,939 ; Alexandria, 444,617 ; Port Said (including Ismailia), 91,090 ; Suez, 30,996 ; Damietta, 30,984 ; Tanta, 74,195 ; Mansura, 49,238 ; Zagazig, 41,741 ; Damanhûr, 47,867 ; Benha, 18,607 ; Shibîn el-Kôm, 24,604 ; Asyût, 51,431 ; Aswân, 11,293 ; Beni Suêf, 31,986 ; Faiyûm, 44,400 ; Sohâg, 20,760 ; Giza, 18,714 ; Qena, 23,357 ; Minya, 34,945.

Religion and Instruction.

In 1917 the population consisted of 11,658,148 Moslems; 854,773 Orthodox; 59,581 Jews. Christians: 47,481 Protestants; 107,687 Roman Catholics; 14,416 other Christians; 8,827 others. Thus Moslems formed 91·43 per cent. of the population; Christians, 8·03 per cent.; Jews, 0·47 per cent.; others, 0·07 per cent. The principal seat of Koranic learning is the Mosque and University of El-Azhar at Cairo, founded year 361 of the Hegira, 972 of the Christian era. In 1914 it had 405 professors and 9,749 students of Islam and subjects connected therewith. The Mosque of El-Ahmadi at Tanta had 113 professors and 2,860 students at the end of 1914. The Mosque of Damietta had in the same year 16 professors and 411 students, that of Dessûqi (Tanta), 16 professors and 280 students, and the Meshiakhat Olama of Alexandria 75 professors and 1,854 students. All these institutions are under the supervision of the Council of the University of El-Azhar.

There are in Egypt large numbers of native Christians connected with the various Oriental churches; of these, the largest and most influential are the Copts, the descendants of the ancient Egyptians; their creed is Orthodox (Jacobite), and was adopted in the first century of the Christian era. Its head is the Patriarch of Alexandria as the successor of St. Mark. There are three metropolitans and twelve bishops in Egypt, one metropolitan and two bishops in Abyssinia, and one bishop for Khartum; there are also arch-priests, priests, deacons, and monks. Priests must be married before ordination, but celibacy is imposed on monks and high dignitaries. The Copts use the Diocletian (or Martyrs') calendar, which differs by 284 years from the Gregorian calendar.

The following table shows the proportion of illiterates in the various religious communities (1917 census):—

Religion	Population	Number illiterate per 1000 <sup>1</sup>
		Males	Females	Total
Moslems . . . . .	11,658,148	901	937	919
Orthodox . . . . .	854,778	739	920	830
Christians . . . . .	155,168	505	556	531
Jews . . . . .	59,581	482	642	562
Others . . . . .	23,243	912	955	934
Total . . . . .	12,750,918	883	982	933

Subject to certain adjustments for purposes of comparison, it appears that the proportion of the native Egyptian population able to read and write in 1917, as compared with the returns of the previous census in 1907, was as follows:—

1907		1917
Males	Females	Males	Females
85 per 1000	3 per 1000	120 per 1000	18 per 1000

Until 1897, Government initiative in the matter of education was limited to supplying a Europeanised course of education designed to fit Egyptians for various branches of the public service and for professional careers. This system of schools, which owes its origin to the Europeanising zeal of Muhammad Ali Pasha, the first viceroy, consists of Primary Schools, Secondary Schools, and Professional Colleges (Law, Medicine, Engineering, Veterinary, Military, Teaching, Accountancy and Commerce, and Agriculture) in addition to a number of special schools.

Scattered throughout the country there have existed from time immemorial a number of indigenous schools called 'Maktabs.' In 1897, the Ministry of Education endeavoured to bring these independent 'Maktabs' voluntarily under Departmental supervision by means of a system of inspection and reward. Government aid was made dependent upon daily instruction being given in reading, writing, and arithmetic, apart from any religious teaching, and upon the school reaching a satisfactory level of efficiency. The extent to which the scheme has developed is shown in the following table:

Year	Maktabs awarded grants-in-aid and under inspection
	Number of Maktabs	Teachers	Attendance			Grant-in-aid £E
			Boys	Girls	Total
1913-14 .	3,744	7,906	211,270	23,465	234,735	19,427

1918-19* .	3,271	6,160	176,902	24,484	201,386	—

Since 1913 the grants-in-aid to maktabs situated within the areas governed by Provincial Councils have been paid from the funds of the Councils.

The following table gives statistics (corrected to February, 1920), concerning the schools under the immediate direction of the Egyptian Government in 1897 and 1920 respectively. The schools marked with an asterisk are under Departments other than the Ministry of Education.

By agreement with the Provincial Councils it was decided in 1912 that the Ministry of Education should hand over to the Councils the duty of making provision for Elementary Schools in their areas, including the giving of grants-in-aid to the private Maktabas.

The Ministry of Education has under its direct management (February, 1920) :—

Under other Government Departments are the School of Law (353 students), the Military School (90 cadets), the Veterinary School (19 students), the Higher School of Agriculture (99 students), the Intermediate School of Agriculture (108 students), the School for Cadis (higher section, 107, lower, 166 students); the Police School (95 cadets), and reformatories (590 boys, 139 girls). It is proposed to establish a Stat University at Cairo.

Justice.

The indigenous tribunals of the country are the Mehkemas, presided over by the Qadis. At the present time, they retain jurisdiction only in matters of personal law (marriage, succession, &c.), and wakfs—the latter being either charitable foundations, or family settlements with an ultimate remainder in favour of a charitable foundation—and also in certain non-religious cases (e.g. succession) between non-Moslem natives. In matters of personal law other than intestate succession non-Mussulmans are, however, in general subject to their own Patriarchate, or other religious authority. In other matters, natives are justiciable before the so-called Native Tribunals established in 1883. These now consist of 90 Summary Tribunals, each presided over by a single judge, with civil jurisdiction in matters up to £E150 in value, and criminal jurisdiction in offences punishable by fine or by imprisonment up to three years, that is, police offences and misdemeanours; eight Central Tribunals, each of the Chambers of which consists of three judges; and a Court of Appeal at Cairo, about one-third of its members being European. Under a law of 1904, there are also weekly sittings in the Governorate Qisms (to the number of 28) for the disposal of petty offences, the judge having powers up to three months' imprisonment or fine of £E10, and the prosecution being conducted by the police. Civil cases not within the competence of the Summary Tribunals are heard in first instance by the Central Tribunals, with an appeal to the Court of Appeal. The Central Tribunals also hear civil and criminal appeals from the Summary Tribunals. Since 1905 serious crimes (and, under a law of 1910, all press offences) are tried at the Central Tribunals by three judges of the Court of Appeal sitting as an Assize Court, assizes being held monthly. There is a recourse on points of law, in criminal matters, to five judges of the Court of Appeal sitting in Cairo as a Court of Cassation. The prosecution before Summary Tribunals and Assize Courts is entrusted to the Parquet, which is directed by a Procureur Général; the investigation of crime is ordinarily conducted by the Parquet, or by the police under the direction of the Parquet: cases going before an Assize Court are further submitted to a special committing judge. Offences against irrigation laws, &c., are tried by special administrative tribunals.

The so-called "Cantonal Courts," created by a law of July, 1912, should also be mentioned. They are composed of village notables, and have general civil jurisdiction in suits up to £E5 in value, besides an extended jurisdiction in special matters, and a petty criminal jurisdiction with penalties up to 24 hours' imprisonment or PT25 fine. The jurisdiction of each court extends to a group of villages. The courts are now 236 in number.

Owing to the Capitulations, which still apply to Egypt, foreigners are exempted from the jurisdiction of the local tribunals. Mixed tribunals were instituted in 1876, consisting partly of native and partly of foreign judges, with jurisdiction, in civil matters, between natives and foreigners and between foreigners of different nationalities, or even between foreigners of the same nationality if the dispute relates to land in Egypt. These Tribunals have, also, a limited penal jurisdiction, notably in cases of police offences, offences against the bankruptcy laws, and misappropriation of property seized by order of the tribunal. There are three Mixed Tribunals of First Instance, with a Court of Appeal sitting at Alexandria.

The foreign debt of Egypt began in 1862, when loans amounting to 3,292,800*l.* were issued for the purpose of extinguishing the floating debt. Other issues followed in rapid succession. The dual control by England and France began in 1879. In January, 1880, the two Controllers-General reported that Egypt could not possibly meet her engagements in full, and in July the Liquidation Law, in accordance with the recommendation of an International Commission of the Great Powers, was promulgated. By this law the Unified debt was reduced to 4 per cent. interest; further conversions were made, and the Unified debt thus increased to 60,958,240*l.*; certain unconsolidated liabilities were added to the Preference debt, which thus rose to 22,743,800*l.*; and the Daira Sania debt was increased to 9,512,900*l.*, the interest being reduced to 4 per cent. In 1885 and subsequent years further loans and conversions were entered into.

The Daira Sania and the Domains loans were paid off on October 15, 1905, and June 1, 1913, respectively. The amount and the charge of the various debts in April, 1920, were as follows:—

—	Debt	Charge
	£	£E
Guaranteed Loan, 3 per cent. . . . .	6,098,400	307,125
Privileged Debt, 8½ per cent. . . . .	31,127,780	1,062,235
Unified Debt, 4 per cent. . . . .	55,971,960	2,182,906
Total . . . . .	93,198,140	3,552,266

On April 1, 1920, the debt stood at £stg.93,198,140, inclusive of the amount of £stg.6,466,860 held by the Government and the Caisse de la Dette Publique. In 1919-20 the debt was reduced by £190,500.

The charges on account of debts of all kinds (including tribute), as shown in the estimates for 1920-21, amount to £E4,612,372.

In 1888 and 1890, reserve funds were established, the balances of which, in virtue of the Anglo-French Convention of April 4, 1904, were placed at the disposal of the Egyptian Government in 1905, less certain sums remaining in the hands of the Caisse de la Dette Publique for the service of the debt. The amount received by the Egyptian Government was carried to a General Reserve Fund. In this Fund on April 1, 1920, there was a balance of £E17,117,866, including £E1,541,031 realised from the minting of new coinage.

Defence.

EGYPTIAN ARMY.

On September 19, 1882, the existing Egyptian army was disbanded. The organisation of a new army was entrusted to a British general officer, who was given the title of Sirdar. Service is compulsory, but, owing to the small contingent required, only a fraction (4 per cent.) of the men who are liable actually serve. Service is for three years. In the Sudanese battalions service is voluntary and extended. The army consists of 5 squadrons of cavalry, a camel corps, 5 batteries, 18 battalions of infantry (of which 6 are Sudanese and 1 is a special "Equatorial" battalion), a railway battalion, and various departments. Most of the higher posts are held by British officers. The strength of the army is about 17,000.

ARMY OF OCCUPATION.

Before the outbreak of war in August, 1914, the British garrison, or army of occupation, consisted of a cavalry regiment, a horse artillery battery, a mountain battery, a company of engineers, and 4 battalions (one company in Cyprus) stationed in the Nile Delta, and of a battalion of infantry and detachment of garrison artillery stationed in the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan. The establishment, including departmental services, was 6,067 of all ranks.

In 1920 the British garrison consisted of 1 regiment of cavalry, 1 battery R.H.A., 7 battalions of infantry, with detachments of engineers and garrison artillery, making a total of 11,605. In addition there were Indian troops to the number of 20,463. At the end of the year this garrison was in process of reduction.

Production and Industry.

The cultivable area of Egypt proper was reckoned in 1919 at 7,691,793 feddâns (1 feddân = 1·038 acre), and of this 2,829,215 were uncultivated for want of reclamation. The land-tax has been readjusted, the old distinction between Kharâgi and Ushûri tax has disappeared, and the taxes on land range from 2 piastres (1 piastre = 2½d.) to 164 piastres per feddân according to the rental value. The corvée, or forced labour, has been abolished, but the inhabitants are still called out to guard or repair the Nile banks in flood time, and are also liable in any sudden emergency; in 1913 none were called out; in 1914, 21,600; in 1916, 113,000. The agricultural population (Fellahîn) forms about 62 per cent. of the whole. A large proportion of them are small landholders with under 51 feddâns, while others, almost or altogether landless, are labourers, the relation between the employers and the employed being mostly hereditary. The following table shows, for 1919, the number of landholders and the distribution of the land between foreigners and natives:—

Extent of holding in feddâns	Foreigners		Natives		Total of area		Total of Landowners

The Egyptian agricultural year includes three seasons or crops. The leading winter crops, sown in November and harvested in May and June, are cereal produce of all kinds; the principal summer crops, sown in March and harvested in October and November, are cotton, sugar, and rice; the autumn crops, sown in July and gathered in September and October, are rice, maize, millet, and vegetables generally. In Fayûm and Lower Egypt, where perennial irrigation is effected by means of a network of canals tapping the Nile and traversing the Delta in every direction, the chief crops are cotton, rice, Indian corn, wheat, barley, clover, cucumber; in Upper Egypt, south of Deirût, where the basin system of irrigation, i.e. submersion at high Nile, is generally adhered to, cereals and vegetables are produced; north of Deirût the same conditions prevail as in Lower Egypt, except that no rice is grown. Where there is perennial irrigation, two or three crops are secured annually.

Extensive reservoir works, consisting of a dam at Aswân, a barrage at Esna, a barrage at Asyût, and a barrage at Zifta, have been completed. The original storage capacity of the reservoir was 1,065,000,000 cubic metres. The level of the dam has been raised by 6 metres and the capacity of the reservoir increased to 2,423,000,000 cubic metres. The barrage at Esna ensures adequate irrigation to a large area of basin land even in a year of low Nile. North of Deirût an area of approximately half a million acres has been converted from basin to perennial irrigation in the last ten years. The area and production of cotton in six years were :—

Season	Area. Feddans	Crop. Qantârs	Season	Area. Feddans	Crop. Qantârs
1913-14	1,723,000	7,664,000	1917-18	1,677,000	6,298,000
1915-16	1,186,000	4,775,000	1918-19	1,361,000	4,821,000
1916-17	1,656,000	5,060,000	1919-20	1,574,000	5,572,000

The area under cotton in 1920 was 1,828,000 feddans

In 1919 the area and yield of wheat were 1,323,376 acres and 820,195 tons; barley, 356,530 acres and 219,620 tons; maize, 1,792,109 acres; millet, 266,556 acres; rice, 149,630 acres; sugar-cane, 59,311 acres.

In 1919 the sugar exported amounted to 12,689 tons, valued at £E654,656 and the cotton exported amounted to 6,708,906 qantârs, valued at £E65,441,901 (1 qantâr = 99·05 lbs).

The principal mineral products in 1918 were (in metric tons): Phosphate rock, 31,000; petroleum, 282,000; manganese iron ore, 27,000; nitrate shale, 4,500; carbonates and sulphate of soda, 3,500. The production of gold was 2,856 oz. Other products are: Ochres, sulphate of alumina, sulphate of magnesia, talc, building stones, clay, gypsum, natron, nitrate of soda, salt, and turquoise. The following minerals are also known to exist, namely, alum, copper ore, beryl, granite, ornamental stones, and sulphur.

Of the total imports in 1918, the value of £E33,525,624, and of the exports the value of £E40,782,984, passed through the port of Alexandria; in 1919, of the imports, £E34,882,872; of the exports, £E72,453,903; in 1920, of the imports, £E80,988,567 of the exports, £E82,456,180.

Goods imported into Egypt are examined by experts, who determine their value according to the market price in their original country, plus the cost of transport, freight, insurance, &c. In order, however, to facilitate customs operations, the administration, in communication with the merchants interested, establishes, on the same basis as above, periodical tariffs for common articles of importation. In the statistics of the Custom House, the values are taken according to the estimated price which served as the basis for the payment of duty, now fixed at 8 per cent. ad valorem (except coal, liquid fuel, charcoal, firewood, petroleum; oxen, cows, sheep and goats, whether alive or cold stored, the duty on which was reduced to 4 per cent. ad valorem from November 25, 1905; and alcoholic drinks, perfumes, and alcoholic extracts, on which the duty was raised to 10 per cent. on April 30, 1915). As regards exports, there are tariffs for nearly all of them estimated in the same manner as the tariffs of imports. The quantities recorded in statistics are those declared by the merchants and controlled by the Customs.

The origin of imports and destination of exports are declared by importers and exporters and controlled, as much as possible, by the searchers and appraisers of the Custom House.

Shipping and Navigation.

In 1919, excluding warships and vessels requisitioned by the military authorities, 4,567 steamers of a net registered tonnage of 12,554,974 entered at, and 4,511 steamers of a net registered tonnage of 12,569,929 departed from, all the Egyptian ports (Alexandria, Port Said, Suez Basin, Suez Road, Tor, and El Kosseir). These figures include Suez Canal transits. The total number of sailing vessels (both foreign and coasting trade, but excluding sponge and fishing boats) that entered the ports was 1,395 of 71,267 net tons, and of those that departed, 1,424 of 70,613 net tons.

The number of passengers (civil and military) who went through the canal was, in 1913, 282,235 ; 1915, 210,530 ; 1916, 288,030 ; 1917, 142,313 ; 1918, 105,914 ; 1919, 527,502.

The Suez Canal is 103 miles long, including 4 miles of approach channels for the harbours, connecting the Mediterranean with the Red Sea. It was opened for navigation November 17, 1869. The concession to the Suez Canal Company expires on November 17, 1968.

Internal Communications.

On March 31, 1920, there were (exclusive of sidings) 2,330 miles of rail (double and single) belonging to and worked by the State, and 721 miles of rails of agricultural light railways owned by private companies: 1,152 miles of State and 623 miles of companies' rails are in the Delta, and 1,178 miles of State and 98 miles of light railways are in Upper Egypt. This is exclusive of the Sudan military railway to Khartoum, 375 miles long, of gauge 3 ft. 6 in. The railways have a gauge of 4 ft. 8½ in. inside rails except the line from Luxor to Assuan, which is 3 ft. 6 in. gauge, and that to the Western Oases, which is 2 ft. 5½ in.

In May, 1918, Cairo was connected by railway with the Palestinian system, by the completion of a swing-bridge over the Suez Canal at Kantara.

The length of line of the State Railways (excluding the auxiliary railways of Upper Egypt, 280 miles, and the Western Oasis railway, 141 miles) in 1919 was 1,909 miles; the number of passengers carried in 1919—26,213,000; weight of goods carried, including service transports, 4,820,700 tons; and the net receipts, £E1,910,874.

The working expenses, £E5,120,429 in 1919-20, represent an average of 72·82 per cent. of the gross receipts, which were £E7,031,303.

The telegraphs and telephones belonging to the Egyptian Government were, on March 31, 1919, of a total length of 6,311 miles, the length of the wire being 21,310 miles. The Eastern Telegraph Company, by concessions, have telegraph lines across Egypt from Alexandria via Cairo to Suez, and from Port Said to Suez, connecting their cables to England and India. The number of telegrams in 1919-20 was 2,711,228, as against 2,155,443 in 1918-19, not including railway service telegrams and those sent by the Eastern Telegraph.

There were, in 1919, 2,501 post offices and stations. In the internal service (1919) there passed through the post-office 37,278,000 letters and post-cards, and 16,527,000 newspapers, &c., and samples; in the external service, 22,162,000 letters and post-cards, and 8,015,000 newspapers, &c., and samples. Official correspondence, not here included, amounted in 1919 to 7,131,000 articles. Receipts £E437,424; expenses £E431,564.

Banks and Credit.

The National Bank has a capital of 3,000,000*l.* with reserve funds amounting to 2,000,000*l.* The Agricultural Bank has a capital of 3,740,000*l.* It has Government guarantee of interest at 3 per cent., and it lends money to the Fellahin at 8 per cent. interest.

There are in addition eight mortgage banks and five ordinary banks working chiefly in Egypt with a total paid up capital of £E41,011,369, i.e., £E39,381,066 for the former and £E1,630,303 for the latter. The reserve funds of these two groups of banks and of the National and the Agricultural Banks of Egypt amount to £E5,220,330 and £E3,091,368 respectively.

In 1901, a Post-Office Savings Bank was opened, and on December 31 of that year, it had 6,740 depositors with balances amounting to £E47,492. On December 31, 1919, the depositors numbered 224,760, and their balances amounted to £E1,016,400.

In April, 1912, a rural savings bank service was inaugurated. At the end of that year the balance of deposits in the new branch amounted to £E25,413, and the number of accounts to 127,927. On December 31, 1919, the balance amounted to £E9,787, and the number of accounts to 58,441. The balance of deposits in the savings banks of the foreign banks on the same date amounted to £E970,889 and the number of depositors to 11,515.

Money, Weights, and Measures.

MONEY.

By decree of October 18, 1916 (20 Zi-l-Higga 1334), the monetary unit of Egypt is the gold Egyptian pound of 100 piastres. It weighs 8·5 grammes ·875 fine, and therefore contains 7·4375 grammes of fine gold. Its value in sterling is £1 0*s.* 6½*d.* A new coinage was introduced at the same time. It replaces the monogram of the Sultan of Turkey by that of the Sultan of Egypt.

The 10-piastre silver piece weighs 14 grammes ·833 fine, and therefore contains 11·67 grammes of fine silver. The piastre is worth 2·46*d.* in English money. It is subdivided into tenths (ushr el girsh or millièmes).

Coins in circulation are the Egyptian pound (100 piastres) and half pound in gold; 20, 10, 5, and 2 piastre pieces in silver; 1, ½, ¼, ⅓ piastre pieces in nickel, and  $\frac{1}{6}$  piece in bronze. Silver coin is legal tender only up to £E2, and nickel or bronze coins up to 10 piastres. For some years gold coins have not been issued, and the gold circulating in Egypt and the Sudan is almost exclusively English sovereigns, which are legal tender at the rate of 97½ piastres. The gold pieces of the Latin Monetary Union equivalent to the French 20 franc piece are permitted to circulate at a uniform rate of £E0·7715.

Bank notes are issued by the National Bank in various denominations from £E0·25 to £E100. They are in principle not legal tender, but since the war they have been made legal tender and inconvertible. Their circulation has received an extraordinary impetus since the withdrawal of gold from circulation. The amount issued at the end of 1919 was about £E67,000,000, whereas it had never previous to the war surpassed £E3,000,000. In 1918 the Egyptian Government issued Currency Notes of 10 piastres and 5 piastres.

Egyptian money is now minted at the Birmingham and other foreign Mints. The nominal value of the coinage (including recoinage) from 1887 to 1919 was :—

The principal units of Egyptian weights and measures are defined in terms of the metre of the "Commission Internationale du mètre" by the Law No. 10 of September 26, 1914. The equivalents remain the same as were defined by the Decree of April 28, 1891.

Measures of length : Diraa baladi = 0 metre 58 centimetres.

„ weight : Dirhem = 3 grams 12 centigrams.

„ capacity : Ardeb = 198 litres.

MEASURE OF CAPACITY.

The Ardeb is equal to 43·555 gallons, or 5·44436 bushels.

The approximate weight of the ardeb is as follows :—Wheat, 33 rotls ; beans, 345 rotls ; barley, 267 rotls ; maize, 312 rotls ; cotton seed, 270.

WEIGHTS.

Okieh . . . . = 1·3207 ounce.

ANGLO-EGYPTIAN SUDAN.

Government.

The rule of Egypt in the Sudan, after having gradually extended during the course of 60 years, was interrupted in 1882 by the revolt of the Mahdi, who, with his successor, the Khalifa, held the country for about sixteen years under a desolating tyranny. In 1896 the Anglo-Egyptian army commenced operations for the recovery of the lost provinces, and on September 2, 1898, the overthrow of the Khalifa was completed. In November, 1899, he was overtaken by the Egyptian forces near Gedid, where he was slain in battle, and his remaining followers taken prisoners.

A convention between the British and Egyptian Governments, signed at Cairo, January 19, 1899, provides for the administration of the territory south of the 22nd parallel of latitude by a Governor-General, appointed by Egypt with the assent of Great Britain, and declares the general principles in accordance with which the administration shall be carried on. The British and Egyptian flags shall be used together; laws shall be made by proclamation; no duties shall be levied on imports from Egypt, and duties on imports from other countries, via the Red Sea, shall not exceed those levied in Egypt; the import and export of slaves is prohibited, and special attention shall be paid to the Brussels Act of 1890 respecting the import and export of arms, ammunition, and spirits.

The Sudan has been divided into fifteen Provinces. The Governors of provinces are British Officers of the Egyptian Army employed under the Sudan Government or British civil officials of the Government. Administration is carried out through British Inspectors in charge of one or more districts into which the provinces are subdivided, these units being supervised by District officials who are in most cases Egyptian officers lent from the Egyptian Army.

In 1910 a Governor-General's Council was created to assist the Governor-General in the discharge of his executive and legislative powers. All ordinances, laws and regulations are now made by the Governor-General in Council.

The Enclave of Lado, which was continued in the occupation of H.M. King Leopold II, King of the Belgians, during his reign, by the Agreement signed at Brussels on May 12, 1906, reverted to the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan on his death, and has been included in the Mongalla province.

Area and Population.

Extending southwards from the frontier of Egypt to Uganda and the Belgian Congo (approximately N. lat. 5°), a distance of about 1,650 miles, and stretching from the Red Sea to the confines of Wadai in Central Africa, the subject territory has an area of about 1,014,400 square miles.

The population in 1917 was estimated at 3,400,000. The Gambela Enclave which is situated within the boundaries of Abyssinia, is leased by the Sudan Government from the Abyssinian Government as a Trading Post. The Eritrea-Sudan frontier has been completely delimited and demarcated, as also has the greater part of the frontier with Abyssinia (see under Abyssinia). The chief towns are: Khartum, population 23,083, the capital; Omdurman (the old Dervish capital), population 50,429; Khartum North, population 15,973; Halfa, Merowé, El Damer, Atbara, Port Sudan, Suakin, Kassala, El Dueim, Kostî, El Obeid, Nahud, Wad Medani, Singa, and El Fasher.

Instruction.

The schools under the Central Authority are classified as follows:—There are first the elementary vernacular schools (Kuttabs), 74 in number (December, 1919), situated in all parts of the country, and with a total number of about 6,667 pupils. In these schools instruction is given to boys from 7 to 10 years of age in reading, writing, arithmetic and religion. Next there are the primary schools, of which there are now six—at Khartum, Omdurman, Wad Medani, Atbara, El Obeid, and Suakin. The subjects taught in schools of this class include English, Arabic, Mathematics, and the total number of boys in attendance is 1,051. After completing their primary course, boys can proceed to the upper school at the Gordon College, or they may be employed as clerks or translators in Government Offices. The upper school at Gordon College is attended by 98 pupils, some of whom take a course in engineering and surveying, while the rest are trained to be teachers in primary schools or translators. There is also in the Gordon College buildings a training college attended by 65 students, who undergo a five years' course of training, after which they are drafted out as Kadis in district courts. The industrial workshops, of which there are at present two, at Khartum and Omdurman, are attended by 190 boy apprentices. At Khartum smith work, carpentry, fitting, &c., are taught, and at Omdurman stone-cutting, pottery, and brick-work. A primary school has been constructed adjacent to the Gordon College, and some of the boys board in the Gordon College. A start has been made in the education of girls by the opening of girls' schools at Rufaa, El Obeid, Dongola, Merowe, and Kamlin, which are attended by 261 girls altogether. Affiliated to the Gordon College are the Wellcome Tropical Research Laboratories, where investigations are carried on in connection with diseases and with the economic products of the country.

A Central Research Farm has been organised at Khartum North, under the auspices of the Education Department, for the furtherance of agricultural research and education. Laboratories have been built and equipped for the study of agricultural botany, physiology and bacteriology. Comparative field experiments with such staple crops as cotton, wheat and lubia are supplemented by sections devoted to plant introduction, seed selection, horticulture, experimental forestry and market gardening.

The geological survey, the antiquities service, and the natural history museum are also attached to the Education Department.

Justice.

The High Court of Justice for the trial of civil suits comprises the Court of Appeal and Courts of original jurisdiction. Judges of the High Court sitting singly have general original jurisdiction. The Court of Appeal is constituted by three or more Judges of the High Court sitting together, all Judges of the High Court being members of the Court of Appeal.

The general superintendence of the High Court is vested in the Chief Justice. In addition to the Chief Justice there are four Judges of the High Court, three of whom are British barristers, and one promoted from the Sudan Civil Service. The High Court sits at Khartum, but judges from time to time go on circuit.

Subordinate to the High Court of Justice in every province is the Province Court. This comprises a Province Judge, except in Khartum Province, and District Judges of three grades. Appeals from decisions of a District Judge lie to the Province Judge, except in Khartum Province, where such appeals lie to the High Court. Appeals from decisions of a Province Judge lie to the High Court.

In Provinces where there is neither a High Court Judge nor a specially appointed Province Judge the Governor acts as Province Judge, and in any District where there is no specially appointed District Judge the provincial inspectors and district officers act as District Judges.

The Mohammedan Law Courts administer the Moslem religious law in cases between Mohammedans relating to succession on death, marriage, divorce, and family relations generally, and also Mohammedan charitable endowments.

Criminal justice is administered either by single magistrates, or courts of three magistrates. Judges of the High Court, and District Judges of the first grade, governors, and inspectors of provinces, and the district officials above-mentioned, are the magistrates. Decisions of courts require confirmation either by the Governor of the province or by the Governor-General, both of whom have extensive powers of revision. Appeal lies from convictions by magistrates other than Governors, where the sentence exceeds two months' imprisonment or 2*l.* fine.

The Sudan penal code is an adaptation of the Indian penal code.

The Legal Secretary fulfils the duties of a Minister of Justice.

Finance.

The revenue and expenditure of the Sudan are stated as follows (£E1 = £1 0*s.* 6*d.*) :—

Year	Revenue	Expenditure	Year	Revenue	Expenditure
	£E	£E		£E	£E
1913(pre-war)	1,568,352	1,583,065	1918 . .	2,774,689	2,836,315
1915 . .	1,495,227	1,463,934	1919 . .	2,992,792	2,720,513
1916 . .	1,857,856	1,745,532	1920 <sup>1</sup> . .	3,500,000	3,500,000
1917 . .	2,195,355	1,901,941

The revenue is derived mainly from Land Tax, (213,000*l.* in 1919), Animal Tax (149,000*l.* in 1919), Royalties on Gum and Ivory (128,000*l.* in 1919), and Customs (328,000*l.* in 1919), and from the receipts of the Railways and Nile Steamer Services (1,278,000*l.* in 1919), and Posts and Telegraphs (118,000*l.* in 1919).

From 1914 onwards, the figures do not include the revenue and expenditure of Local Provincial Services, which amounted in 1919 to 161,191*l.*E. and 153,270*l.*E. respectively.

Production and Commerce.

The Sudan is the chief source of the world's supply of gum arabic (exports, 1919, 15,490 tons, £E548,244) and ivory (exports 1919, 50 tons, £E46,556). Egyptian cotton has been successfully established on the Nile, as well as in the Toker district of the Red Sea Province, and increasing quantities of cotton, which compare favourably with corresponding varieties grown in Egypt, are being produced annually. The Gezira irrigation project (by means of the dam on the Blue Nile at Makwar, about 170 miles south of Khartum) will enable 100,000 acres to be put under cotton in a few years' time with unlimited scope for extension. Cotton area, 1919, 56,000 feddans ; crop 1919-20 estimated at 120,000 kantars. Other products include sesame, senna leaves and pods, groundnuts, dates, hides and skins, and gold. The principal grain crops are dura, a kind of millet used for making bread, and dukhn. Estimated yield of dura, 1919, 144,600 tons.

The cattle trade in the Sudan shows remarkable growth in recent years, and the number exported is increasing yearly. The reason for this is that while it is easy for the native to raise cattle, the Government on their part—through an efficient and well-organised Veterinary Department, is endeavouring to foster the trade, to eliminate cattle diseases, and to improve the quality of live-stock.

The forests which line the river banks, rich in fibres and tanning material, extend to the frontiers of Abyssinia. On the White Nile the forests contain valuable trees—the ebony tree, the gum acacia, the bamboo, and the rubber creeper. The finest gum forests are in Kordofan, and the best rubber in the Bahr el Ghazal.

Gold is the only mineral at present being successfully exploited in the Sudan, a mine being worked at Gabait.

Internal Communications.

The railway from Wadi Halfa to Khartum, which was constructed for military purposes during the re-conquest, was declared open for general traffic on December 12, 1899. A connection with the Red Sea at Port Sudan was opened in October, 1905, and an extension of the line to Sennar and El Obeid was opened for traffic in February, 1912. The total length of line is, approximately, 1,500 miles. The gauge is 3ft. 6in.

All navigable arms of the Nile and its tributaries between Assuan (Egypt) and Rejaf are served by a fleet of Government passenger and cargo steamers which maintain a regular scheduled service over more than 2,500 miles of water.

There is telegraphic communication with Egypt, Erythrea, and Abyssinia, and also wireless communication with Gambela in Western Abyssinia. There are several wireless stations with ranges varying from 150 to 400 miles. At the beginning of 1919 there were 4,558 miles of telegraph line open, and 7,126 miles of wire. There are 80 stationary Post and Telegraph Offices and 11 travelling Post Offices.

BERMUDAS.

Governor. — General Sir James Willcocks, G.C.M.G., K.C.B., K.C.S.I., D.S.O. (3,800*l.*), assisted by an Executive Council of 7 members appointed by the Crown, a Legislative Council of 9 members, also appointed by the Crown, and a representative House of Assembly of 36 members; 1,413 electors.

A Colony, with representative government, consisting of a group of 360 small islands (about 20 inhabited), 580 miles east of North Carolina, and 677 miles from New York, noted for their climate and scenery; favourite winter resort for Americans, who number some 22,000 annually.

Area, 19·3 square miles (12,360 acres, 4,000 under cultivation). Civil population on December 31, 1919, 21,869 (including 7,441 whites); 12,750 belong to Church of England (census 1911). In 1919 the birth-rate was 24·87 and the death-rate was 17·28 per 1,000; illegitimate births formed 14·3 per cent. of the total births, 1918; there were 155 marriages in 1918. In 1918 the excess of immigration over emigration was 36. Education: There are no Government schools in Bermuda, but education is compulsory, and Government assistance is given by the payment of grants, and, where necessary, school fees. The aided schools must reach a certain standard of efficiency, and submit to Government inspection and control. In 1918 30 aided primary schools, with 2,576 pupils, received Government grants, 2,853*l.* annually. There are 3 garrison schools and 2 naval schools; about 17 other primary schools, and 4 secondary schools receiving no Government grant. Cambridge local examinations are held in Bermuda. A Government scholarship (150*l.* for 2 years) is provided annually to enable youths educated in Bermuda to go abroad to prepare themselves for a Rhodes scholarship. Chief town Hamilton, 2,627 population. Bermuda is an important naval base on the North America and West India Station, with dockyard, victualling establishment, &c. Police force, 1918, 48.

Imports (excluding Government stores) from United Kingdom in 1919, 59,990£.; United States, 466,000£.; Canada, 230,000£.

Food supplies are mostly imported from the United States and Canada, and nearly all the export produce of Bermuda goes to the United States. The principal imports in 1918 were: provisions, 174,804£.; flour and meal, 56,414£.; cotton goods, 34,100£.; butter, 21,375£.; ale and beer, 14,982£.; hardware and cutlery, 13,734£.; groceries, 14,242£.; oats, 30,874£.; coal, 23,138£.; sugar, 27,350£.; apparel, 19,477£.; leather wares, 24,047£.; oxen and cows, 11,561£. The principal exports in 1918 were: onions, 24,139£. potatoes, 78,233£.; other vegetables, 8,427£.

The registered shipping consisted (1918) of 7 steam vessels of 2,189 tons net, and 16 sailing vessels of 3,336 tons net; total net tonnage, 5,525.

In 1919 the total tonnage of vessels entered and cleared was 1,258,188 tons, of which 632,212 were British. There are 220 miles of telephone wire under the control of the military, and 15 of telegraph cable. There is also a private telephone company, which has about 775 subscribers and upwards of 1,600 miles of wire. A telegraph cable connects the islands with Halifax, Nova Scotia, and another connects with Turks Island and Jamaica. There were (1918) 19 post offices in the colony; the number of letters and post cards dealt with in the year 1918 was 1,405,756; newspapers, book packets and circulars, 429,098; parcels, 17,828. The post office revenue was 8,815£., and expenditure, 8,588£. Savings bank deposits on December 31, 1918, were 44,057£., to the credit of 2,286 depositors.

There are two banks in the Island, the Bank of Bermuda, Ltd., and the Bank of N. T. Butterfield and Son, Ltd., both local. The Colonial Government deals with both. Bills of exchange issued by the Treasury Chest Office in the Colony form the basis of exchange with the outside world.

The currency, weights, and measures are British, but silver coin is legal tender to any amount. The British 1£. and 10s. notes are legal tender. The Bermuda Government is also authorised to issue 1£. notes up to an amount not exceeding 40,000£.

CANADA.

(DOMINION OF CANADA.)

Constitution and Government.

The territories which now constitute the Dominion of Canada came under British power at various times, some by settlement and others by conquest or session. Nova Scotia was occupied in 1627; the Hudson's Bay Company's Charter, conferring rights over the territories to the east and west of the Bay, was granted in 1670; Canada was conquered in 1759 and, along with New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island, was formally ceded to Great Britain by France in 1763; Vancouver Island was acknowledged to be British by the Oregon Boundary Treaty of 1846, and British Columbia was occupied in 1858. As originally constituted the Dominion was composed of the provinces of Canada—Upper and Lower Canada, now Ontario and Quebec—Nova Scotia, and New Brunswick. They were united under the provisions of an Act of the Imperial Parliament passed in March, 1867, known as 'The British North America Act, 1867,' which came into operation on July 1, 1867, by royal proclamation. The Act provides that the Constitution of the Dominion shall be 'similar in principle to that of the United Kingdom'; that the executive authority shall be vested in the Sovereign of Great Britain and Ireland, and carried out in his name by a Governor-General and Privy Council; and that the legislative power shall be exercised by a Parliament of two Houses, called the 'Senate' and the 'House of Commons.' The powers of the Federal Parliament include all subjects not assigned exclusively to the provincial legislatures. Provision was made in the Act for the admission of British Columbia, Prince Edward Island, the North-West Territories, and Newfoundland into the Dominion; Newfoundland alone has not availed itself of such provision. In 1869, the extensive region known as the North-West Territories was added to the Dominion by purchase from the Hudson's Bay Company, the province of Manitoba was set apart out of a portion of it, and admitted into the confederation on July 15, 1870. On July 20, 1871, the provinces of British Columbia, and by an Imperial Order in Council of May 16, in the same year, Prince Edward Island, were admitted into the confederation. The provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan were formed from the provisional districts of Alberta, Athabaska, Assiniboia, and Saskatchewan and were admitted to the Union as provinces on September 1, 1905.

Canadian ministers signed the Peace Treaties with Germany and Austria in 1919 on behalf of Canada, thus making a new status for the Dominion.

The members of the Senate are nominated for life, by summons of the Governor-General under the Great Seal of Canada. The numerical representation of the Senate by provinces down to 1917 was as follows: Prince Edward Island, 4; Nova Scotia, 10; New Brunswick, 10; Quebec, 24; Ontario, 24; Manitoba, 4; Saskatchewan, 4; Alberta, 4; British Columbia, 3; Total, 87. By the Amendment of the British North America Act, 1867 (April, 1915), which came into effect in 1917, the Senate consists of 96 senators—namely, 24 from the province of Ontario, 24 from Quebec, 10 from Nova Scotia, 10 from New Brunswick, 6 from Prince Edward Island, 6 from Manitoba, 6 from British Columbia, 4 from Alberta, and 6 from Saskatchewan. The total number may not exceed 104. Each senator must be 30 years of age, a born or naturalised subject, and must reside in, and be possessed of property, real or personal, of the value of 4,000 dollars, within the province for which he is appointed. The House of Commons is elected by the people, for five years, unless sooner dissolved, at the rate at present of one representative for every 30,819 persons, the province of Quebec always having 65 members, and the other provinces proportionally, according to their populations at each decennial census. The House of Commons consists of 235 members—82 for Ontario, 65 for Quebec, 16 for Nova Scotia, 11 for New Brunswick, 15 for Manitoba, 13 for British Columbia, 4 for Prince Edward Island, 16 for Saskatchewan, 12 for Alberta, and 1 for the Yukon Territory. The members are elected by constituencies. Voting is by ballot. Women have the vote and are eligible for election to the Federal Parliament.

Last Election, December, 1917.

The Speaker in the House of Commons has a salary of 6,000 dollars per annum, and each member an allowance of 4,000 dollars for the session with a deduction of 25 dollars per day for every day beyond fifteen on which the member does not attend a sitting of the House. The Leader of the Opposition receives 10,000 dollars in addition to his ordinary sessional allowance.

The Speaker and members of the Senate have the same allowances as in the House of Commons with no extra allowances.

Governor-General.—The Duke of Devonshire, K.G., G.C.M.G., G.C.V.O. Appointed August 19, 1916. Salary, 50,000 dollars per annum.

Each minister has a salary of 10,000 dollars a year, and the Prime Minister has 15,000 dollars, in addition to 4,000 dollars sessional allowance.

There is a Department of External Affairs, which has charge of all Imperial and inter-Dominion Correspondence passing between Ottawa and Downing Street, and between Ottawa and the sister Dominions and Colonies. It is also the medium of communication between the Dominion Government and the foreign Consuls in Canada. An arrangement has been concluded between the British and Canadian Governments to provide more complete representation at Washington of Canadian interests than has hitherto existed. Accordingly, it has been agreed that his Majesty, on the advice of his Canadian Ministers, shall appoint a Minister Plenipotentiary, who will have charge of Canadian affairs, and will be at all times the ordinary channel of communication with the United States Government in matters of purely Canadian concern, acting upon instruction from and reporting direct to the Canadian Government. In the absence of the Ambassador, the Canadian Minister will take charge of the whole Embassy, and of the representation of Imperial as well as Canadian interests. A Dominion Bureau of Statistics was established in 1919, for the centralization and organization of statistical work.

High Commissioner for the Dominion of Canada in Great Britain.—

Hon. Sir George H. Perley, K.C.M.G.

Permanent Secretary.—W. L. Griffith.

PROVINCIAL GOVERNMENT.

The nine provinces have each a separate parliament and administration with a Lieutenant-Governor appointed by the Governor-General at the head of the executive. They have full powers to regulate their own local affairs and dispose of their revenues, provided only they do not interfere with the action and policy of the central administration. Among the subjects assigned exclusively to the provincial legislature are: the amendment of the provincial constitution, except as regards the office of the Lieutenant-Governor; direct taxation for revenue purposes; borrowing; management and sale of crown lands; provincial hospitals, reformatories, &c.; shops, saloon, tavern, auctioneer, and other licences for local or provincial purposes; local works and undertakings, except lines of ships, railways, canals, telegraphs, &c., extending beyond the province or connecting with other provinces, and also except such works as the Federal Parliament declare are for the general good; marriages; administration of justice within the province; education. Quebec and Nova Scotia have each two Chambers (a Legislative Council and a Legislative Assembly) and a responsible Ministry. In New Brunswick, Ontario, Manitoba, British Columbia, Prince Edward Island, Alberta and Saskatchewan there is only one Chamber (the Legislative Assembly) and a responsible Ministry. The members of the Legislative Council of Nova Scotia number 18, and Quebec 24. The membership of the Legislative Assemblies is—Prince Edward Island 30, Nova Scotia 43, New Brunswick 47, Quebec 81, Ontario 111, Manitoba 49, British Columbia 47, Alberta 58, and Saskatchewan 62. The North-West Territories, comprising all the territories formerly known as Rupert's Land, and the North-Western Territory except the provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, the district of Keewatin, and the Yukon Territory, are governed by a Commissioner and a Council of four appointed by the Governor in Council at Ottawa. The territory of Yukon is governed by a Chief Executive Officer and an Executive Council of three members elected by the people.

The total 'urban' population of Canada in 1911 is given as 3,280,964, against 2,021,799 in 1901. Of the number in 1911, 270,000 were in 'cities and towns' of under 1,000 inhabitants.

There are no complete vital statistics collected for the Dominion, the registration of births, deaths and marriages being under provincial control. But not all the provinces collect these statistics (New Brunswick has no returns), nor is there a uniform system in the method of collection. The following table shows the returns so far as they are available. New Brunswick is not included.

Instruction.

The Provincial Governments have control of education in elementary schools, secondary schools, normal schools and universities; the systems are all based on the principle of free education, the funds being supplied in nearly all the provinces by Government grants and local taxation. Education is more or less compulsory, but the law is not very strictly enforced. In Ontario, Quebec, Alberta, and Saskatchewan there are separate schools for Roman Catholics; in the other provinces the schools are unsectarian.

Each province has one or more universities (22 in all, with 2,610 professors and teachers, and 20,535 students, in 1918-19), and several colleges. The provincial universities are supported by the Government and include those of New Brunswick, Toronto, Saskatchewan, Alberta, and British Columbia. Those on private foundation comprise Dalhousie, McGill, Queen's (formerly denominational and now State-aided), and Western of London, Ontario. The denominational universities include King's, Arcadia, and St. Francois Xavier, all of Nova Scotia; Sackville, New Brunswick; Laval, Bishop's College, and Lennoxville, of Quebec; and McMaster and Ottawa, in Ontario. There are in all about 43 colleges; attendance, 12,671 during the academic year 1918-19.

In 1919 there were in Canada 1,351 periodical publications, classified as follows: Dailies, 121; triweeklies, 5; weeklies, 930; semiweeklies, 39; monthlies, 211; semimonthlies, 27; bimonthlies, 6; and quarterlies, 12.

Justice and Crime.

There is a Supreme Court in Ottawa, having appellate, civil and criminal jurisdiction in and throughout Canada. There is an exchequer court, which is also a colonial court of admiralty, with powers as provided in the Imperial 'Colonial Courts of Admiralty Act, 1890.' There is a Superior Court in each province; county courts, with limited jurisdiction, in most of the provinces; all the judges in these courts being appointed by the Governor General. Police magistrates and justices of the peace are appointed by the Provincial Governments.

In 1919, 23,021 persons were charged with indictable offences; of these 18,396 were convicted. Also 111,623 were summarily convicted.

The North-West Mounted Police and the Dominion Police have been amalgamated, and are known as the Royal Canadian Mounted Police.

Finance.

Financial accounts are under three headings—first, 'Consolidated Fund' comprising the general sources of revenue and branches of expenditure; secondly, 'Loans' in revenue, and 'Redemption' with 'Premiums and Discounts' in expenditure; and thirdly, 'Open accounts.' The heading 'Loans' and 'Redemption' include the deposits in and withdrawals from the Post Office and Government Savings Banks, the amount on deposits forming part of the floating or unfunded debt of the country. Under the head of 'Open Accounts' are included investments, trust funds, Provincial accounts, and expenditure on capital account on public works.

Defence.

Under the Militia Act of 1904, the command in chief of the militia is vested in the King, by whom, or by the Governor-General as his representative, it is exercised and administered. The Act further provides for the appointment of a Minister of Militia and Defence, charged with the administration of militia affairs, and of a Deputy Minister; also for the appointment of a Militia Council. This includes, besides the Minister and Deputy Minister, four military members—the Chief of the General Staff, the Adjutant-General, the Quartermaster-General, and the Master-General of the Ordnance. There is also an Inspector-General whose duty it is to inspect the forces and report to the Militia Council on their readiness for war, but he has no seat in Council.

The Canadian land forces are divided into the active militia and the reserve militia. The active militia consists of a permanent force and of a non-permanent force, the latter divided into city and rural corps. Service in the active militia is voluntary and for three years, but the Government has the power to apply compulsion should the necessity arise. The permanent force comprises all arms of the service and is composed of a number of permanently embodied units. It provides personnel for the various schools of military instruction and garrisons for the fortresses, where a permanent element is necessary for defence, for the maintenance of works and for the preservation of armaments. The non-permanent active militia undergoes an annual period of training, which varies from 12 to 16 days, according to the arms of the service and the location of the corps, i.e., whether they are city or rural. (Owing to the re-organization of the active militia, it has not been possible to make much progress with its training during the past season.) The reserve militia has not yet been organised.

The authorised establishment for the permanent force is approximately 6,700. The non-permanent active militia is comprised of such corps as from time to time are authorised by the Governor-General in Council. In pre-war days its strength was approximately 68,000.

The above organisations are supplemented by numerous cadet corps and rifle associations. The Royal Military College at Kingston provides both a military and a general education. It trains officers both for the permanent force and for the remainder of the active militia; and a certain number of commissions in the British regular army are granted annually to its cadets.

Schemes for a Canadian Navy have been mooted but are at present somewhat in abeyance. The old cruisers Niobe and Rainbow, taken over as training ships, have been employed in commerce protection, and are now to be sold. The local force consists otherwise of a number of miscellaneous gun-vessels and icebreakers, some of which are on the Great Lakes. At the outbreak of the war two submarines, which were building in the United States for Chile, were bought (C. C. 1 and 2), and are on the Pacific coast; two submarines H 4 and 5) have been allocated to the Dominion by the British Admiralty. Two destroyers of the 'M' class, Patrician and Patriot, have been acquired; completed 1916, 980 tons, 35 knots, three 4-in. and smaller guns.

Production and Industry.

Agriculture.—In 1911, there were 48,375,000 acres of improved land out of 109,777,085 acres of occupied land. The value in 1919 of the agricultural wealth of Canada has been estimated as follows: agricultural production, 1,976 million dollars; value of farm lands, 2,792; buildings, 228; implements, 387; and farm live stock, 1,297; total, 7,380 million dollars. The following table, compiled from data collected at the Dominion censuses of 1901 and 1911, shows the distribution of farm holdings according to size in the whole of Canada and in the Provinces of Manitoba and Saskatchewan for the two years named:—

In Ontario, apples, the vine, and tobacco are grown. The live stock in Canada on June 15, 1920, comprised 3,400,000 horses, 3,530,000 milk cows, 5,947,000 other cattle, 3,721,000 sheep, 3,517,000 swine, 25,942,000 chickens, 2,164,000 turkeys, geese, and ducks. In 1918, there were divided into ranches in Manitoba, 66,563 acres, British Columbia, 393,258 acres, Alberta, 2,563,145 acres, and Saskatchewan, 2,723,217 acres: total, 5,746,178 acres (4,796 ranches). The wool clip in Canada for 1919 is estimated at 15 million lbs. The number of dairy factories in operation in 1919 was 3,343. In 1919 the production of creamery butter was 101,554,000 lbs., value, 55,180,000 dollars; of factory cheese, 167,735,000 lbs., value 44,806,000 dollars; of condensed milk, 61,898,000 lbs., valued at 9,425,000 dollars; evaporated milk, 16,108,000 lbs., valued at 1,789,000 dollars; whole milk sold, 22,390,000 gallons, valued at 10,377,000 dollars.

Forestry.—The total area of land covered by timber is officially estimated at between 500 and 600 million acres. Of this 200 to 300 million are covered with commercial timber. This is distributed by provinces as follows :—

	Acres		Acres
British Columbia . . .	50,000,000	Quebec . . . . .	100,000,000
Manitoba, Saskatchewan,		New Brunswick . . . .	9,000,000

Ontario . . . . .	70,000,000

The forest products exported to the United Kingdom in 1919–20 amounted in value to 30,249,000 dollars, out of a total of 105,337,000 dollars. The estimated value of the total forest products for the calendar year 1918 was 190,000,000 dollars. The exportable surplus of the wood pulp industry was 41,383,482 dollars in 1919–20, chiefly to Great Britain and the United States. The Crown forests belong to the Provincial Governments, except in Manitoba, Alberta and Saskatchewan, and the Railway Belt (forty miles wide) in British Columbia, where they belong to the Dominion.

The total capital invested in the lumber industry in 1918 was 182,254,740 dollars. The aggregate value of production (lumber, lath, shingles, etc.) was 146,333,192 dollars (Ontario, 42,872,958 dollars; Quebec, 40,199,895; British Columbia, 39,442,660; New Brunswick, 14,977,974 dollars). There were 3,085 mills; 60,868 persons employed; wages and salaries came to 49,786,122 dollars; cost of materials and mill supplies, 45,876,832 dollars; cost of fuel and miscellaneous supplies, 24,299,638 dollars.

Fisheries.—The coast line of the Atlantic Provinces, from the Bay of Fundy to the Strait of Belle Isle, without taking into account the lesser bays and indentations, measures over 5,000 miles. On the Pacific coast the Province of British Columbia, because of its numerous islands, bays, and fjords, has a sea-washed shore of 7,000 miles. In addition to this immense salt-water fishing area Canada has 220,000 square miles of fresh water abundantly stocked with many species of excellent food fishes.

The fisheries of the Atlantic coast may be divided into two distinct classes: The deep sea, which take cod, haddock, hake, pollock, and halibut; and the inshore or coastal, which take cod, hake, haddock, pollock, halibut, herring, mackerel, alewife, shad, smelt, flounder, and sardine. The most extensive lobster fishery known is carried on along the eastern shore of Canada, while excellent oyster beds exist in many parts of the Gulf of St. Lawrence. The salmon fishery is the predominant one on the Pacific coast, but an important halibut fishery is also carried on. The inland lake fisheries yield whitefish, trout, pickerel, pike,urgeon, and fresh-water herring. In the calendar year 1918 the capital invested in vessels, gear, canneries, etc. (including working capital and stocks on hand) was 60,212,863 dollars. The total value of the produce of the fisheries of Canada in that year was 60,250,544 dollars. The principal kinds of fish caught were: salmon, 17,869,517 dollars; lobsters, 3,531,104 dollars; codfish, 10,368,596 dollars; herrings, 4,719,561 dollars; halibut, 5,490,226 dollars; haddock, 2,796,171 dollars; sardines, 2,320,513 dollars; whitefish, 1,927,863 dollars. The exports were valued at 37,137,072 dollars. The exports of dry-salted codfish were 57,036,800 lb.; canned lobsters, 4,590,200 lb.; fresh lobsters, 4,249,900 lb.; canned salmon, 47,813,700 lb. The number of persons employed in 1918 was 87,070, including those in shore work and canneries. The number of factories and canneries in operation in 1918 was 939. In 1918, according to provinces, the values were: Nova Scotia, 15,153,066 dollars; British Columbia, 27,282,223 dollars; New Brunswick, 6,298,990 dollars; Quebec, 4,568,773 dollars; Ontario, 3,175,111 dollars; Prince Edward Island, 1,148,201 dollars; Manitoba, 1,830,435 dollars; Saskatchewan, 447,012 dollars; Alberta, 318,913 dollars; and Yukon, 37,820 dollars.

Mining.—Nova Scotia, British Columbia, Quebec, N. and W. Ontario, Alberta, and Yukon Territory are the chief mining districts. The total value of the mineral produce was in 1918, 211,301,897 dollars; in 1919, 173,145,913 dollars. The estimate for 1920 is about 200 million dollars. <sup>1</sup> The metals copper, lead, nickel, and silver, are, for statistical and comparative purposes, valued at the final average value of the refined metal. Pig-iron is valued at the furnace, non-metallic products at the mine or point of shipment, and structural materials and clay products at the point of shipment.

The water power resources of Canada have been estimated at 20 million horse power. The plants existing in 1919 utilised about 2,400,000 horse power (Ontario, over a million, Quebec, 900,000, British Columbia, 300,000).

Commerce.

The customs tariff of Canada is protective, but there is a preferential tariff in favour of the United Kingdom and most of the colonies ; the duties on direct imports from the United Kingdom and the colonies, &c., being reduced, but alcoholic liquors, liquid medicines, tobacco, and refined sugar from raw sugar produced elsewhere than in British colonies, are excluded from the reduction.

The returns of values of imports and exports are those supplied in entries at the Customs, where imports must be entered for duty at their fair market value as for home consumption in the country of purchase. Quantities are ascertained from invoices and by examination, wines are gauged and spirits tested. The country whence imports are received is the country of purchase or whence shipment was made to Canada ; the country of destination is that to which shipment is made. Thus, Canadian wheat, purchased by New York dealers shipped to and entered in bond at New York, and thence exported to Great Britain, would appear only as exported from Canada to the United States. The only Canadian port where transit trade is recorded is Montreal, such trade comprising chiefly goods received from the United States and transhipped to other countries by the St. Lawrence route. Transit trade is not included in the general trade, which comprises all other imports into and exports from Canada. The term "special trade," in Canada, is applied to imports from Newfoundland which are exempt from duties leviable on similar goods from other countries.

All export entries are delivered at the ' frontier port of exit,' and the totals thereof are credited to the respective ports where the goods pass outward from Canada.

On April 9, 1912, a trade agreement providing for preference treatment between the two parties was signed between Canada and the West Indies, to last for 10 years and to come into operation on January 1, 1913. Canada brought the Act into force on June 2, 1913. A new agreement, providing for an extension of the preference, was signed at Ottawa on June 18, 1920, and up to November 1, 1920, had been ratified by the Windward Islands, the Bahamas, and British Honduras.

Canada has a system of canal, river, and lake navigation over 2,700 miles in length, and vessels from the lake ports reach the Atlantic without breaking bulk. Up to 1919 126,913,207 dollars had been spent on canals for construction and enlargement alone. In 1919 24,774 vessels, of 13,995,146 tons, passed through the Canadian canals, carrying 291,800 passengers and January 11, 1909, was signed at Washington a treaty between the United Kingdom and the United States relating to the use of the boundary waters between Canada and the United States. The treaty provides for the establishment and maintenance of an international joint commission, consisting of three representatives appointed by H.M. the King on the recommendation of the Governor in Council of the Dominion of Canada, and three appointed by the President of the United States. This commission, subject to the conditions of the treaty, has jurisdiction in all cases involving the use or obstruction or diversion of the boundary waters. Precedence is given by the treaty to uses of the waters in the following order, viz., (1) for domestic and sanitary purposes, (2) for navigation, (3) for power and irrigation.

The total single track mileage, or miles of road, of steam railways in Canada, June 30, 1919, was 38,896, an increase of 17 miles over 1918. The total mileage of all tracks, including sidings, etc., was 50,615. The Canadian Government owns and operates 13,598 miles of road. This is made up of 9,359 miles of the Canadian Northern System, and 4,239 miles of old Canadian Government lines, and lines purchased recently. The Government is now acting as receiver for the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, with 2,714 miles of road. The Grand Trunk System is now being appraised, with the object of being taken over by the Government. The mileage is 3,567. The Dominion Government is thus now (November, 1920), operating 42 per cent. of the single track mileage in Canada, and with the Grand Trunk the mileage would be over 51 per cent. The province of Ontario owns and operates the Temiskaming and Northern Ontario with 329 miles of track. The largest part of the privately owned mileage is owned by the Canadian Pacific, with 13,295 miles, or 34 per cent. of all Canadian mileage. The main line of this road from Vancouver, British Columbia, to St. John, New Brunswick, is 3,367 miles long. The two other Transcontinental lines, the Grand Trunk Pacific and Transcontinental from Prince Rupert, British Columbia to Moncton, New Brunswick, and Intercolonial Railway from Moncton to Halifax, Nova Scotia and the Canadian Northern System, Vancouver, British Columbia to Montreal, Quebec and Intercolonial from Montreal to Halifax, Nova Scotia, are now being operated by the Government. There are 144.5 miles of the C.P.R. main line and 43.7 miles of the Canadian Northern main line running through the United States, otherwise these three lines, stretching from the Pacific to the Atlantic, lie wholly within Canada. The single track mileage by Provinces is:—Ontario, 11,000; Quebec, 4,860; Manitoba, 4,189; Saskatchewan, 6,148; Alberta, 4,285; British Columbia, 4,238; New Brunswick, 1,948; Nova Scotia, 1,432; Prince Edward Island, 279; Yukon, 102; United States of America, 415. There is a monthly steam service between Australia and British Columbia, for which the Dominion Government gave 166,624 dollars in the fiscal year 1919.

The traffic on Canadian steam railways in five years was:—

In 1919, of the capital, 219,077,163 dollars represented Federal Government aid (exclusive of the cost of Government Railways), and 56,086,065 dollars from Provincial Governments and Municipalities. The latter amount does not include cost of the Temiskaming and Northern Ontario Railway (22,071,224 dollars). The expenditure by Dominion Government on National Transcontinental Railway up to March 31, 1919, was 165,128,742 dollars.

Electric railways in 1919, 64, mileage 1,696; passengers during the year, 686,124,263; tons of freight carried, 2,474,892. The gross earnings in 1919 reached an aggregate of 35,696,532 dollars, as compared with 24,299,890 dollars in 1918. Operating expenses amounted to 26,839,070 dollars, an increase of 9,303,096 dollars compared with the preceding year. Paid up capital, 171,894,556 dollars.

On March 31, 1919, there were 12,290 post offices. Gross revenue, 27,591,325 dollars; net revenue, 21,602,713 dollars; expenditure, 19,273,584 dollars. At the end of the fiscal year, 1919, there were 3,705 rural mail delivery routes, on which were erected 181,505 boxes.

Money order offices on March 31, 1919, 4,953; orders issued (1918-19), 9,100,707, value 142,375,809 dollars. The Ocean Mail subsidies and steamship subventions paid by the Government amounted to 1,391,850 dollars in 1919.

There were 52,383 miles (12,095 being Government) of telegraph lines in Canada in 1919, and 198,136 miles of wire (exclusive of Government lines), with 4,654 offices. There were in 1919 1,951,562 miles of telephone wire, of which 1,304,222 miles were urban and 647,340 rural, and 779,000 telephones. The earnings of telephone companies in Canada in 1919 amounted to 24,600,536 dollars, and the operating expenses to 16,167,992 dollars. The capital liability amounted to 91,004,925 dollars in 1919.

Wireless Telegraphy.—In 1919-20 there were 57 Radiotelegraph stations operated in the public service of Canada, having a range of 100 to 750 nautical miles, or an average of 255 nautical miles. In 1918-19 messages sent and received numbered 279,981. There is a long-distance station near Glace Bay, Cape Breton, N.S., with a range of 3,000 nautical miles; one at New Castle, N.B., with a range of 2,500 nautical miles, and one at Barrington Passage, N.S., with a range of 1,500 nautical miles. There are 39 Government steamers equipped with wireless apparatus having a range of 100 to 400 miles, or an average of 140 miles.

Money and Credit.

The Bank Acts of Canada impose stringent conditions as to capital, notes in circulation, limit of dividend, returns to the Dominion Government, and other points, on all chartered and incorporated banks. The Dominion Government by statute must always hold as security for the redemption of Dominion notes issued and outstanding up to and including eighty million dollars, an amount in gold equal to not less than 25 per cent. of the amount of such notes (Dominion Notes Act, 1914). To secure the issue of notes in excess of eighty millions it must hold a dollar in gold for each dollar in notes. War measure.—Under the provisions of the Finance Act, 1914, the Minister of Finance is empowered to issue Dominion notes to banks upon the deposit of approved securities with the Minister. On Sept. 30, 1919, there were 18 incorporated banks making returns to the Government, with about 4,242 branches. The following are some particulars of the banks:—

	Dollars	Dollars	Dollars	Dollars	Dollars
1914	114,759,807	104,600,185	1,144,210,363	1,309,944,006	1,555,676,395	84.20

In July, 1920, the deposits aggregated 2,437,128,912 dollars, and the circulation 281,534,233 dollars.

In addition to the capital there was in July, 1920 the sum of 130,027,965 dollars of rest or reserve funds belonging to the banks.

There are 16 clearing houses in Canada. The transactions for 1919 amounted to 16,216,518,629 dollars, against 13,448,158,663 dollars in 1918. Of the transactions of 1919, Montreal had over 88 per cent., Toronto 26 per cent., Winnipeg 14.3 per cent., and Vancouver 4.04 per cent.

Government post-office savings-banks have been in operation in Canada since 1868; there are also Government savings-banks, under the Finance Department, in the Maritime Provinces, Manitoba, and British Columbia. In 1920 the post-office savings-banks had 31,605,594 dollars on deposit. The Government savings banks had 10,729,218 dollars on deposit.

The deposits in special savings-banks amounted in 1920 to 53,118,053 dollars.

Money, Weights, and Measures.

The Dollar of 100 cents. The value of the money of the United Kingdom is fixed by law as follows:—The sovereign, 4.86 $\frac{2}{3}$  dollars; the crown piece, 1.2 dollars; and other silver coins at proportionate values. Notes are issued by the Government for 5, 4, 2, and 1 dollar, and 25 cents; no bank is allowed to issue notes for a less sum than 5 dollars. Government notes outstanding at the end of August, 1920 amounted to 287,426,483 dollars.

The Ottawa Branch of the Royal Mint was established in pursuance of The Ottawa Mint Act, 1901, under which an annual sum not exceeding 75,000 dollars is payable to the Imperial Treasury for the purpose of defraying the salaries of officials and other expenses of the Mint, the fees and all sums received being retained by Canada. The Mint issues gold, silver and copper coins for circulation in Canada, and sovereigns and half-sovereigns coined will be legal tender in every country under the British flag. Coinage for Newfoundland was struck at the Mint in 1917 and 1918.

Gold, silver, and bronze coin struck and issued by the Ottawa Mint during the calendar years 1918 and 1919:—

Bronze	130,849.83	131,817.00	112,013.47	115,100.00

The legal weights and measures are the Imperial yard, pound avoirdupois, gallon, and bushel; but the hundredweight is declared to be 100 pounds and the ton 2,000 pounds avoirdupois, as in the United States.

CANADIAN PROVINCES.

ALBERTA.

Constitution and Government.—The Constitution of Alberta is contained in the British North America Act of 1867, and its several amending Acts; also in the Alberta Act of 1905, passed by the Parliament of the Dominion of Canada, creating the province. In the British North America Act, provision was made for the admission of the new provinces from time to time, including the then North-West Territories, of which the present province of Alberta formed a large portion. Upon the granting of autonomy to the North-West Territories, Alberta and Saskatchewan were erected into provinces, and all the provisions of the British North America Act, except those with respect to schools, lands, and the public domain, were made to apply to Alberta as they apply to the older provinces of Canada.

The executive is vested nominally in the Lieutenant-Governor, who is appointed by the federal government, but actually in the Executive Council or the Cabinet of the Legislature. Legislative power is vested in the Assembly in the name of the king. All bills passed by the Legislative Assembly are annually transmitted to Ottawa to receive the approval of the federal government.

Members of the Legislative Assembly are elected by the direct vote of the people. Woman suffrage has been established in the province.

There are 58 members in the Legislature, elected in 1917—34 Liberals, 18 Conservatives, 2 non-partisan, 1 Labour, 1 United Farmers', and 2 soldiers' representatives elected by Alberta men and women overseas, in the Canadian Expeditionary Forces. The Legislature includes 2 women members.

Lieutenant-Governor.—His Honour R. G. Brett, B.A., M.D., LL.D.

The members of the Ministry are as follows:—

Premier, President of the Council, and Minister of Railways and Telephones.—Hon. Charles Stewart.

Attorney-General.—Hon. J. R. Boyle.

Provincial-Treasurer, and Minister of Municipalities and Public Health.—Hon. C. R. Mitchell.

Minister of Public Works.—Hon. A. J. McLean.

Minister of Agriculture.—Hon. Duncan Marshall.

Minister of Education.—Hon. Geo. P. Smith.

Provincial Secretary.—Hon. J. L. Côté.

Local Government.—In 1912 the law respecting towns and rural municipalities was revised and brought up to date, in harmony with the conditions and development and growth prevailing in the province at that time. Since then the respective acts have been changed to meet the necessities of progress, and the name Rural Municipality changed to Municipal District. Municipal Districts comprise an area of 18 miles square, and are laid out on a uniform plan conformable as far as possible to the Dominion Land Survey system. Each district is a body corporate and governed by a council of six elected by a general vote of the electors. The chief executive officer is called a Reeve. All towns are incorporated under the Towns' Act of 1912 and amendments thereto, except those incorporated by special acts. The town council consists of a Mayor and six councillors elected by those whose names appear on the last revised assessment roll. Persons qualified to vote are males or females of the full age of 21 years who are assessed for 50 dollars or upwards, and sons and daughters of such persons, if 21 years of age and resident in the municipality. The cities of Alberta carry on their municipal government by the authority of special charters granted by the Legislature.

Area and Population.—The area of the province is 255,285 square miles, 252,925 sq. miles being land area and 2,360 sq. miles water area. The population in 1916 was 496,525; in 1906, 184,412, and in 1901, 73,022. In 1916 the rural population numbered 307,776 (52,399 in 1901), and the urban 188,749 (20,623 in 1901). Population of the principal cities, (1916):—Calgary, 56,514; Edmonton, 53,846; Lethbridge, 9,436; Medicine Hat, 9,272; Red Deer, 2,203; Wetaskiwin, 2,048.

The vital statistics for 5 years are given as follows:—

—	Births	Marriages	Deaths	Excess of births
1914 . . . .	13,685	4,623	4,147	9,538
1916 . . . .	13,331	4,230	4,058	9,273
1917 . . . .	13,576	4,270	4,047	9,529
1918 . . . .	14,890	4,040	7,924	6,966
1919 . . . .	14,130	4,718	5,507	8,623

Instruction.—In the school system all grades, both primary and secondary, are included under the term of public school. The same boards of trustees control the schools from the kindergarten to entrance to the university. All schools are supported by taxes levied by the local board, supplemented by Government grants. The grants are distributed to encourage the highest grade of teachers, regularity of attendance of pupils and general proficiency based on the report of Government inspectors. All schools are provided with a small library. Three Normal schools, at Calgary, Camrose, and Edmonton are established for the training of teachers. The attendance during 1918–19 was 663. The University of Alberta, organised in 1907, had (1917–18) 615 students. In 1919 there were 3,046 schools, 63 being consolidated schools, with 121,567 pupils.

Justice and Crime.—Judicial power of the province is vested in the Court of Superior Civil and Criminal Jurisdiction, styled the Supreme Court of Alberta consisting of two divisions, the appellate and trial divisions respectively. The law provides for five judges in the appellate division, and six in the trial division. The judges are appointed by the Dominion Government, and hold office for life unless impeached by Parliament. There are also minor Courts of Civil and Criminal Jurisdiction such as District and Police Magistrate's Courts. The district courts have full jurisdiction over all matters up to 600 dollars. By the Small Debts Act of 1918 Justices have jurisdiction over matters up to 50 dollars.

District courts have power to grant probate of wills and are courts of record for a trial without a jury of any person charged with a criminal offence provided such person consents. The system of procedure in civil and criminal cases conforms as nearly as possible to the English system.

Finance.—The revenue of the province is derived from the following sources:—(1) Dominion subsidies; (2) School lands; and (3) Provincial sources. With one or two exceptions, all the taxes except those on actual land values have been abolished throughout Alberta. This is said to be the nearest approach to a genuine single tax of any province or state in America.

The public debt of the province (1919) amounted to $4,635,200 dollars less sinking fund 980,623 dollars.

Production and Industry.—Alberta is pre-eminently an agricultural province. There are unquestionably valuable assets in her mines of coal and asphalt, but the future depends upon the growth of agriculture in the important branches of grain, livestock, and dairying. The area of arable land is placed at 100,000,000 acres. About 8 per cent. of this is under cultivation at the present time.

The acreage and yield of leading grains in Alberta for 1920 were as follows:—Spring wheat, 4,036,000 acres and 86,748,000 bushels; Fall wheat, 38,000, acres and 713,000 bushels; oats, 3,090,000 acres and 115,091,000 bushels; barley, 481,000 acres and 12,739,000 bushels; flax, 103,700 acres and 726,000 bushels; rye, 161,000 acres and 3,420,000 bushels; potatoes, 43,000 acres, 7,138,000 bushels; turnips, mangolds, &c., 12,300 acres, 3,219,000 bushels; hay and clover, 384,000 acres, 498,600 tons. Total area under field crops, 8,390,000 acres; value, 204,291,500 dollars.

Alberta was the greatest ranching country in America from 1880–1900, but the farmer has driven out the rancher and the days of the big herds are past. In November, 1919, there were in Alberta 800,000 horses, 337,000 milk cows, 1,247,000 other horned cattle, 446,000 pigs, 364,000 sheep, 4,426,000 poultry. The 1919 wool clip amounted to 2,115,000 lbs., valued at 1,225,000 dollars. The value of dairy products in 1919 was 31,600,000 dollars. Creamery butter produced 10,500,000 lb.; cheese, 500,000 lb.

The establishment of packing houses at Edmonton and Calgary has given a great stimulus to the hog industry. Mixed farming combining dairying and hog raising has increased considerably. Value of the milk production in 1919 is conservatively estimated at 31,625,000 dollars.

A coal survey of Alberta by the Geological Survey of Canada places the coal area at 16,588 square miles containing 90,000 million tons, 80,000 million being lignite. The output in 1919 was 5,022,412 tons, of which domestic (lignite) coal was 2,395,200 tons; bituminous coal, 2,825,787 tons; anthracite coal, 85,616 tons; briquettes, 70,838 tons. Natural gas is found at Medicine Hat and Bow Island in inexhaustible quantities, and a considerable quantity at Tofield, Vegreville, and Viking. In 1918, 13,030,000 cubic feet were produced from 68 wells. In 1918, 13,040 barrels of crude petroleum were produced. Value of total mineral production in 1919, 20,815,049 dollars.

Alberta has 11,881,000 acres of forest reserves. The northern portion of the province contains belts of forests along the rivers and lakes, consisting of spruce, pine, cottonwood, and poplar serviceable for merchantable timber.

The lakes of the province abound in several species of fish, but the industry is not developed to any great extent. The number of men engaged in 1916-17 was 714; the number of boats 406; catch of fish was 31,789 cwts.; value, 144,317 dollars.

Manufacturing has just begun in the province. Flour, oat-meal, cement, and linseed oil mills, pork and beef packing houses, factories with outputs of products in clay, brass and iron, glass and wood, have been established and are in many instances already extending their plants.

Statistics of manufactures for 1918: number of industrial establishments, 1,252; capital, 61,405,000 dollars; number of employees, 10,837; salaries and wages, 10,127,000 dollars; cost of materials, 54,640,000 dollars; value of products, 82,219,000 dollars.

Commerce and Communications.—The principal exports of the province consist of grain, fat cattle, hogs, hams and bacon, fish, butter, and coal.

Length of railway lines 4,650 miles at end of 1919. A provincial government system of telephones covers most of the province. It has 25,290 miles long distance line, and 223 exchanges. There are 38 privately owned party lines.

BRITISH COLUMBIA.

Constitution and Government.—Previous to 1858 British Columbia, then known as New Caledonia, formed a portion of the Hudson's Bay Company's concession, but in that year it was constituted a Crown Colony, owing to the large immigration consequent on the discovery of gold in 1856. Vancouver Island was leased to the Hudson's Bay Company in 1843, and was made a Crown Colony in 1849, being the first British colony to be established in North-West America. In 1866 the Colonies of British Columbia and Vancouver Island were united, and on July 20th, 1871, British Columbia entered the Canadian Confederation, and is represented by 5 members in the Senate, and 13 in the House of Commons of Canada.

The Provincial Government is administered by a Lieutenant-Governor and Legislative Assembly of 47 members on the system of executive administration known as a "responsible government." The Assembly is elected for four years, every adult, male or female (British subjects), having resided six months in the Province, duly registered, being entitled to vote.

Lieutenant-Governor.—W. C. Nichol.

The members of the Ministry (appointed March, 1918) are as follows:—

Premier and Minister of Railways and President of the Council.—Hon. John Oliver.

Minister of Mines.—Hon. Wm. Sloan.

Minister of Agriculture.—Hon. E. D. Barrow.

Minister of Education and Provincial Secretary.—Hon. J. D. Maclean, M.D., C.M.

Minister of Public Works.—Hon. J. H. King, M.D., C.M.

Attorney-General and Minister of Labour.—Hon. J. W. de B. Farris, K.C.

Minister of Finance.—Hon. John Hart.

Minister of Lands.—Hon. T. D. Pattullo.

An Act creating a Department of Industry was passed in 1919. This Department is at present under the Minister of Mines.

Agent-General in London.—F. C. Wade, K.C., British Columbia House, 1/3, Regent Street, S.W.

Area and Population.—British Columbia, Canada's Maritime Province on the Pacific Ocean, has an area, according to the census of 1911, of 355,855 square miles, of which 353,416 square miles are land area, and 2,439 square miles water area, but exclusive of territorial seas. The area in 1919 is estimated at 395,610 square miles. It is a great irregular quadrangle about 700 miles from north to south, with an average width of about 400 miles, lying between latitudes 49 degrees and 60 degrees north. It is bounded on the south by the Straits of Juan de Fuca and the States of Washington, Idaho and Montana, on the west by the Pacific Ocean and Southern Alaska, on the north by Yukon and Mackenzie Territories, and on the east by the Province of Alberta. From the 49th degree north to the 54th degree the eastern boundary follows the axis of the Rocky Mountains, and thence north along the 120th meridian.

The subdivisions of the Province, with the number of square miles in each, are as follows: Kootenays, east and west, 23,500 square miles; Yale, 24,300; Lillooet, 16,100; Vancouver and Westminster, 7,600; Cariboo, 300,500; Comox (mainland), 7,100; and Vancouver Island, 16,400.

The last census (1911) places the population at 392,480; in 1901 the population was 178,657. In 1920 it was estimated at approximately 650,000.

Some of the principal cities and towns are: Victoria (the capital), population, (1919), 39,500; Vancouver, 115,000; New Westminster, 17,000; Nanaimo, 7,800; North Vancouver, 8,100; Nelson, 5,500; Prince Rupert, 4,000.

The movement of the population for five years was as follows:—

—	Births	Marriages	Deaths	Excess of births
1914	10,418	4,296	3,974	6,444
1915	10,516	3,393	3,832	6,684
1916	9,841	3,169	3,887	5,954
1917	9,450	2,861	3,896	5,554

Instruction.—A complete system of free and non-sectarian education was established by Act in 1872. Attendance is compulsory from the age of seven to fourteen. The central control is vested in the Council of Public Instruction, composed of the members of the Executive Council. The Minister of Education directs the general management of the schools through the Superintendent of Education.

There are 45 high schools in the Province, with 5,806 enrolled pupils (2,392 boys, 3,414 girls). The number of schools in 1919 was 939, with 2,332 teachers, and an enrolment of 72,006 pupils. The Provincial University was founded by Act in 1908. It began operations as a teaching institution in 1914, and in 1918-19 there were about 900 students.

Finance.—Revenue and expenditure:—

	Revenue Dollars	Expenditure Dollars		Revenue Dollars	Expenditure Dollars

The balance sheet of the Province showed that on March 31, 1919, the liabilities totalled 52,288,067 dollars; assets, 59,642,124 dollars; balance of assets over liabilities, 7,354,057 dollars.

Production and Industry.—British Columbia produced in 1919 minerals to the value of 32,296,313 dollars; lumber to the value of 70,285,094 dollars; fish to the value of 15,216,397 dollars; agricultural produce valued at 65,384,556 dollars; and manufactures, 1919, of the value of 68,500,000 dollars (estimated). The acreage and production of certain crops in 1920 were: wheat, 46,000 acres, 874,000 bushels; oats, 48,000 acres, 1,163,000 bushels; barley, 9,600 acres, 364,000 bushels; potatoes, 18,000 acres, 2,934,000 bushels; turnips, &c., 7,400 acres, 3,220,000 bushels; hay and clover, 127,000 acres, 254,000 tons. Total area under field crops, 349,000 acres; value, 27,017,500 dollars. Number of live stock in 1919: milch cows, 52,000; other cattle, 194,000; sheep, 45,000; pigs, 45,000; horses, 44,000; poultry, 1,181,000.

British Columbia's coal measures are estimated to contain 75 billion tons, mainly bituminous, of which 23,000 millions are in the seams known and measured; it possesses the greatest compact area of merchantable timber in North America; the importance of the fisheries, apart from salmon fishing, is only beginning to be realised; there are widely-distributed deposits of magnetite and hematite iron, which are as yet undeveloped; the area of possible farmland has been estimated at 50,000,000 acres, but not much more than one tenth of this area has yet been occupied; the Province has millions of acres of pulpwood as yet unexploited; and much of the territory is unexplored and its potential value unknown.

More than half the standing timber in Canada is to be found in British Columbia, and the average rate of forest growth is double that in the remainder of the Dominion. Recent investigators place the area of British Columbia's timber land at over 100,000,000 acres, containing, roughly, 400,000 million feet of merchantable timber. The most important species are: Douglas fir, western red cedar, silver spruce, western soft pine, western hemlock, Engelmann spruce, cottonwood, and balsam. It is estimated that there are about 50,000,000,000 feet board measure under the control of the Dominion in the railway belt. Value of lumber produced in 1919, 70,285,094, dollars (including 12,554,257 dollars value for pulp).

British Columbia is the second Province of the Dominion in the value of its mineral production. The mineral output in 1918 and 1919 was as follows:—

Minerals		1918		1919
		Quantity	Value	Quantity	Value
			Dollars		Dollars
Gold, placer	ounces	16,000	286,500	25	286,500
Gold, lode	do.	164,674	3,150,645	26	3,150,645
Silver	do.	8,498,172	3,592,678	19	3,592,678

Copper	do.	61,488,754	7,939,896	89	7,939,896
Zinc	do.	41,772,918	3,540,429	51	3,540,429
Coal	long ton	2,802,245	11,887,706	41	11,887,706
Coke	do.	188,987	687,968	38	687,968
Miscellaneous products		—	1,286,644	—	1,286,644
Total of above		—	41,792,474	—	38,296,218

The total value of minerals produced in British Columbia down to the end of 1919 is estimated at 670,649,894 dollars (mainly coal and coke, 199,123,323 dollars; copper, 153,680,965 dollars; gold, lode, 100,272,431 dollars; gold, placer, 75,722,603 dollars; silver, 50,482,304 dollars; lead, 43,821,106 dollars).

Statistics of manufactures for 1918: Industrial establishments, 1,786; capital, 244,697,000 dollars; employees, 48,779; wages and salaries, 51,051,000 dollars; cost of materials, 103,936,000 dollars; value of products, 207,678,000 dollars.

The total available water power of the Province has been estimated at over four million H.P.

Commerce.—The trade of the Province is developing rapidly; in 1919 imports amounted to 69,694,691 dollars, and the exports to 77,247,666 dollars. Exports consist of minerals (chiefly gold, silver, copper and coal), sea products (chiefly salmon, halibut, herrings, whale products and oil), lumber, furs, skins, etc. A large inter-provincial trade is rapidly developing, the fruit grown in British Columbia being largely shipped to the Prairie Provinces, where it finds a good market.

Communications and Shipping.—The Canadian Pacific and Grand Trunk Pacific are at present the principal railways in the Province. The C.P.R. has three main lines, the Canadian Pacific Railway, the Crow's Nest Pass Railway, the Kettle Valley Railway, and several branches connecting with United States railway systems, also steamboat connections on the inland lakes, besides a large fleet of ocean-going and coasting steamers. The railway mileage of the Province in 1917 was 3,885. Telephone mileage, 152,069.

Steps are being taken to establish direct shipping communication with Canadian Atlantic ports, via the Panama Canal.

In the fiscal year of 1918-19, 7,447 sea-going vessels entered inward, with a tonnage of 4,388,924; 7,551 sea-going vessels cleared outwards, with a tonnage of 4,525,595; and 61,767 coastwise vessels entered and cleared, with a tonnage of 21,388,682.

Shipbuilding, 1918, 145,000 tons, value 25,000,000 dollars.

MANITOBA.

Constitution and Government.—Manitoba was known as the Red River Settlement before its entry into the Dominion in 1870. The Provincial Government is administered by a Lieutenant-Governor and a Legislative Assembly of 55 members elected for five years. Women have been enfranchised, and may be members of Parliament. Proportional representation has been adopted for the 10 seats in the City of Winnipeg.

Lieutenant-Governor.—His Honour Sir J. A. M. Aikins, K.B.

The Members of the Ministry are as follows :—

Premier, Commissioner of Railways and Commissioner of Provincial Lands.—Hon. T. C. Norris.

Provincial Secretary and Municipal Commissioner.—Hon. J. W. Armstrong, M.D.

Minister of Education.—Hon. R. S. Thornton, M.D.

Minister of Public Works.—Hon. G. A. Grierson.

Attorney-General.—Hon. T. H. Johnson.

Provincial Treasurer.—Hon. Edward Brown.

Minister of Agriculture and Immigration.—Hon. Geo. H. J. Malcolm.

State of parties in Legislative Assembly (1920) : Liberal (Government), 21 ; Conservatives, 8 ; Labour, 11 ; Farmer Independents, 15.

Area and Population.—The area of the Province is 251,832 square miles, of which 231,926 sq. miles are land area and 19,906 sq. miles water. In 1912 its boundaries were extended to the shores of Hudson's Bay. (See map STATESMAN'S YEAR BOOK, 1912.) The population in 1911 was 461,630 and in 1916, 553,860. In 1920, Dominion Government estimate, 620,000. In 1901 the population was 255,211, thus showing an increase by 1916 of 117 per cent. The rural population in 1916 was 312,846 (184,775 in 1901). The number of houses in 1916 was 104,656 (49,784 in 1901); the number of families in 1916 was 117,532, (51,056 in 1901). Population of the principal cities (1919) :—Winnipeg (capital), 186,000 (Greater Winnipeg, 276,000 ; Brandon, 15,225 ; Portage la Prairie, 5,892 ; St. Boniface, 11,021.

Instruction.—Education is locally controlled, as in all the provinces and is supported by local taxation and Government grants. Winnipeg has an Agricultural College (opened 1906) with 460 long course and 662 short course students in 1919–20. The University of Manitoba, founded in 1877 in Winnipeg, has (in 1919) 1,239 students in all courses. There are (1919) 3,097 teachers and 109,923 pupils in the 3,089 public schools. Total expenditure on education in 1919, 6,618,739 dollars.

Finance.—Revenue and expenditure for six years :—

Year.	Revenue.	Expenditure.	Year.	Revenue.	Expenditure.
	Dollars.	Dollars.		Dollars.	Dollars.
1913	5,788,070	5,314,849	1917	6,692,985	6,860,353
1915	5,524,911	5,698,059	1918	6,723,013	7,807,727
1916	5,897,807	6,147,780	1919	8,986,076	8,544,790

Production and Industry.—Manitoba is essentially fitted for agriculture, more particularly for grain production. The total area under field crops in 1919 was 6,344,318 acres. Field crops 1920, 6,020,000 acres, 134 million dollars. In 1920 2,984,000 acres produced 48,191,000 bushels of wheat; 1,873,000 acres produced 57,657,000 bushels of oats; 839,000 acres produced 17,520,000 bushels of barley; 146,000 acres produced 1,158,000 bushels of flax; 37,000 acres produced 3,410,000 tons of potatoes; 149,000 acres produced 2,319,000 bushels of rye; 209,000 acres produced 312,000 tons of hay and clover. There were 379,000 horses in the Province in 1919, 167,000 sheep, 262,000 pigs, 782,000 cattle, and 2,731,000 poultry. Increase in value of live stock in 1919, 27,000,000 dollars.

Total value of minerals, 1919, 2,868,000 dollars, largely building material and copper. The Province has proved gold and copper deposits of vast extent which are being developed. Value of fisheries (1919) 1,008,000 dollars. Value of lumber cut in 1918, 1,240,000 dollars.

Production of creamery butter 1919, 8,256,711 lb., value 4,458,623 dollars; dairy butter, 10,804,225 lb., value 4,753,000 dollars; cheese, 680,000 lb., value 180,000 dollars. Total value of dairy products, 1919, 16,800,000 dollars.

Statistics of manufactures for 1918: 1,444 industrial establishments with a capital of 105,983,000 dollars; employing 22,808 wage-earners; wages and salaries, 23,031,000 dollars; cost of materials used, 92,600,000 dollars; and value of products, 145,030,000 dollars.

Communications.—In the year 1920, the Province had 4,463 miles of railway as compared with 3,074 miles in 1907. There were 195,226 miles of telephone wire.

NEW BRUNSWICK.

Constitution and Government.—New Brunswick was discovered by Jacques Cartier in 1534. It was acquired by the English under the Treaty of Utrecht in 1713, and was settled by the English as early as 1761. In 1784 it was separated from Nova Scotia. The Government is at present vested in a Lieutenant-Governor and a Legislative Assembly of 48 members elected for five years. Franchise—any male or female British subject of full age, after six months' residence. Last election, October, 1920:—Liberals 24, Conservatives 13, Farmers 9, Labour 2.

Lieutenant-Governor.—Hon. W. Pugsley.

The members of the Ministry are as follows (April 1917):—

Premier and President of Council.—Hon. W. E. Foster.

Attorney-General.—Hon. J. P. Byrne.

Minister of Public Works.—Hon. P. J. Veniot.

Minister of Health.—Hon. Dr. W. F. Roberts.

Provincial Secretary and Treasurer.—Hon. J. E. Hetherington.

Minister of Lands and Mines.—Hon. C. W. Robinson.

Minister of Agriculture.—Hon. D. W. Mersereau.

Ministers without Portfolio.—Hon. J. E. Michaud, Hon. C. W. Magee.

Agent-General in London—Vacant, 37, Southampton Street, W.C. 2.

Area and Population.—The area of the Province is 27,935 square miles, of which 27,911 square miles are land area. There are  $7\frac{3}{4}$  million acres of Crown lands, principally lumber lands. The population in 1911 numbered 351,889 (179,867 males and 172,022 females), which is 12.61 per square mile. In 1901 the population was 331,120, showing an increase by 1911 of 6.27 per cent. The rural population in 1911 was 252,342 (253,835 in 1901); the number of houses in 1911, 60,930 (58,226 in 1901); the number of families in 1911, 67,093 (62,695 in 1901). Population of the principal cities:—St. John, 61,380; Moncton, 14,000; Fredericton (capital), 8,000.

Instruction.—Education is free and undenominational. The University of New Brunswick, at Fredericton, founded in 1800, has (1919) 250 students. There were (1919) 71,000 pupils and 2,107 teachers in the 1,959 public schools. Total expenditure on education in 1918, 1,530,256 dollars.

Finance.—The finance for four years is shown as follows:—

Year	Revenue	Expenditure	Year	Revenue	Expenditure
	Dollars	Dollars		Dollars	Dollars
1916	1,580,419	1,568,342	1918	2,357,909	2,399,062
1917	1,572,813	2,166,905	1919	2,168,822	2,496,508

Bonded debt, October 31, 1919, 18,585,000 dollars.

Production and Industry.—New Brunswick is productive in agriculture, manufacture, and mining. The total area under field crops in 1920 was 1,253,834 acres. ## NOVA SCOTIA.

Constitution and Government.—The first settlement was made by the French at the end of the sixteenth century, and the province was called Acadia until finally ceded to the British by the Treaty of Utrecht in 1713. The Constitution of the Dominion of Canada and of each separate Province thereof is contained in the "British North America Act," commonly called the "Act of Confederation." This Act passed the Imperial Parliament in 1867 and came into force on July 1st of that year. Under this Act the Legislature of Nova Scotia, along with that of each of the other Provinces, may exclusively make laws in relation to local matters; and more especially in regard to direct taxation within the Province in order to raise a revenue for provincial purposes, and the administration of justice in the Province, including the constitution, maintenance and organisation of provincial courts both of civil and of criminal jurisdiction, and including procedure of civil matters in those courts.

The Legislature of Nova Scotia consists of a Lieutenant-Governor, appointed and paid by the Federal Government and holding office for five years; a Legislative Council appointed by the Crown, and holding office for life; and a House of Assembly, chosen by popular vote every five years. The Legislative Council consists of 21 members; the House of Assembly of 43. The members of both Houses receive a sessional indemnity of 700 dollars.

The franchise and eligibility to the Legislature are granted to all persons, whether male or female, and including married women, if of full age (21 years), if a British subject, and a resident for one year in the place where the person votes, and if not by law otherwise disqualified, or in receipt of aid as a pauper.

House of Assembly (1920), state of parties:—Liberals, 20; Farmers, 8;

1917-18.

Religion.—The denominations according to the Census of 1911 were Roman Catholics, 144,991; Presbyterians, 109,560; Baptists, 83,861; Anglicans, 75,313; Methodists, 57,606; and Congregationalists, 2,690.

There are also various other sects with small numbers of adherents.

Instruction.—Education in Nova Scotia is free, compulsory, and undenominational. Besides the elementary schools, high schools and academies there are in Halifax a Maritime Provinces school for the blind and one for the deaf. A large Provincial Agricultural College is established at Truro.

also a Normal School for the training of teachers. The Provincial Technical College grants degrees in civil, mining, chemical and electrical engineering. Besides this central institution there are working under it coal mining schools near all the collieries, and engineering and technical schools of various kinds in the industrial centres.

The total expenditure on education in 1919 was 2,097,593 dollars. The Province has (1919) 4 universities ; 2,812 schools, with 3,000 teachers and 107,000 pupils ; there are 2,600 pupils in the technical schools.

Pensions, &c.—A pension scheme is in operation whereby teachers under certain conditions receive an annuity. Miners receive pay in case of accident in pursuit of their calling, and in the event of death a grant is made to the widow and children. A fund is provided to meet the demands, the Government and the employers paying each half as much as the men.

Justice and Crime.—Justice in Nova Scotia is administered by the following courts : Courts for the collection of small debts ; county courts ; inferior courts in criminal cases ; courts of superior jurisdiction ; divorce court, probate courts. The supreme court of appeal is composed of a chief justice and six judges. There are also Courts for the revision of assessment rolls and voters lists, and a Court for juvenile delinquents.

In 1918, 2,300 persons were imprisoned for various crimes and misdemeanours. In 1919, 283 children were brought before the court for juvenile delinquents. Of these 61 were sent to institutions ; 156 were paroled ; 43 fined ; 23 were dismissed.

Finance.—In Nova Scotia there is no general direct Government taxation. The revenue is raised from the Dominion subsidy ; royalty on coal and other minerals raised ; succession duty ; special taxes on banks, incorporated companies, automobiles and theatres, marriage licences, and statutory fees.

Revenue, expenditure, and debt for five years :—

Year	Revenue	Expenditure	Debt
	Dollars	Dollars	Dollars
1914	1,885,457	2,098,893	12,615,686
1916	2,165,833	2,182,134	13,497,894
1917	2,118,618	2,318,911	13,910,236
1918	2,332,632	2,552,597	14,527,798
1919	3,280,313	3,250,806	15,342,055

To counterbalance the public debt the Province had (1919) realisable assets to the value of 7,062,695 dollars.

Production and Industry.—Nova Scotia is largely an agricultural Province. Fruit-growing is specially profitable, and apples are the most important fruit grown ; in 1920 the output was nearly 2,000,000 barrels. The potatoes produced are higher in quality than any others raised in Canada. Nova Scotia is admirably adapted for dairying. The value of the livestock products in 1919 was more than 9,500,000 dollars. There were (1920) 398,000 cattle in the Province. Owing to the cool, moist climate fodder may be raised easily, and the pastures are excellent. There were 264,000 sheep. The annual clip is over 1,000,000 lbs. Pigs numbered 64,000 and horses 68,000 in 1920.

The total area under cultivation in 1920 was 920,000 acres, and the value produced, 47,847,000 dollars. The principal crops are hay and clover, with

Commerce and Communications.—The trade of Prince Edward Island is chiefly with the other provinces of Canada and this inter-provincial trade does not appear in the trade statistics. In 1919-20 the exports to other countries amounted to 369,723 dollars; the imports entered for consumption to 917,857 dollars. In 1920 the province had 279 miles of railway as compared with 267 in 1907. Terminal stations have been constructed at Cape Traverse, Prince Edward Island, and Cape Tormentine, New Brunswick, and a car ferry steamer of great power is in operation, connecting the Government Railway in Prince Edward Island with the Intercolonial Railway on the mainland. During 1919 by means of a third rail, the line from Charlottetown to Borden and Summerside was widened to the gauge of the continental standard. Daily steamship communication with the mainland was successfully maintained for the first time during the winter of 1917-18, and has since continued without interruption. In 1920 there were 3,273 miles of telephone wires, 200 urban and 3,073 rural.

A Government survey party is now engaged (1919) on a topographical and economic survey of the country between the Rupununi, Savannah and the Berbice and Demerara Rivers—a route along which it was contemplated before the war to run a railway. There are 75 post-offices, of which 45 are telegraph offices, 50 money order offices, 51 savings banks, and 9 travelling post offices. There are about 573 miles of post-office telegraphs and cables, and a telephone exchange in Georgetown and New Amsterdam having (1916-17) 1,790 miles of aerial wire, and 5½ miles of cables, with 800 subscribers; 100 miles of land line are also maintained for railway, telephones, and signals.

Accounts are kept in dollars and cents, the dollar being equal to 4*s.* 2*d.* In circulation are British gold, silver and bronze coin. with some silver 'bits,'—fourpenny pieces—local coins. Notes are issued by the Royal Bank of Canada and Colonial Bank in denominations of 5, 20, and 100 dollars, and there are Government currency notes of one and two dollars. The face value of the latter in circulation at 31 December, 1919, was 97,188*l*.

NEWFOUNDLAND AND LABRADOR.

Newfoundland was discovered by John Cabot in 1497; it was formally acquired by Great Britain in 1583; exclusive sovereignty over the island was ceded by France in 1713 by the Treaty of Utrecht, confirmed by treaties of 1763 and 1783.

The coast is rugged, especially on the south-west, where the coast range reaches an elevation of nearly 2,000 feet. The hills attain their summit within a few miles of the salt water, and then spread out into an undulating country, consisting largely of barrens and marshes, and intersected by numerous rivers and lakes. On the borders of the lakes and water-courses good land is generally found, and in some cases, as about the Exploits, the Gander and the Humber, it is heavily timbered. Area, 42,734 square miles. Population, December 31, 1919, 260,922 (133,035 males and 127,877 females). Dependent on Newfoundland is Labrador, the most easterly part of the American continent, with an area of 120,000 square miles, and population (1919) of 3,647. Of the total Newfoundland population in 1911, 67,040 were engaged in the fisheries, 2,915 were farmers, 5,376 mechanics, 2,260 miners. Capital, St. John's, 34,045 inhabitants (1918); other towns being Harbour Grace, 4,279 (1911); Bonavista, 3,911; Carbonear, 3,540; Twillingate, 3,348. The birth rate in 1917 was 26·85, and the death rate 17·77 per 1,000. Immigrants (1919), 14,550; emigrants, 12,260.

The government is administered by a Governor, assisted by an Executive Council (not exceeding 9 members), a Legislative Council (not exceeding 24 members), and an elected House of Assembly consisting of 36 representatives. Members of the Legislative Council receive 250 dollars per session; members of the Legislative Assembly receive 1,000 dollars per session. For electoral purposes the whole colony is divided into 18 districts or constituencies. Women are not (February, 1921) enfranchised.

After the general election of November 1919, the Government supporters in the House of Assembly numbered 23, and the opposition 13.

Governor and Commander-in-Chief.—Sir C. A. Harris, K.C.M.G. C.B., C.V.O., appointed October, 1917; salary 15,000 dollars, with travelling allowance of 3,000 dollars.

The Ministry in November, 1919, is as follows:—

Prime Minister and Colonial Secretary.—Hon. R. A. Squires, K.C.

Minister of Justice and Attorney-General.—Hon. W. R. Warren, K.C.

Minister of Finance and Customs.—Hon. H. J. Brownrigg.

Minister of Agriculture and Mines.—Hon. A. Campbell, M.D.

Minister of Marine and Fisheries.—Hon. W. F. Coaker.

Minister of Posts and Telegraphs.—Hon. W. W. Halfyard.

Minister of Education.—Hon. Arthur Barnes, Pd.D.

Ministers without Portfolios.—Hon. S. J. Foote and Hon. Geo. Shea.

Not in the Cabinet:

Minister of Shipping.—W. H. Cave, Esq.

Minister of Public Works.—W. B. Jennings, Esq.

The ministers with departments receive salaries of 4,000 dollars each.

High Commissioner in London.—Sir Edgar R. Bowring, 58, Victoria Street, S.W.

Of the total population in 1911, 78,616 belonged to the Church of England, 81,177 were Roman Catholics, 68,042 Methodists, 1,876 Presbyterians, 10,141 Salvation Army, 2,767 other denominations. At the colleges of the Church of England, Roman Catholic, and Methodist bodies, in 1918 there were 361, 435 and 400 students respectively. The number of schools of all kinds (1918) was: Church of England, 437; Roman Catholic, 330; Methodist, 387, and other denominations, 58. The attendance at Board schools (1919) was: Church of England, 16,164; Roman Catholic, 16,428; Methodist, 15,563, and others, 2,687; total, 50,842: total expenditure, including Government grants, fees, &c., 570,637 dollars.

Revenue and expenditure in five years ended June 30 (1 dollar = 4s. 1½d.) :—

	1913-14	1915-16	1916-17	1917-18	1918-19
	£	£	£	£	£
Revenue . . .	743,768	945,610	1,070,256	1,344,351	1,960,121
Expenditure . . .	805,814	849,915	936,283	1,103,721	1,390,869

Of the Revenue for 1913-14, 633,793l.; for 1915-16, 812,086l.; for 1916-17, 918,943l.; for 1917-18, 1,012,031l.; for 1918-19, 1,478,203l., were from Customs. Public debt (1919), 42,032,786 dollars (8,640,072l.)

Production, &c.—The chief agricultural products in 1915 were: hay, potatoes, cabbage, turnips, and oats; the total value of all crops harvested being estimated at 3,000,000 dollars. In 1911 (census figures) there were in Newfoundland 13,288 horses, 40,427 cattle, 100,447 sheep, and 27,575 swine. Some fine pine forests exist to the north, and large saw mills have been established. The mineral resources of Newfoundland are considerable. Large beds of iron ore have been found on Bell Island in Conception Bay, on the east coast, and other rich deposits have been discovered on the west coast. The total deposits are estimated at about 3,600 million tons. Exports, 1918-19, 709,338 tons. Copper ore and pyrites are worked. In 1918-19, only 136 tons of ore were mined, valued at 3,573 dollars. Coal is found near St. George's Bay on the west coast, and in the Grand Lake district. In the eastern part of the island gold-bearing quartz rock and extensive deposits of silver and lead ore have been found. Extensive paper and pulp mills have been erected at Grand Falls, Bishop's Falls, and at Lomond in Bonne Bay, and one at Alexander Bay is about to be built.

Imports and exports, including bullion and specie, for five years :—

Years ended June 30	1913-14 (pre-war)	1916-17	1917-18	1918-19	1919-20

Tea . . .	405,353	Seal skins . . .	398,375
Molasses . . .	752,359	Lobsters (tinned) . . .	102,334

Of the imports (1919-20) the value of 4,637,074 dollars came from the United Kingdom ; 18,767,238 dollars from Canada ; 15,414,067 dollars from the United States. Of the exports the value of 6,411,967 dollars went to the United Kingdom ; 2,602,859 dollars to Canada ; 4,426,142 dollars to United States.

Shipping.—Total tonnage of vessels entered and cleared in 1918-19, 1,711,668 tons, of which 1,315,704 tons were British. Vessels registered December 31, 1919, 3,326 sailing vessels of 149,197 tons, and 136 steam vessels of 22,205 tons ; total, 3,462 vessels of 171,402 tons.

Fishing is the principal occupation of the population, the value of the fishing products being about two millions sterling annually.

By the Anglo-French Convention of 1904, France renounced her exclusive fishing rights under the treaty of Utrecht, but retained the right to fish in territorial waters from St. John's Cape northwards to Cape Ray for all sorts of fish, including bait and crustacea. An agreement for the submission of the Newfoundland fisheries disputes to The Hague was concluded at Washington, January 27, 1909. The award was published in September, 1910, and was satisfactory to British claims. Among other things, it secured the right of Great Britain to make regulations without the consent of the United States, subject to any limitations imposed by treaty. It also confirmed Great Britain's contention that the whole extent of a bay from headland to headland is comprised within territorial waters.

There were engaged in the bank cod fishery during 1919, 732 men, and 41 Newfoundland sailing vessels, aggregating 2,770 net tons, a decrease on 1918 of 208 men and 15 vessels of 1,134 tons. The catch in 1919 totalled 94,770 quintals of dry fish, valued at 1,137,240 dollars, as compared with 97,300 quintals, valued at 1,362,200 dollars, for the previous year. The output of the shore cod fishery is estimated at 1,347,070 quintals of dry fish, valued at 19,465,161 dollars. There were 14,870 small sailing vessels, boats (including motor boats), &c., utilised, and 37,550 men employed in this fishery. In 1919, the exports of codfish, including the Labrador fishery, amounted to 1,681,770 quintals. The catch of lobsters was 1,300,000 in 1915, 1,683,600 in 1916, 1,326,000 in 1917, 966,000 in 1918, and 670,000 in 1919.

In 1918, two vessels were engaged in the whale fishery ; the total catch was 101 whales, giving 64,913 gallons of oil. During 1920, 33,985 seals were caught, valued at 159,948 dollars ; 9 vessels and 1,583 men were engaged in the seal fishery. In 1919 the catch was 81,293 seals.

Communications, &c.—Railways open 1919 : 904 miles of Government line with a gauge of 3 ft. 6 in., and 47 miles of private line. By acts of the Newfoundland Legislature in 1910 an agreement was made by the Government for the construction and maintenance of five branch lines of railway running to Bonavista, Heart's Content, and Grate's Cove, Trepassey, Fortune Bay, and Bonne Bay. The Government agreed to pay the contractors 15,000 dollars a mile for construction and to give 4,000 acres of land per mile constructed for operation, to do which it raised by loan 3,893,200 dollars. The line to Bonavista was completed in 1911, the line to Trepassey in 1912, and the lines to Heart's Content and Grate's Cove in 1914. These lines open up various fertile sections of the island. Communication between various points on the coast and between the island and the continent is maintained by a fleet of 13 first-class steamers, each of which connects with some central point on the railway. There were in 1919, 891 post and telegraph offices. Letters and cards sent in 1919, 4,000,000, newspapers, books, &c., 3,600,000; parcels, 248,123. Post office revenue, 53,605*l*.; expenditure, 170,926*l*. Telegraph line open (1919), 4,600 miles; 965 miles of telephone wire.

In December, 1919, the Newfoundland Savings Bank held 2,507,984 dollars standing to the credit of 5,978 depositors; this is in addition to the amounts held by the Savings Departments of the four banks doing business in St. John's.

The legal coin of the colony is the gold dollar, equivalent to 4*s*. 1*½d*. of British money.

AUSTRALASIA AND OCEANIA.

---

The British Territories in Australasia comprise the self-governing States and Territories which now form the Commonwealth of Australia ; the Australian Dependencies of Papua and Norfolk Island, the self-governing Dominion of New Zealand and adjacent islands, and the Crown Colony of Fiji. The British possessions in Oceania include the Solomon and Tonga Islands, and many other groups of islands and islets scattered over the Pacific.

THE COMMONWEALTH OF AUSTRALIA.

The Commonwealth of Australia, consisting of the six colonies (now denominated Original States) of New South Wales, Victoria, Queensland, South Australia, Western Australia, and Tasmania, was proclaimed at Sydney January 1, 1901. After five of these colonies had, by legislative enactments, approved by the direct vote of the electors, declared their desire for a Federal Union, the British Parliament, on July 9, 1900, passed the Act to constitute the Commonwealth. This Act provided for the inclusion of Western Australia in the Federation if that colony so desired, and in the following month the colonial legislation necessary for this end was passed.

On January 1, 1911, the Northern Territory was transferred by South Australia to the Commonwealth, and on the same date a portion of New South Wales, consisting of 912 square miles, was vested in the Commonwealth, for the purpose of forming the Federal Territory containing the seat of the Commonwealth Government. In 1917 this area was increased to 940 square miles.

Legislative power is vested in a Federal Parliament, consisting of the King, represented by a Governor-General, a Senate, and a House of Representatives. The Senate consists of Senators (six for each of the Original States voting as one electorate) chosen for six years. In general, the Senate will be renewed to the extent of one-half every three years, but in case of prolonged disagreement with the House of Representatives, it may be dissolved, and an entirely new Senate elected. The House of Representatives consists, as nearly as may be, of twice as many members as there are Senators, the numbers chosen in the several States being in proportion to the respective numbers of their people as shown by the latest statistics of the Commonwealth, but not less than five for any original State. As a result of the Census enumeration of 1911, New South Wales has 27 members, Victoria 21, Queensland 10, South Australia 7, Western Australia 5, and Tasmania 5. Every House of Representatives continues for three years from the date of its first meeting, unless sooner dissolved. Electoral qualifications for both Chambers of the first Federal Parliament were those for the more numerous House of the Parliament of the State in which the elector was competent to vote. Every Senator or Member of the House of Representatives must be a natural-born subject of the King, or have been for five years a naturalised subject under a law of the United Kingdom or of a State of the Commonwealth. He or she must be of full age, and must possess electoral qualification. Since the first Parliament of the Commonwealth was instituted, an Electoral Act has unified the franchise for both Chambers, on the basis of universal adult (male and female) suffrage.

The legislative powers of the Federal Parliament are extensive, embracing commerce, shipping, &c. ; finance ; defence ; postal, telegraph, and like services ; census and statistics ; conciliation and arbitration in industrial disputes extending beyond the limits of any one State. Authority is given for the Commonwealth to assume jurisdiction in regard to railways, light-houses, &c.; marriage and divorce; emigration and immigration; currency and banking; weights and measures. The several State Parliaments retain legislative authority in all matters which are not transferred to the Federal Parliament, which is thus a government of limited and enumerated powers, the several State Parliaments retaining the residuary power of government over their respective territories. With respect to money bills, the House of Representatives has special powers, and provision is made for cases of disagreement between the two Houses.

The Executive power, vested in the King, is exercised by the Governor-General, who is assisted by an Executive Council of responsible Ministers of State. These Ministers are, or must become within three months, members of the Federal Parliament; they are paid salaries not exceeding, in all, 15,300*l.* a year. The Executive Government of the Commonwealth is constituted as follows:—

Governor-General.—Lord Forster of Lepe, P.C., G.C.M.G., Commander-in-Chief of the Commonwealth of Australia and its Dependencies (salary, £10,000).

Prime Minister and Attorney-General.—Right Hon. W. M. Hughes, P.C., K.C.

Minister for the Navy.—Hon. William Henry Laird Smith.

Treasurer.—Rt. Hon. Sir Joseph Cook P.C., G.C.M.G.

Minister of Defence.—Hon. George Foster Pearce.

Minister for Repatriation.—Hon. Edward Davis Millen.

Public Works and Railways.—Hon. Littleton Ernest Groom.

Home and Territories.—Hon. Alexander Poynton, O.B.E.

Minister of Trade and Customs.—Hon. Walter Massy Greene.

Postmaster-General.—Hon. George Henry Wise.

Vice-President of the Executive Council.—Hon. Edward John Russell.

Assistant Minister for Defence.—Hon. Sir Granville de Laune Ryrie K.C.M.G., C.B., V.D.

Assistant Treasurer.—Hon. Arthur Stanislaus Rodgers.

High Commissioner for Commonwealth in London.—The Right Hon. Andrew Fisher, P.C. (appointed October 26, 1915), Australia House, Strand.

Commissioner for Commonwealth in America.—Mark Sheldon, 61, Broadway, New York.

The Constitution provides for a Federal Judicature, for an inter-State Commission on Trade and Commerce, for the transfer of State officials, State property, and State debts to the Commonwealth, and for alteration of the Constitution. A High Court (consisting of 7 judges) has been established, with original as well as appellate jurisdiction. The Interstate Commission has also been constituted. The selection of the Yass-Canberra site for the Federal Capital was voted in the Senate and House of Representatives, and in 1910, the Commonwealth acquired from the State of New South Wales an area of approximately 912 square miles. An area of 28 square miles at Jervis Bay was also acquired for purposes of a Naval College, and the right to construct a railway from the Capital thereto. At present the Federal Government has its seat at Melbourne.

The number of occupied dwellings in the Commonwealth in 1911, according to a return issued by the Commonwealth statistician, was 924,259. The figures for the various States are as follows: New South Wales, 330,976; Victoria, 272,683; Queensland, 125,836; South Australia, 84,179; Western Australia, 68,870; Tasmania, 40,025; Northern Territory, 1,248; Federal Capital Territory, 442. Of these houses 499,653 were built of wood, 235,460 of brick, 75,565 of stone, and 38,797 of iron. No less than 49,375 buildings are described as being built of hessian or canvas, and 3,372 were of bark.

The Northern Territory, with an area of 523,620 square miles, was under the jurisdiction of South Australia from 1863 to 1910. On the 1st January, 1911, it was transferred to the Commonwealth (see Northern Territory).

In 1905 the administration of Papua was transferred to the Commonwealth (see Papua).

Finance.

Actual revenue and expenditure for 1916-17 to 1919-20 are given in the following table. The payments to States represent the balances of revenue collected in the several States after the necessary expenditure on Commonwealth services. Under the "Surplus Revenue Act, 1910," the amount payable by the Commonwealth to each State from July 1, 1910, is a sum equivalent to 25 shillings per head of the population as estimated by the Commonwealth Statistician at 31st December in each year. (In 1910-11 this amount was subject to certain deductions). Tasmania is receiving, in addition, a total sum of 900,000*l.* in ten annual instalments, starting from 1912-13.

The estimates for 1920-21 are : revenue, 63,364,700*l.* ; expenditure, 69,112,123*l.*

The aggregate public debt of the several Australian States on June 30, 1919, was 382 million pounds (excluding temporary Treasury bills, &c.).

The Commonwealth public debt on June 30th, 1920, was 381,415,317*l.*, including 207,249,440*l.* owing in respect of internal war loans.

The total Australian war expenditure for the six years ending June 30, 1920, was 381,149,019*l.*, of which 70,716,184*l.* is charged against revenue, and 310,432,835*l.* against loans. War expenditure for 1920-21 is estimated at 36,841,931*l.* out of revenue, and 25,400,000*l.* out of War Loan.

Invalid and Old Age Pensions.

The Invalid and Old Age Pension Acts provide for the payment of invalid and old age pensions at such rates as the Commissioner deciding the question deems sufficient, but so that the amount shall not exceed 32*l.* 10*s.* a year, nor the pensioner's whole income (including the pension) exceed 58*l.* 10*s.* a year (prior to 1916, the amounts were 26*l.* and 52*l.* respectively). Old age pensions are granted upon application to persons who are at least 65 years of age and have lived in Australia or Australian territory at least 20 years. Invalid pensions are granted to persons who have lived at least 5 years in Australia, have there become incapacitated, and have no other sufficient means of support. On October 9, 1912, a Maternity Bill was passed providing for the payment of a bonus up to a maximum amount of 5*l.* in respect of every child born in Australia, of white parentage. The disbursements for old age and invalid pensions (including payments to Asylums) were 3,793,087*l.* in 1917-18; 3,936,615*l.* in 1918-19; and 4,546,879*l.* in 1919-20. The maternity allowance for 1917-18, 684,430*l.*; for 1918-19, 620,080*l.*, and for 1919-20, 625,865*l.* The numbers of pensioners in the Commonwealth on March 31, 1920, were:—Old age, 98,364; invalid, 84,333; total, 182,697. War pensioners at June 30, 1919, numbered 181,529.

Defence.

ARMY

The principle of the defence policy of Australia is the universal compulsory training of a Citizen Army. A statement made by the Minister of Defence in the Senate on September 17, 1920, indicates some proposed modification of the defence organization, and of the scheme of training, but the principle of universal training will be adhered to. Permanent troops will be maintained only in such numbers as are necessary to administer and instruct the Citizen Forces. The army to be raised will be composed of 2 light horse divisions, 4 complete divisions, 3 mixed brigades, which in certain circumstances will be capable of union with a fifth division. These divisions will be supplemented by the proportion of 'extra divisional units,' which war has shown to be necessary and of which the Commonwealth is, at the time, capable. The Divisional Commander will have complete responsibility for the preparation for war of the forces under his command. An area will be allotted to him and a personnel provided as the fixed machinery of the unit. The Military Board, as the means of control and administration will be retained, but it has been so reconstituted as to impose upon it a full measure of responsibility. The Council of Defence will be restored to deal with policy and insure its continuity, and to co-ordinate the requirements of the sea, air, and land. The trainee who served in the Australian Imperial Force is exempted from further training, but members of that Force will be invited to join the new forces, in their old units, and become the foundation upon which the scheme will be built. Facilities will be given to these men to fill positions in the commissioned and non-commissioned ranks.

The training of the junior cadets will be mainly of a physical and recreational nature, aiming at the physical development of the youth. The youth of 17 or 18 years of age will be given an advanced degree of physical and recreational training, and also be prepared for graduation to the Citizen Force. Under the proposed scheme the period of training in the Citizen Forces will be reduced from 7 years to 4 years, though the number of days' training will be increased from 112 to 118. In the first year with the Citizen Forces the trainee is required to give 10 weeks, and in the following three years 16 days annually. At the end of that period, i.e., in his twenty-second year, he will be freed from training, but for a further period of four years he will be required to register.

An arsenal will be established which it is hoped will be able to supply peace needs. The arsenal will be more in the form of a munition supply branch aiming at insuring the supply of war needs through Australian trade rather than that Government-owned factories shall be designed on a scale necessary for the purpose. Properly situated mobilization stores are being provided.

Rifle Clubs.—A conference of senior officers of the Australian Military Forces, recently assembled to advise the Government on the future defence policy, recommended that the maintenance of rifle clubs as a military reserve is no longer necessary. The Government, however, have decided to subsidize rifle clubs to the extent of 50,000*l.* per annum, and in addition to supply ammunition to the value of 30,000*l.* The grant will be administered by the Civil Branch of the Defence Department, and the conditions under which the money will be spent and the details of future administration will be settled in consultation with the Council of Rifle Associations and Clubs.

The military forces of the Commonwealth on June 30, 1919, were:—

NAVY.

Sydney is a first-class naval station, and the headquarters of the British fleet in Australasia. The Naval Agreement Act of 1903 (for 10 years) provided that the Naval Force on the Australian Station should consist of not less than one armoured cruiser, first-class, two second-class cruisers, four third-class cruisers, four sloops, and of a Royal Naval Reserve of 25 officers and 700 seamen and stokers. The base of this force should be the ports of Australia and New Zealand, and their sphere of operations the waters of the Australia, China, and East India Stations. They were officered by officers of the Royal Navy and Royal Naval Reserve. Eight nominations for naval cadetships were to be given annually to the Commonwealth, and two to New Zealand. An annual charge of 200,000*l.* was to be paid to the Imperial Government by the Commonwealth, and 40,000*l.* by New Zealand. The Navy is constituted under the agreement of 1911, in conformity with the plan formulated by Admiral Sir Reginald Henderson.

On December 31, 1919, the naval forces of the Commonwealth were as follows:—Permanent naval forces (sea-going), 4,593; cadet midshipmen under training, 117; boys under training, 214; Royal Australian Naval Brigade, 5,732; R.N. Reserve (sea-going), 41; Total, 10,697. The Imperial Government having presented to the Commonwealth 16 vessels, destroyers, submarines, and sloops, an addition to the permanent force became necessary. The total was raised to 6,828, but it is hoped to reduce the figure to 4,651 by June, 1921. The Australia and Melbourne have nucleus crews, but 6 destroyers, 6 submarines, 2 cruisers, and two sloops are in commission. The naval estimates for 1920–21 were 3,285,000*l.*

The policy of the Commonwealth is to make Australia self-defending. Having accepted the position that a fuller Imperial partnership is necessary for the future security of the Empire, and that a definite place in the Pacific has been allotted to Australia, the Government agreed in 1911 to furnish an Australian Fleet Unit, upon which King George conferred the title of 'Royal Australian Navy.' The ships and vessels of the Royal Australian Navy are named in the British lists. They are the battle-cruiser, Australia, and the light-cruisers, Adelaide, Melbourne, Sydney, Brisbane, and Encounter. In addition are the following:—the flotilla leader Anzac (1917), 1,660 tons, 34 knots, 4 in. guns; 'river class' destroyers, Huon, Parramatta, Swan, Torrens, Warrego, and Yarra (1910–15), 700 tons, 27 knots; 'S' class, Stalwart, Success, Swordsmen, Tasmania, Tattoo (1918–19), 1,250 tons, 36 knots; submarines, J1 to J7 (1916–17), surface displacement, 1,21 tons, 19 knots; submerged displacement, 182 tons, 9½ knots. The Australian Navy also includes two sloops and a few old vessels of no value.

AIR FORCES.

It is proposed to establish a combined Naval and Military Air Corps, to be organized under a Board composed of flying, equipment, and finance officers. This organization will facilitate an all-round training of personnel in naval and military flying, and focus the results of the experience to be gained in the development of a combined service. For the present it is proposed to establish the following units:—Headquarters, Australian Air Corps (including representation in London); three station headquarters, with land, buildings, store and repair facilities; one central flying school; one aircraft depot; one squadron of flying boats; one squadron of ships' seaplanes; one squadron torpedo carriers; two fighting squadrons; and two corps reconnaissance squadrons. There will be both permanent and citizen force units. The permanent units will be required for service with the fleet, for squadrons so isolated that citizen personnel cannot be utilized, and for training squadrons. The Minister will be assisted by a representative War Council, which will include officers of the Navy, Army, and Air Board, and an independent controller of civil aviation. A sum of 100,000*l.* has also been placed on the estimates for 1920-21 for the purposes of civil aviation. It is proposed to use the permanent section of the military air force largely in surveying and other necessary work, and in arranging routes in Australia which will eventually be used for the purposes of commercial aviation.

Production.

Up to the year 1918, 858,600,345 acres, representing 45·10 per cent. of the total area of the Australian Commonwealth, were either unoccupied or occupied by the Crown; only 5·63 per cent. had been actually alienated (107,093,317 acres); 2·92 per cent. (55,672,578 acres) was in course of alienation; and 46·35 per cent. (882,265,600 acres) was held under the various forms of leases and licenses.

The total area under all crops in 1918-19 was 13,332,393 acres. The total value of agricultural production in the same year was 58,080,000£. Of Australia's total forest area of 102,000,000 acres, 14,137,746 acres have been specially reserved for timber. Wheat acreage 1919-20, 6,379,560 ; yield, 45,753,298 bushels. The total sugar crop of 1918-19 was 202,256 tons ; and the estimated yield for 1919-20 is 180,000 tons.

At or about the end of 1918 there were in the Commonwealth 2,528,243 horses, 12,738,852 cattle, 87,086,236 sheep, and 913,902 pigs.

The production of wool in 1918-19 amounted to 657,911,710 lbs., valued at 42,490,000£., and the exports to 458,033,726 lbs. greasy, valued at 31,479,990£., and 109,135,989 lbs. scoured and tops, valued at 11,286,765£. The exports of tallow amounted in value to 2,176,586£. ; of sheepskins to 1,941,113£. ; and of frozen meat to 4,471,942£. The butter produced in season 1918-19 amounted to 181,802,675 lbs., and 41,114,800 lbs., valued at 3,193,086£., were exported during that period.

The mineral products were valued at 26,155,649£. in 1918, including : gold, 5,408,000£. ; silver and lead, 6,105,000£. ; copper, 4,465,000£. ; tin, 1,432,000£. ; coal, 6,124,000£. Total mineral production up to end of 1918 was 957,673,818£. ; of this amount 594,536,723£. was the value of gold. Gold production, 1918 : 1,273,188 oz. ; 1919, 1,074,547 oz.

A Commonwealth Bureau of Commerce and Industry was established in 1919 to organise the country's resources, and frame a policy for the expansion of trade, improvement of methods, and establishment of new industries.

Commerce.

Throughout the Commonwealth there are uniform customs duties, and trade between the States is free. For 1919-20, the net revenue collected from customs duties amounted to 13,705,341£.

The following table shows for 6 years the value of the imports and exp

(merchandise, bullion, and specie) into or from the Australian Commonwealth from or into countries outside the Commonwealth.

The value of goods imported represents the amount on which duty is payable or would be payable if the duty were ad valorem. The value of goods subject to duty is taken to be the fair market value in the principal markets of the country whence the same were exported, with an addition of 10 per cent. to such market value.

The Customs Tariff Act of 1920 provides for preference to goods produced in and shipped from the United Kingdom to Australia as against the goods of other countries, and for reciprocal tariff agreements with other countries. It also affords a larger measure of protection to Australian industries than previous tariffs.

The value of goods exported is the value in the principal markets of the Commonwealth in the usual and ordinary commercial acceptance of the term.

The deposits were 174,979,336l. in 1915 ; 190,954,644l. in 1916 ; 207,281,495l. in 1917 ; 224,766,758l. in 1918 ; and 249,058,254l. in 1919.

The total number of depositors in the Savings Banks in the Commonwealth on March 31, 1920, was 3,076,747, and the amount on deposit, 130,159,051l.

There are 3 mints in the Commonwealth, at Sydney (opened 1855), Melbourne (1872), and Perth (1899). Besides issuing gold coin in the shape of sovereigns and half-sovereigns they also issue gold bullion, partly for the use of local manufacturers (jewellers and dentists), and partly for export, India taking annually a considerable quantity of gold cast into 10-oz. bars. The issues during 1917 are shown in the following table :—

Mint	Coin			Bullion	Total
	Sovereigns	Half-Sovereigns	Total
	£	£	£	£	£
Sydney . . .	1,666,000	—	1,666,000	72,679	1,738,679
Melbourne . . .	934,469	—	934,469	149,821	1,084,290
Perth . . .	4,110,286	—	4,110,286	4,875	4,115,161

Australian notes, authorised by the Australian Notes Act, began to appear in circulation in December, 1910, and for the first half of the year 1911 circulated side by side with ordinary bank notes. By the end of 1911 the bank notes were withdrawn.

On August 26, 1920, notes issued by the Commonwealth and unredeemed amounted to 56,933,065l. Of this total 1,000l. notes accounted for 23,194,000l., 1l. notes, 14,489,297l., and 5l. notes, 8,905,605l. The amount of gold held in reserve on that date was 28,212,757l., representing 40.77 per cent. of the liability.

NORFOLK ISLAND, 29° S. latitude, 168° E. longitude, area 18 square miles, population (1911) 985 (568 males and 417 females). The island was formerly part of the Colony of New South Wales and then of Van Diemen's Land. It has been a distinct settlement since 1855, and under an Order-in-Council of 1900 was governed by the Governor of New South Wales ; but from July 1, 1914, the affairs of the island have been administered by the Commonwealth Government. In 1917-18 the imports (mostly from the Commonwealth and New Zealand) were valued at 12,786l., and the exports, 6,460l. To encourage the development of the fish industry the Commonwealth Government has granted an annuity of 1,000l. for three years to those engaged in the trade.

NEW SOUTH WALES.

Constitution and Government.

New South Wales became a British Possession in 1788; in 1843 a partially elective Legislative Council was established, and in 1855 responsible government was granted. The constitution is embodied in the consolidating Act No. 32, 1902. The legislative power is vested in a Parliament of two Houses, the first called the Legislative Council, and the second the Legislative Assembly. The Legislative Council consists of not less than twenty-one members (72 in September, 1920), appointed by the Crown for life. Members are not entitled to remuneration, but travel free on the State railways and tramways. The Legislative Assembly has 90 members. Under Act No. 40, 1918, Members of the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales were elected in accordance with the principles of proportional representation, and the State has been distributed into electoral districts so arranged that those within the metropolitan and adjacent areas and that containing the City of Newcastle are represented by five, and the remaining districts by three members. Postal voting is permissible. Every man or woman, being a natural born or naturalised subject above 21 years of age, having resided six months in the Commonwealth, three months in the State, and one month in the electorate, is qualified as an elector. The duration of a Parliament is not more than three years. Members of the Legislative Assembly are paid 500*l.* per annum, in addition to which they are allowed to travel free on Government railways and tramways in the State, and are provided with official stamped envelopes for the free transmission of correspondence through the post. The leader of the Opposition is allowed 250*l.* per annum in addition. The Speaker of the Legislative Assembly receives a salary of 1,000*l.* per annum, and the Chairman of Committees 740*l.* per annum. Members of the Legislative Council receive no allowances but may travel free over all Government railways and tramways. At the State general election of 1920, 648,709 electors (363,115 males, and 285,594 females), or 56·19 per cent. of electors enrolled and qualified to vote, recorded their votes. In New South Wales, at the Senate Federal election of 1917, 430,514 males (or 76·02 per cent.) out of 566,845 enrolled, and 343,148 females (or 64·98 per cent.) out of 528,489 enrolled, voted. At the House of Representatives (Federal) election of 1917, 370,618 males (or 76·44 per cent.) out of 484,854 males enrolled voted, and 292,925 females (or 65·47 per cent.) out of 447,437 women enrolled voted. The Women's Legal Status Act, 1918, provides that women shall not by reason of sex be disqualified from holding the position of Member of the Legislative Assembly, Mayor or Member of a Local Government Council, Judge of the Supreme Court, or of a District Court, Chairman of Quarter Sessions, Stipendiary or Police Magistrate, Justice of the Peace, Barrister or Solicitor of the Supreme Court, or Conveyancer. The executive is in the hands of a Governor, appointed by the Imperial Government.

Governor.—His Excellency Sir Walter Edward Davidson, K.C.M.G., 1917. (Salary, 5,000*l.*)

Lieut.-Governor.—His Excellency the Honourable Sir William Portus Cullen, K.C.M.G., LL.D., Chief Justice of New South Wales.

In the exercise of the executive the Governor is assisted by a Cabinet consisting of the following members :—

Premier.—The Hon. John Storey, M.L.A.

Colonial Secretary and Minister for Housing.—The Hon. James Dooley, M.L.A.

Minister for Agriculture.—The Hon. William Fraser Dunn, M.L.A.

Secretary for Lands and Minister for Forests.—The Hon. Peter Ffrench Loughlin, M.L.A.

Secretary for Mines and Minister for Labour and Industry.—The Hon. George Cann, M.L.A.

Colonial Treasurer.—The Hon. John Thomas Lang, M.L.A.

Minister of Public Instruction and Local Government.—The Hon. Thomas Davies Mutch, M.L.A.

Attorney-General.—The Hon. Edward Aloysius McTiernan, M.L.A.

Minister of Justice.—The Hon. William John McKell, M.L.A.

Secretary for Public Works and Minister for Railways.—The Hon. John Estell, M.L.A.

Minister for Public Health and Motherhood.—The Hon. John Joseph Gregory McGirr, M.L.A.

Solicitor-General.—The Hon. Robert Sproule, M.L.C.

Vice-President of the Executive Council.—The Hon. Edward John Kavanagh, M.L.C.

The Attorney-General and Minister of Justice has a salary of 1,520*l.*, and the other ministers, except the Vice-President of the Executive Council, of 1,370*l.* The Premier has an additional salary of 500*l.* The salary of the Vice-President of the Executive Council is 800*l.*

Agent-General in London (Acting).—Sir Timothy A. Coghlan, K.C.M.G., I.S.O.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

Under the Local Government Act of 1906, the system of Local Government was extended to the whole of the State, with the exception of the Western Land Division. Of the 190 boroughs and municipal districts which existed under previous Acts, 185 still remain under the title of municipalities, and in addition thereto, 136 new corporate bodies have been established, which are called shires.

The Local Government Act of 1919 repealed former Acts, but existing regulations remain in force until amended or cancelled. Provision is made for Government endowments to shires of a minimum of 150,000*l.* annually, payable on general rates. In addition to the ordinary powers exercised, the municipal and shire councils are authorised to borrow up to 20 per cent. of the unimproved value in municipalities, such loans to be guaranteed by the Government. General rates are charged on the unimproved value of the land, and not on the annual rental. Special local and loan rates may be imposed on the improved or unimproved value at the option of the Council. The rateable value of coal mines is fixed at 50 per cent. of the gross value of the average annual output for the preceding three years, and of other mining properties at 40 per cent. for the same period. Hospitals, benevolent institutions, public libraries, parks, churches, and unoccupied Crown lands are exempt from taxation. Municipalities which are not entitled to a statutory endowment under former Acts may, if in necessitous circumstances, receive endowments. Owners and occupiers of rateable property of annual value not less than 5*l.*, whether male or female, unless not naturalised, in any municipality or shire, and paying rates, are entitled to vote for the election of aldermen or councillors, and are qualified for nomination for a civil office.

Area and Population.

The area of New South Wales, inclusive of Lord Howe Island and the Federal Capital Territory, is estimated at 310,372 square miles. The State is divided into various districts for departmental purposes, the most important division being that into 141 counties.

The population (including aborigines) at five consecutive censuses was :—

Year	Males	Females	Total	Pop. per square mile	Average increase per cent. per annum.
1871	275,551	228,430	503,981	1·62	3·7
1881	411,149	340,319	751,468	2·42	4·1
1891	612,562	519,672	1,132,234	3·65	4·2
1901	712,456	646,677	1,359,133	4·38	1·8
1911	859,847	790,623	1,650,470	5·32	2·0

The estimated population on June 30, 1920, was 2,026,262 (1,021,590 males, 1,004,672 females).

According to the race or origin, percentages were as follows at the census of 1911 (exclusive of aborigines):—New South Wales, 74·51 ; other Commonwealth States, 9·67 ; New Zealand, 0·85 ; English, 7·49 ; Irish, 2·85 ; Scotch, 1·91 ; Welsh, 0·27 ; other British subjects, 0·45 ; total British subjects, 98·00. Chinese, 0·47 ; German, 0·45 ; other foreigners, 0·99 ; total foreigners, 1·91. Born at sea, 0·09. Aborigines :—Males, 1,152 ; females, 860 ; total, 2,012.

According to occupation the number of actual workers (not including aborigines) was distributed thus at the census of 1911 :—

Professional	56,140
Domestic	73,381
Commercial	106,320
Transport and Communication	61,964
Industrial	208,014

Primary Producers (Agricultural, 79,235 ; Pastoral and Dairying, 72,990 ; Mining and Quarrying 39,574)	204,093
Independent . . . . .	8,908

Total Breadwinners . . . 718,820

The number of persons classed as 'dependents' was 916,211, and 'unspecified,' 11,703.

The census population of Sydney (1911), including suburbs and shipping, was 636,853. Estimated population, end of 1919, 828,700. At the end of 1919 the chief country towns, with their populations, were as follow :— Newcastle and suburbs, 62,900 ; Broken Hill, 22,950 ; Parramatta, 12,630 ; Maitland, E. & W., 12,400 ; Goulburn, 11,000 ; Granville, 12,030 ; Lithgow, 10,900 ; Bathurst, 9,100 ; Auburn, 11,910 ; Lismore, 8,850 ; Lidcombe, 8,770 ; Tamworth, 8,250 ; Orange, 7,500 ; Grafton, 5,350 ; Wagga Wagga, 7,650 ; Albury, 7,000 ; Katoomba, 7,400 ; Bankstown, 7,000 ; Prospect and Sherwood, 6,090 ; Wollongong, 5,900 ; Armidale, 5,500 ; Inverell, 5,750 ; Forbes, 5,300 ; Dubbs, 5,200 ; Casino, 4,950 ; Cowra, 4,500.

The following table shows the births, deaths, and marriages for five years :

Year	Marriages	Total Births	Illegitimate	Total Deaths	Excess of Births
1913	16,311	52,134	2,802	19,732	32,402
1916	16,320	52,075	2,501	19,854	32,221
1917	13,261	52,467	2,533	17,969	34,498
1918	13,199	50,700	2,654	18,840	31,860
1919	15,818	48,528	2,534	26,385	22,143

The increase in population between the census of 1901 and that of 1911 was 291,337. Towards this the excess of births over deaths contributed 247,871.

The following table shows the movement of population during the last five years :—

Year	Arrivals			Departures
	Interstate	Oversea	Total	Interstate	Oversea	Total
1915	341,691	44,362	386,053	328,558	82,383	410,941

NOTE.—The excess of Departures oversea, up to the year 1918, is due to departure of men in the Australian Imperial Forces.

In December, 1905, New South Wales revived the policy of assisted immigration, and assisted passages are now granted to female domestic servants and close relatives of residents. Free passages are granted to ex-service men and women who are nominated by friends already settled in New South Wales. 6,814 assisted persons arrived in 1914, 3,508 in 1915, 1,040 in 1916, 586 in 1917, 192 in 1918, 119 in 1919, and 4,025 in 1920.

Housing.—To relieve the urgent demands for small dwellings, a Government Department has been created for the purpose of purchasing or resuming land and erecting houses thereon for disposal by sale or lease. The housing scheme assists persons by liberal advances to become the owners of their own homes.

Religion.

An Act abolishing State aid to religion was passed in 1862. Only one of the clergymen who received State aid when the Act was passed is now living.

The Church of England in the State is under the guidance of a Metropolitan who is Archbishop of Sydney, Metropolitan of New South Wales, and Primate of Australia and Tasmania. He is nominated by the Bishops in Australia and consecrated by the Archbishop of Canterbury. There were in 1920 seven dioceses. The affairs of the Roman Catholic Church are administered by the Bishops of eight dioceses under the Archbishop of Sydney. The following table shows the statistics of the religious denominations in New South Wales at the census of 1911 :—

Instruction.

Education is under State control, and instruction is compulsory between the ages of 7 and 14 years; in the State Primary and Superior public schools and High Schools education is free.

There were during 1919, 3,336 Government schools, divided into 3,578 departments, and classified as follows :—High schools 23 ; public primary schools 2,050 ; half-time schools 146 ; provisional schools 498 ; house-to-house school 1 ; travelling schools 3 ; evening continuation schools 40 ; correspondence schools 2 ; subsidised schools 575 ; industrial and reformatory schools 3 ; total 3,336 schools. During 1919 there were 288,965 children enrolled, and an average attendance of 212,873, with 9,002 teachers. The pupils receiving Kindergarten instruction at Government schools numbered 6,698. In 1919 the expenditure on Public Instruction (exclusive of technical education) was 2,236,382*l*.

Of private schools at the end of 1919 there were 681, with 81,061 pupils and 3,830 teachers, of which 446 were Roman Catholic Denominational Schools, having 2,443 teachers and 65,745 pupils. The figures relating to private schools are exclusive of business colleges and shorthand schools.

The medical inspection of State school children and of many at private schools is conducted by the Government Medical Officers every three years. A travelling school hospital, a travelling opthalmic clinic, a Metropolitan dental clinic, and six travelling dental clinics have been established.

The University of Sydney, founded in 1850, receives from Government a yearly subsidy, amounting, with special aid, to 67,203*l*. in 1919. The total revenue for 1919 was 125,669*l*. There were 2,797 students with 26 professors, 6 assistant professors, 133 lecturers and demonstrators. Degrees or certificates are granted in all branches of knowledge other than Theology and Divinity, and the benefits and advantages of the University are extended to women equally with men. During 1919 there were 143 degrees conferred by examination to men and 85 to women. There are 4 denominational colleges, Church of England, Roman Catholic, Presbyterian, and Methodist, and a college for women (unsectarian), affiliated to the University. The Technical College, with branch schools, comprises departments in agriculture, architecture, biology, chemistry, domestic science, electrical engineering, geology, mathematics, mechanical engineering, printing and lithography, sanitation, sheep and wool, women's handicrafts, art, commercial subjects, bakery; also separate classes and correspondence courses. There was a total enrolment of 14,580 in 1919.

Of establishments of an educational character there are the Australian Museum, Technological Museums and National Art Gallery, Public Libraries, Conservatorium of Music, also Botanical Gardens and Zoological Gardens.

Old Age, Invalidity and Accident Pensions, and Maternity Allowances.

In Australia the old age pension law grants (subject to conditions as to birth, residence, and character) a pension of 12s. 6d. per week to every woman over 60 years of age, and every man over 65 years of age, or over 60 if incapacitated by infirmity or injury from earning a living. The maximum pension of 32l. 10s. per annum (12s. 6d. per week) is subject to a proportionate reduction in respect of any income or property of the claimant, so that the pensioner's income with the pension shall not exceed 58l. 10s. per annum. Benefits from friendly societies are not reckoned as income, nor any gifts and allowances from children or grandchildren; nor is deduction made for the home in which the pensioner permanently resides. Money payable to a pensioner while an inmate of a benevolent asylum or hospital may be paid to the institution for the pensioner. Since July 1, 1909, old age pensions have been paid throughout the Commonwealth by the Federal Government, and on June 30, 1920, 37,358 (15,515 men and 21,843 women) old age pensions were current in New South Wales.

Invalidity and Accident Pensions are paid to persons over the age of 16 years who are permanently incapacitated and who are not receiving an old age pension. From Dec. 15, 1910, the payment of these pensions was undertaken by the Federal Government, and 14,337 persons (6,583 men and 7,754 women) in New South Wales) were in receipt of the benefits on June 30, 1920.

War pensioners in New South Wales at June 30, 1920, numbered 69,631.

Under the Maternity Allowance Act, passed by the Commonwealth Parliament in 1912, payment of maternity allowances is made to mothers of children born in Australia. A sum of 5l. is payable in respect of each birth, one allowance only being payable in cases of plural births. The allowance is payable to women who are inhabitants of the Commonwealth, or who intend to settle therein. The total number of claims paid in New South Wales during the year ended June 20, 1920, was 48,909.

Justice and Crime.

There are a Supreme Court with a Chief Justice and six puisne judges, an Industrial Arbitration Court, District Courts, Courts of Quarter Sessions, and Children's Courts. All persons arrested and charged with offences and all summoned persons must be brought before the Magistrates' Courts, and are dealt with summarily or committed to trial at the higher courts. Most summary offences are punishable by fine or by imprisonment, not exceeding seven days. Prisoners charged with offences bearing sentences of more than six months' imprisonment are tried by a jury of twelve persons, either at Quarter sessions or before the Supreme Court. Prisoners charged with capital crimes must be tried before the Supreme Court.

In the Sydney metropolitan, Parramatta, Newcastle, Broken Hill, Bathurst, and Wollongong districts stipendiary magistrates preside in the police courts; in other districts, police magistrates and honorary justices of the peace adjudicate. The licensing of houses for the sale of spirituous and fermented liquors is transacted by magistrates specially appointed for that purpose.

In 1918 there were 58,009 convictions before magistrates at Courts of Petty Sessions and Children's Courts, and 622 distinct persons were convicted at the Higher Courts. There are 25 gaols. On December 31, 1919, there were 895 prisoners in confinement.

The First Offenders (Women) Act, 1918, provides that when any woman who has not been previously convicted of any offence punishable either summarily or on indictment, is charged before any court with a minor offence, the hearing of such charge, etc., must, unless the defendant elects to be tried in open court, be in private and no persons other than those directly interested shall remain in the court, and a report of the proceedings must not be published.

Finance.

The following are statistics of net revenue for years ended June 30 :—

Year ended June 30	From Taxation <sup>1</sup>	Land Revenue	From Business Undertakings	From Miscellaneous Sources	Total Net Revenue

For Defence see under Commonwealth of Australia. A naval establishment, the main works of which are at Garden Island, Sydney, has been completed. Sydney is the headquarters of the squadron in Australian waters, and has a dockyard, naval coaling station, and victualing and other stores. The cost of the defence of the State is borne by the Commonwealth Government.

Production and Industry.

I. AGRICULTURE.

In 1917-18 there were 4,462,916 acres under crops (including 2,215 double cropped). The cultivated land is principally to be found in small holdings of less than 500 acres. The State is divided into three divisions—the Eastern, Central, and Western. The Districts in the Eastern and Central Divisions are, for the purpose of local administration, grouped into 13 Land Board Districts, which are sub-divided into Land Districts. The Western Division is under the control of the Western Land Board—consisting of three Commissioners—and the head offices of the Lands Department and Western Land Board offices are in Sydney. In the Eastern and Central Divisions there are a number of tenures under which land may be acquired. In the Western Division the land is leased by the State to pastoral tenants,

The principal fruit-culture of the State is that of the orange. There were in June, 1919, 27,597 acres under citrus fruit, with an estimated production of 990,901 bushels of oranges, 222,612 bushels of lemons, 397,775 bushels of mandarins, and 8,058 bushels of other citrus fruit.

At June 30, 1919, the State had 37,381,874 sheep, 3,280,676 cattle, 722,723 horses, and 294,648 pigs. The production of wool as in the grease was in the year ended June 30, 1919, 305,613,000 lbs. In the same year the production of tallow was 488,060 cwt.; butter, 66,008,958 lbs.; cheese, 5,982,120 lbs.; bacon and hams, 16,801,666 lbs.

There were 139,501 persons employed permanently in rural occupations during the year ended June 30, 1919.

There is a Forestry Commission. The total area of Crown lands as State forests amounts to 5,085,050 acres. The revenue from royalties, licences, &c., amounted in the year ended June 30, 1916, to 68,107*l.*; in 1917 to 67,273*l.*; in 1918 to 70,969*l.*; in 1919 to 97,592*l.*; and in 1920 to 147,040*l.* There were 427 licensed sawmills, the employees numbering 4,892. The output of native timber was valued at 1,277,032*l.*

II. MINES AND MINERALS.

Gold is found in all parts of New South Wales. The total production since its discovery in 1851 down to and including 1919 was 14,748,637 oz. fine, valued at 62,648,187*l.* The production in 1919 was 65,839 oz. fine, valued at 279,666*l.* Most of the gold won in the State is received at the Sydney Mint for coinage.

The value of silver and silver-lead and ore obtained to the end of 1919 was 82,135,425*l.* In 1919, 1,232,710 ounces of silver were raised, valued at 292,838*l.*, and 77,989 tons of silver-lead ore concentrates, &c., altogether valued at 1,030,825*l.* 1,460 tons of copper were produced in 1919, valued at 139,296*l.* The estimated value of copper raised from its discovery in 1858 until the end of 1919 is 15,128,100*l.* The total value of the output of tin since the mines were opened in 1872 has been 11,928,503*l.*, the value in 1919 being 416,623*l.* for 2,692 tons. In 1919 there were 134 coal mines, employing 18,041 men; the quantity of coal raised in 1919 was 8,631,554 tons, valued at 5,422,846*l.* The estimated value of coal raised to the close of 1919 amounted to 98,144,266*l.* During 1919, 7 shale mines were in operation, 187 miners raising 25,453 tons of oil shale valued at 37,968*l.*, making the total value of production to end of 1919, 2,502,814*l.* In 1919, 424,773 tons of coke were manufactured, valued at 550,127*l.* In 1919 there were 25 smelting works and ore-dressing establishments giving permanent employment to 3,168 persons, principally for the smelting of silver, tin, and copper ores. The output of zinc (metal and concentrates) in 1919 was 72,294 tons, valued at 247,895*l.*; and of lead, 11,497 tons, valued at 324,215*l.* Other minerals, &c., produced in 1919 were: iron, 80,941 tons, valued at 445,175*l.*; lime, 31,478 tons, 57,411*l.*; wolfram, 135 tons, 22,818*l.*; Portland cement, 379,896*l.* The aggregate value of the mineral products of N.S.W. to the end of 1919 is 310,408,921*l.*

III. MANUFACTURES.

Industrial Arbitration and Conciliation.

The Industrial laws of New South Wales provide for the regulation of the conditions of industries by means of industrial conciliation and arbitration, and for the repression of strikes and lock-outs. Provision has been made for the registration of industrial unions of employers and of employees, for the constitution of a Court of Industrial Arbitration and subsidiary Tribunals such as Wages or Industrial Boards—to decide disputes and to determine rates of wages and other industrial matters, and for the appointment of a Board of Trade, under the presidency of a Judge of the Court, to exercise extensive powers regarding industrial conditions.

An Industrial Board, consisting of a chairman and two or four other members, representing equally the employers and employees, may be constituted for any industry or group of industries on the recommendation of the Industrial Arbitration Court; also special boards to determine questions of demarcation. A Board may make an award fixing the lowest rates of wages, up to a maximum of £10 per week, the times and hours of work, the rates of payment for overtime, and the proportionate number of apprentices, and granting preference of employment to unionists, and determining any other industrial matter.

The Court or a board may deal with wages and hours of employment, but no award may be made for wages lower than the living wage declared by the Board of Trade. Employees in rural industries are entitled to the living wage as determined after separate inquiry. Aged, infirm or slow workers may obtain permits to work for less than the minimum wage.

The Industrial Boards have been arranged upon the basis of craft or calling, those relating to allied industries being grouped under one chairman.

At June 30, 1919, there were 238 Boards, but since 1916 their work has been gradually curtailed, except in special cases, and awards are now made by the Court in order to prevent delay in hearing and in determining, and to prevent the overlapping of awards.

The awards are binding on all persons in the industry and within the locality to which they relate for a period not exceeding three years. Application for variation may be made whenever a living wage declaration has been made by the Board of Trade. Appeal from an award of a Board lies to the Court.

The Board of Trade, with powers of a Royal Commission, is composed of a President (who is Judge of the Court), a Deputy President, four Commissioners, and four additional Commissioners to represent rural industries. After full inquiry as to the cost of living, the Board declares annually the rates of living wages for adult employees of each sex, the administration of all matters relating to apprenticeship, the welfare of juvenile labour, &c., and for the improvement of industrial relationship between employers and workers.

LIVING WAGE.—The Board of Trade in October, 1919, fixed the living wage in the metropolitan area at 3*l.* 17*s.* per week for adult male employees, and in October, 1920, at 4*l.* 5*s.* per week. In the Newcastle district the living wage is 3*l.* 16*s.* 6*d.*, in the South Coast area 3*l.* 17*s.* 6*d.*, and in the Central Tablelands area 3*l.* 18*s.* per week. For adult female employees in the metropolitan area the wage has been fixed at 1*l.* 19*s.* per week.

Commerce and Communications.

The external commerce of New South Wales, exclusive of inter-State trade, is included in the Statement of the Commerce of the Commonwealth. The total external commerce of the State is given in the following table :—

In addition to the above, Australian silver coin to the value of 1,338,350*l.*, and bronze coin valued at 57,190*l.*, were issued to December 31, 1918.

There were 17 banks trading in New South Wales in 1920, the average assets in the June quarter being: coin, 10,111,791*l.*; bullion, 340,785*l.*; landed property, 2,477,601*l.*; notes and discounted bills, &c., 89,068,144*l.*; notes and bills of other banks, 892,521*l.*; balances due from other banks, 3,354,448*l.*; total assets, 119,272,435*l.* (including 13,032,195*l.* Australian notes).

The liabilities of the banks (exclusive of those to shareholders) were, for June, 1920; Notes in circulation, 73,266*l.*; bills in circulation, 960,586*l.*; deposits not bearing interest, 52,878,126*l.*; deposits bearing interest, 50,495,134*l.*; total deposits, 103,373,260*l.*; balances due to other banks, 1,601,687*l.*; total liabilities, 106,008,799*l.*

The Savings Bank of New South Wales established in 1832, was amalgamated with the Government Savings Bank of New South Wales in May, 1914.

The Government Savings Bank, established in 1871, was reorganised by an Act passed in 1906, by which it was placed under three commissioners. Its business is carried on in two separate departments—the Savings Bank Department and the Advance Department, the former of which receives and invests deposits, and pays interest on amounts not exceeding 500*l.*, while to the latter has been handed over the administration of the State system of loans to agriculturists, formerly vested in an Advance to Settlers Board.

Statistics of Savings Banks are given below; the figures include the returns of the Savings Bank Department of the Commonwealth Bank of Australia:—

Year ended 30th June	Number of Depositors	Amount of Deposits	Average per Depositor

VICTORIA

Constitution and Government.

Victoria, formerly a portion of New South Wales, was, in 1851, proclaimed a separate colony, with a partially elective Legislative Council, and in 1855 responsible self-government was conferred. The legislative authority is vested in a Parliament of two Chambers. The Upper House consists of 34 members, elected for six years, and the Lower of 65, elected for three years (unless sooner dissolved). Members of the Council must be in possession of an estate of the net annual value of 50*l.* for one year prior to their election; and electors must be in the possession or occupancy of property of the rateable value of 10*l.* per annum if derived from freehold, or of 15*l.* if derived from leasehold or the occupation of rented property. No electoral property qualification is required for graduates of British or Colonial universities, matriculated students of the Melbourne University, ministers of religion of any denomination, certificated teachers, lawyers, medical practitioners, and officers of the army and navy active and retired. One-half of the members of the Legislative Council retire every three years. The members of the Legislative Assembly require no property qualification, and are elected by universal male and (since 1908) female suffrage, and no person may vote in more than one district, nor twice in the same district. Clergymen of any religious denomination are not allowed to hold seats in either the Legislative Council or the Legislative Assembly.

Members of the Legislative Assembly are entitled to reimbursement for expenses at the rate of 500*l.* per annum, and members of both Houses have free passes over all the railways.

Governor.—Lord Stradbroke.

Lieutenant Governor.—Hon. Sir William H. Irvine, K.C.M.G.

In the exercise of the executive the Governor is assisted by a Cabinet of responsible ministers.

The Ministry (November 1920) is as follows:—

Premier and Minister of Agriculture.—Hon. H. S. W. Lawson, M.L.A.

Assistant Minister of Agriculture.—Hon. H. Angus, M.L.A.

Chief Secretary, and Minister of Public Health.—Major the Hon. M. Baird, M.L.A.

Treasurer.—Hon. W. M. McPherson, M.L.A.

Attorney-General and Solicitor-General.—Hon. A. Robinson, M.L.C.

Minister of Education, Forests, and Labour.—Hon. Sir A. J. Peacock, M.L.A.

Commissioner of Public Works and Minister for Water Supply.—Hon. F. G. Clarke, M.L.C.

Minister of Railways and Mines.—Hon. S. Barnes, M.L.A.

Minister of Lands and Minister Controlling Wheat Scheme.—Hon. D. S. Oman, M.L.A.

Honorary Members of the Cabinet.—Hon. J. W. Pennington, M.L.A. Hon. John McWhae, M.L.C., Hon. T. Livingston, M.L.A., and Hon. A. Hicks, M.L.C.

The Premier receives 1,400*l.* and the other ministers 1,000*l.* each per annum. At least four of the ministers must be members of either the Legislative Council or the Assembly, but not more than two shall be members of the Council, nor more than six be members of the Assembly.

State of the parties in the Legislative Assembly (Nov. 1920): Liberals, 29; Independent Liberals, 2; Farmers' Union, 13; Labour, 20; Independent Labour, 1. Total, 65.

Agent-General for Victoria in Great Britain.—Hon. Sir Peter McBride, Offices, Melbourne Place, The Strand, W.C.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

For purposes of local administration the State is divided into urban and rural municipalities. The former, called cities, towns, and boroughs, ought not to be of a greater area than nine square miles, and in being constituted must contain at least 500 householders, and rateable property capable of yielding 300*l.* upon a rate of one shilling in the £. The latter, called shires, are portions of country, of undefined extent, containing rateable property capable of yielding a revenue of 1,500*l.* on a rate of one shilling in the £. In 1919 there were 52 urban and 188 rural municipalities, only 650 square miles in the State not being included within their limits. Every ratepayer has one or more votes, according to the amount of his rates.

Area and Population.

The State has an area of 87,884 square miles, or 56,245,760 acres, about  $\frac{1}{4}$  part of the whole area of Australia. The State is divided into 37 counties, varying in area from 920 to 5,983 square miles.

The growth of the population, as shown by census returns, is exhibited in the following table:—

Date of Enumeration	Males	Females	Total	Annual rate of Increase per cent.
March 29, 1857 . . .	264,334	146,432	410,766	—
April 7, 1861 . . .	328,651	211,671	540,322	7·88
April 2, 1871 . . .	401,050	380,478	781,528	3·07
April 3, 1881 . . .	452,083	410,263	862,346	1·65
April 5, 1891 . . .	598,414	541,991	1,140,405	2·83
March 31, 1901 . . .	603,883	597,458	1,201,341	0·48
April 2, 1911 . . .	655,591	659,960	1,315,551	0·91

The average density of the population is 15 persons to the square mile, or one person to every 43 acres.

The population in 1891 included 9,377 Chinese and 565 aborigines ; in 1901, 7,349 Chinese and 652 aborigines ; and in 1911, 5,601 Chinese and 643 aborigines.

At the date of the census of 1911, 98 per cent. of the population were British subjects by birth ; native Victorians numbered 1,010,219, or 77 per cent. of the population ; natives of the other Australian States, 98,726 ; of New Zealand, 10,067 ; of England and Wales, 89,382 ; of Ireland, 41,477 ; of Scotland, 26,577 ; of Germany, 6,142 ; of Austria 355 ; of other countries, 20,285 ; 1,303 were born at sea and the birthplaces of 11,018 were unspecified.

Of the total population in 1911, there were 577,053 bread-winners and 721,137 dependants, while 17,361 were not accounted for. Of the bread-winners there were—professional, 43,819 ; domestic, 62,175 ; commercial, 91,611 ; industrial, 187,773 ; engaged in transport, 39,238 ; primary producers, 144,384 (including agricultural, 86,152 ; pastoral, 29,340 ; fisheries, 873 ; mining, 20,239 ; forestry, 5,151 ; water conservation, 1,627 ; capture of wild animals and their produce, 1,002) ; indefinite, 8,053.

Over three-fifths of the total population of Victoria live in towns. At the end of 1919 it was estimated that the town population numbered 961,888, out of a total population of 1,495,938.

Inclusive of the suburbs the estimated population on December 31, 1919, of Melbourne was 743,000, or half of that of the State ; Ballarat, 39,840 ; Bendigo, 34,780 ; Geelong, 34,270 ; Warrnambool, 7,500 ; Castlemaine, 7,862 ; Mildura, 7,000 ; Maryborough, 4,900 ; Hamilton, 5,000 ; and Ararat, 4,800.

The following are the births, deaths, and marriages in the State for five years :—

Year	Total Births	Illegitimate	Deaths	Marriages	Surplus of Births
1915	35,010	2,012	15,823	12,832	19,187
1916	34,239	1,764	16,489	11,341	17,750
1917	33,035	1,820	14,555	9,506	18,480
1918	31,601	1,844	15,177	9,156	16,424
1919	31,621	1,825	19,370	11,706	12,251

The recorded immigration into and emigration from the State of Victoria by sea were as follow in recent years :—

Year	Immigration (by sea)	Emigration (by sea)	Year	Immigration (by sea)	Emigration (by sea)
1913	114,586	101,718	1917	58,976 <sup>1</sup>	58,774 <sup>1</sup>

Of the immigrants in 1919, 15,851 were females, and of the emigrants 12,894 were females.

Religion.

There is no State Church in Victoria, and no State assistance has been given to religion since 1875. At the date of the census of 1911 76½ per cent. of the population were Protestants, 22½ per cent. were Roman Catholics, and a half per cent. were Jews. The following were the enumerated numbers of each of the principal religions in 1911:—Episcopalians 475,208 (including 'Protestant,' so stated, 24,116); Presbyterians, 284,558; Methodists, 176,662; other Protestants, 98,729; Roman Catholics, 286,483; Jews, 6,270; Buddhists, Confucians, &c., 2,572; others (including unspecified), 40,129.

Instruction.

Educational establishments in Victoria are of four kinds, viz., the University, established under a special Act and opened in 1855, with its four affiliated colleges, State schools (primary and secondary), technical schools or colleges, and registered schools. Out of the general revenue the University received a subsidy amounting to 25,500*l.* for the year ending June 30, 1919. It is both an examining and a teaching body, and grants degrees in all Faculties except Divinity.

Affiliated to the University are four colleges—Trinity, Ormond, Queen's and Newman—in connection with the Church of England, Presbyterian, Methodist and Roman Catholic Churches respectively; also the School of Mines at Ballarat. From the opening of the University to the end of 1919, 9,782 students matriculated, and 6,619 direct degrees were conferred. In 1919 the students who matriculated numbered 636, the direct graduates numbered 204, and there were 1,987 students attending lectures.

Public instruction is strictly secular; it is compulsory for children between the ages of 6 and 14, and free for the subjects comprised in the ordinary course of instruction. In 1918 there were 2,272 State schools with 6,570 teachers, a total enrolment of 240,664 scholars, and an average attendance of 164,350, or 68 per cent. of the numbers on the roll. Amongst persons aged 15 years and upwards at the census of 1911, 98 per cent. were able to read and write. In 1918-19 the total cost of public instruction, including grants to the University, was 1,430,677*l.*—all paid by the State. Secondary education is for the most part under the control either of private persons or proprietary bodies, usually connected with some religious denomination. There were, in 1918, 493 registered schools in Victoria, with 1,903 teachers, and a net enrolment of 56,996 scholars. Of these, 257 schools, 906 teachers and 42,841 pupils were in connection with the Roman Catholic denomination, the members of which do not as a rule avail themselves of the free education afforded by the State.

Under the auspices of the Education Department are 24 technical and 19 junior technical schools, 28 high schools (including agricultural high schools), and 5 schools of domestic arts. In 1918 there were 509 teachers attached to the technical schools, irrespective of agricultural and horticultural colleges, the gross enrolment of pupils being 9,847.

Old Age Pensions, &c.

On July 1, 1909, the Federal Old Age Pensions Act came into operation, and the State pensioners were taken over by the Federal authorities. The number in Victoria on June 30, 1920, was 29,565. Pensions are also granted to invalids, 10,277 being on the register on June 30, 1920. The amount paid in old age and invalid pensions during 1919-20 was 1,348,100*l*.

An Act was passed by the Federal Parliament in October, 1912, providing for the payment, on application, of 5*l*. to the mother of every child born in the Commonwealth, no additional sum to be paid for twins. During the year ended June 30, 1920, the allowance was granted to 32,903 mothers in the State of Victoria.

The number of War Pensions granted in Victoria to June 30, 1920, was 74,226, and the annual liability in respect thereof was 1,932,138*l*.

Justice and Crime.

There is a Supreme Court with a Chief Justice and five puisne judges. There are courts of general and petty sessions, county courts, courts of insolvency, courts of mines, and courts of licensing. The following are the criminal statistics for five years :—

—	1915	1916	1917	1918	1919

The amount raised by taxation (exclusive of taxes collected by Commonwealth) as shown in the above table, viz. 2,744,946*l.*, was equivalent to a proportion of 1*l.* 18*s.* 4*d.* per head of population.

Victoria has a debt, incurred in the construction of public works, which amounted, on June 30, 1919, to 80,678,844*l.* (inclusive of temporary Treasury bills). Of this debt 56,073,427*l.* was borrowed for the construction of railways, 10,650,639*l.* for waterworks, 1,686,787*l.* for State school buildings, &c., and 12,267,791*l.* for other public works and purposes. The nominal rate of interest on the public debt varies from 3 to 5 per cent., and averages 3·86 per cent. At June 30, 1920, the debt was 85,251,926*l.*

The net local ordinary revenue and expenditure (Municipalities, Harbour Trusts, Metropolitan Board of Works, and Fire Brigade Boards) for 1919 were respectively 3,858,794*l.* and 3,872,528*l.* The net local debt (exclusive of amounts borrowed first by Government) amounted to 17,418,990*l.* on June 30, 1919.

The estimated total value of the rateable property of the State in 1919 amounted to about 357,437,822*l.*, and the annual value was 19,027,492*l.*

Production and Industry.

I. AGRICULTURE.

Of the total area of Victoria about 32,887,940 acres at the end of 1919 were either alienated or in process of alienation. Of the remainder about 4,869,922 acres are at present suitable for agriculture; 8,444,361 acres for pastoral purposes; 147,212 acres are held under perpetual lease; State forests, timber, water, and other reserves, 5,560,065 acres; auriferous land, 635,186 acres; roads, 1,751,757 acres; and unsold land in towns, &c., 1,949,317 acres.

The total number of holdings in 1919-20 was 75,840.

The following table shows the areas under the principal crops and the produce of each for four years :—

Years ended March 31	Total Area Cultivated	Wheat		Oats		Barley		Potatoes		Hay
	1,000 Acres	1,000 Acres	1,000 Bushels	1,000 Acres	1,000 Bushels	1,000 Acres	1,000 Bushels	1,000 Acres	1,000 Tons	1,000 Acres	1,000 Tons

1919	11·40	15·38	20·70	19·75	2·66	1·13
1920	7·75	11·80	18·33	17·33	2·71	1·11

In two years the area and yield of vines and of tobacco were :—

	1918-19		1919-20
	Acres	Yield	Acres	Yield
Vines . . .	26,072	1,349,309 gall.	27,554	1,512,000 gall.
Tobacco . . .	167	1,825 cwt.	406	Not available.

In addition to these, green forage covered 89,802 acres, and gardens (both market and private) and orchards occupied an extent of 98,969 acres in 1919-20.

There is a small beet-sugar undertaking in the hands of the government. In the season 1919-20 1,080 acres were harvested and 1,551 tons of sugar extracted.

At the end of March, 1920, there were in the State 513,500 horses, 1,631,120 head of cattle, 14,422,745 sheep, and 186,810 pigs. The wool produced in the season 1913-14 amounted to 106,838,690 lbs., valued at 4,032,954l.; in 1914-15 to 95,406,867 lbs., valued at 3,410,913l.; in 1915-16 to 82,330,198 lbs., valued at 4,066,003l.; in 1916-17 to 94,845,024 lbs., valued at 5,927,814l.; in 1917-18 to 105,424,682 lbs., valued at 6,410,077l., and in 1918-19 to 126,647,061 lbs., valued at 7,621,413l. The quantity of butter produced in 1918 was 66,240,403 lbs.

At the end of 1919 the area of State Forests in Victoria was 4,459,600 acres. The amount of timber sawn in 1918-19 in Victoria Saw Mills from Victorian logs was 91,540,000 super. feet valued at the mill at 503,470l.

The estimated value of Victorian production in 1918-19 was as follows:—

Agricultural Production	16,362,104	Miscellaneous	3,159,366
Pastoral and Dairying	25,796,910

The total quantity of gold raised from 1851 to 1919 is estimated at 70,602,955 oz. (fine), of an aggregate value of 299,901,566*l.* Gold output 1919, 135,427 oz., value 575,260*l.* The estimated number of miners at work on the gold-fields in 1919 was 3,065. About 1,782 persons were employed in coal mining. Total mineral production, 1919, 1,265,000*l.*, compared with 1,342,822*l.* in 1918.

III. MANUFACTURES.

The total number of manufactories, works, &c., in 1918-19, was 5,720, of which 1,657 used steam or gas engines; the aggregate horse-power used was 153,408; the number of hands employed was 122,349; and the lands, buildings, machinery, and plant were valued at 27,318,735*l.* The value of materials used was 52,098,737*l.*, and of articles produced or work done, 80,195,677*l.* The wages paid (excluding working proprietors) amounted to 14,080,403*l.* The manufactures are almost entirely for home consumption.

Commerce and Communications.

The commerce of Victoria, exclusive of inter-State trade, is included in the statement of the commerce of the Commonwealth of Australia.

The total value of the imports and exports of Victoria, excluding inter-State trade, in six years, was :—

Years	Total Imports (Oversea)	Total Exports (Oversea)	Years	Total Imports (Oversea)	Total Exports (Oversea)
	£	£		£	£
1913	24,387,073	17,835,395	1917-18	21,113,588	20,716,688
1915-16	26,761,922	14,748,730	1918-19	35,026,311	28,095,159
1916-17	25,474,839	19,030,146	1919-20	33,788,187	42,900,652

The customs duties collected in 1918-19 amounted to 3,989,736*l.*, equal to 11½ per cent. of the total value of oversea imports.

The chief exports are gold, wool, live-stock, cereals, butter, hides and skins, tallow, and meat frozen or preserved.

All the railways are the property of the State and are under the management of three commissioners appointed by the Government. The following are some railway statistics (for years ending June 30):—

—	1916	1917	1918	1919	1920

Credit.

A branch of the Royal Mint was opened at Melbourne on June 12, 1872. Up to Dec. 31, 1919, 39,000,346 oz. of gold, valued at 152,985,674*l.*, was received at the mint, and gold coin and bullion issued of the value of 152,986,576*l.* The minting of silver coin was commenced in January, 1916, and bronze coin in 1919.

On June 30, 1920, the Savings Bank of Victoria (with which have been amalgamated the Post Office Savings Banks) had 134 banks and branches with 339 agencies at post offices in the State. There were (excluding the Commonwealth Savings Bank) 886,344 depositors, with a total balance of 37,737,274*l.* There is a special branch of the Savings Bank, called the “Advances Department,” which makes advances to farmers and others at 6 per cent. interest, these being repayable by instalments extending over a term not exceeding 31½ years. The requisite funds are raised by the issue of bonds, taken up either by the Commissioners of Savings Banks or by the general public, and repayable by half-yearly drawings. The amount advanced during 1919-20 was 1,200,505*l.*; and the total balance of loans at June 30, 1920, was 5,237,054*l.*

During the December quarter of 1919 there were in Victoria 16 banks, possessing 734 branches and agencies, with notes in circulation, 93,621*l.*, deposits 78,518,187*l.*, the total liabilities being 80,028,961*l.*; gold and silver, coined and in bars, and Australian notes, 16,217,242*l.*; property, 1,436,559*l.*; advances, &c., 53,249,437*l.*; total assets, 70,903,238*l.* Total paid-up capital, 28,155,048*l.*

QUEENSLAND

Constitution and Government.

Queensland, formerly a portion of New South Wales, was formed into a separate colony in 1859, and responsible government was conferred. The power of making laws and imposing taxes is vested in a Parliament of two Houses—the Legislative Council and the Legislative Assembly. The former consists of 61 members, nominated by the Crown for life; but no limit is put to the number. The Legislative Assembly comprises 72 members, returned from 72 electoral districts for three years, elected by ballot. Members of the Assembly are entitled to payment of 300*l.* per annum, with travelling expenses, and an allowance for stationery and postage. At the General Election of October, 1920, there were 465,728 persons registered as qualified to vote under the 'Electors Act Amendment Act of 1914.' This provides for male and female adult franchise, a twelve months' continuous residence in the State being the only proviso.

Governor of Queensland.—Lieut.-Col. Sir Matthew Nathan, G.C.M.G. (1920). (Salary, 3,000*l.*)

Lieutenant-Governor.—Hon. W. Lennon.

The Executive Council of ministers consists (1920) of the following members:—

Premier, Chief Secretary, and Vice-President of the Executive Council.—Hon. E. G. Theodore.

Home Secretary.—Hon. W. McCormack.

Treasurer and Secretary for Public Works.—Hon. J. A. Fihelly.

Secretary for Public Lands.—Hon. J. H. Coyne.

Secretary for Mines.—Hon. A. J. Jones, M.L.C.

Secretary for Railways.—Hon. J. Larcombe.

Secretary for Public Instruction.—Hon. J. Huxham.

Secretary for Agriculture and Stock.—Hon. W. N. Gillies.
Assistant Minister of Justice.—Hon. J. Mullan.

President of Legislative Council.—Hon. W. Lennon.

Each minister has a salary of 1,000*l.*; the Vice-President of the Executive Council receives 800*l.*

Agent-General for Queensland in Great Britain.—J. M. Hunter. Office.—409, Strand. Secretary, P. J. Dillon.

Provision is made for Local Government by the subdivision of the State into areas denominated respectively cities, towns and shires. These are under the management of aldermen and councillors, who are elected by the ratepayers and are charged with the control of all matters of a parochial nature, more especially the construction and maintenance of roads and bridges within their allotted areas. Shires for the most part consist of purely rural districts.

The number and area of these subdivisions, together with the receipts and expenditure for the year 1919, were :—

	No.	Area in square miles	Receipts	Expenditure	Capital Value
Cities . .	11	207·5	568,927	621,100	13,861,829
Towns . .	24	302·5	229,546	239,857	4,286,768
Shires . .	186	669,384	690,476	718,018	46,259,148
Totals . .	171	669,894	1,488,949	1,578,975	63,907,745

Area and Population.

Queensland comprises the whole north-eastern portion of the Australian continent, including the adjacent islands in the Pacific Ocean and in the Gulf of Carpentaria. Estimated area 670,500 English square miles, with a seaboard of 2,250 miles. In 1825 a branch penal settlement was made at Moreton Bay; in 1842 free settlers were admitted to the country, and during the next twenty years great progress was apparent.

The increase in the population at different periods since 1846 has been as follows :—

Years	Population	Equivalent increase per cent. per annum	Years	Population	Equivalent increase per cent. per annum	Years	Population	Equivalent increase per cent. per annum
1846	2,257	—	1868	99,901	15·63	1886	322,853	10·24
1856	18,544	72·16	1871	120,104	6·74	1891	398,718	4·39
1861	30,059	17·06	1876	173,283	8·85	1901	498,129	2·78
1864	61,467	34·83	1881	213,525	4·64	1911	605,813	2·16

Estimated population, exclusive of aborigines, June 30, 1920, 737,085.

At the census of 1911 the population consisted of 329,506 males, and 276,307 females. The total included 6,138 male and 576 female Chinese; 1,865 male and 400 female "Polynesians"; 1,428 male and 75 female Japanese; 4,573 persons of other Asiatic, &c., races. In addition there were 5,145 male and 3,542 female full-blooded Aborigines living in a civilised manner. The total number of aborigines has been estimated at 20,000.

As to occupation the population in 1911 was classified as follows:—Professional class, 17,653; domestics, 26,670; commercial, 34,564; industrial, 68,262; transport and communication, 23,142; agricultural, pastoral, mining, &c., 101,904; indefinite, 4,890; independent, 2,758; dependent class (wives, children, scholars, students, dependent relatives, &c.), 326,070.

Of the total population, 1911, 382,216 persons (exclusive of aborigines) were born in the State; 65,266 in England; 31,599 in Ireland; 20,530 in Scotland; 2,620 in Wales; 38,921 in N. S. Wales; 15,943 in Victoria; 3,848 in S. Australia; 482 in W. Australia; 1,798 in Tasmania; 3,987 other Australians, including 'Australia' undefined; 2,576 in New Zealand; 11,979 in Germany; 2,641 in Denmark; 1,054 in Sweden; 686 in Norway.

The following table shows the births, deaths, and marriages for five years:—

Years	Total Births	Illegitimate	Deaths	Marriages	Excess of Births
1915	20,163	1,090	7,559	6,135	12,604
1916	18,912	■	7,614	5,208	11,398
1917	19,787	967	6,555	4,868	13,232
1918	19,560	1,046	7,158	4,821	12,402
1919	18,699	1,074	8,860	5,431	9,839

The immigration and emigration, including arrivals and departures by sea and by rail across the border, and of Expeditionary Forces, have been as follows:—Immigration, 1916, 130,528; 1917, 123,243; 1918, 110,878; 1919, 79,005. Emigration, 1915, 140,447; 1916, 151,360; 1917, 118,138; 1918, 104,749; 1919, 58,862.

Brisbane, the capital, had in 1919 an estimated population, within a ten mile radius, of 189,676. At the census, 1911, other towns including their suburbs contained: Rockhampton, 20,915; Townsville, 13,836; Maryborough, 11,626; Gympie, 12,419; Ipswich, 25,000; Toowoomba, 24,200; Charters Towers, 17,298.

Religion.

There is no State Church. Previous to 1861 valuable grants of land had been made to the principal religious denominations, which they still retain. The following were the numbers in 1911—Church of England, 212,702; Church of Rome, 137,086; Presbyterian, 75,560; Methodist, 59,920; Lutheran, 24,235; Baptist, 13,715; other Christian sects, 90,556; Jews, 672; other Non Christians, 5,518; no religion, 1,906; unspecified, &c., 21,898.

Instruction.

Primary secular education is free and compulsory. According to the marriage statistics, 99.25 per cent. of persons married during 1919 were able to read and write. The Public Expenditure on account of education for the year 1919 was 1,107,582*l*. During the year there were 1,574 public elementary schools (including 11 high schools) in operation, with 4,194 teachers, and an average daily attendance of 92,569 pupils. Secondary education is provided for by 10 grammar schools, 6 for boys and 4 for girls, with, in 1919, 115 teachers and an average attendance of 1,478 pupils; 11 'High Schools' with 181 teachers and 1,111 scholars. There were besides 156 private schools, with 896 teachers, and an average daily attendance of 18,305 pupils. The Government grants annually a considerable number of scholarships, tenable for three years, to the various grammar schools. There were 15 technical schools in 1919 with 9,864 distinct students. The receipts amounted to 55,662*l.*, and the expenditure to 64,302*l.* The Queensland University (established in 1911) in Brisbane had, at the end of 1919, 4 professors and 25 lecturers, &c., with 268 students on the roll.

Justice and Crime.

Justice is administered by Supreme Courts, District Courts, and Courts of Petty Sessions. In these last Justices of the Peace sit, presided over in the more important centres by stipendiary magistrates. The Supreme Court consists of a Chief Justice and five puisne judges. The total number of persons convicted of serious offences by the Superior Courts in 1919 was 254, and the summary convictions at petty sessions in 1919 numbered 14,321 (excluding 5,452 cases of bail estreated). Including penal establishments, there were, at the end of 1919, 12 prisons, with 320 male and 13 female prisoners. The total police force, including native troopers, averages about 1,216 men.

Pauperism, Old Age Pensions.

Charitable institutions are maintained by public subscription, supplemented by State endowment; hospitals, benevolent asylums, an institution for the blind, deaf, and dumb, refuges and homes helped. Old Age and Invalidity Pensions are now payable by the Commonwealth. The number of Old Age Pensioners in the State at June 30, 1920, was 12,722, and of Invalid Pensioners, 4,624. The number of War Pensioners at the same date was 23,133 (including dependents).

Finance.

The following table shows the net revenue and expenditure of Queensland during five years ending June 30 :—

—	1915-16	1916-17	1917-18	1918-19	1919-20
	£	£	£	£	£
Revenue .	7,706,365	7,880,893	8,491,482	9,415,543	11,293,743
Expenditure .	7,671,573	8,134,387	8,900,934	9,587,532	11,266,910

The gross income from or expenditure on account of Departments under the control of the Commonwealth is not included.

The chief items of expenditure during 1919-20 were as under :—Interest on public debt, 2,665,548*l.* ; public instruction, 1,007,582*l.* ; treasurer's department, 587,850*l.* ; public lands department, 269,281*l.* ; department of agriculture, 97,545*l.* ; cost of working railways, 4,821,726*l.* The tota' expenditure from loans, mostly on public works, was 4,797,866*l.*, of which the principal item was railways, 2,856,498*l.*

The estimated value of landed property in 1919 for assessment for Local Government purposes was 68,907,745*l.* This includes lands leased from the Crown for pastoral purposes, the lessees' interest in which has been capitalised for assessment purposes at 7,662,519*l.*, but is exclusive of unoccupied Crown lands, the property of local bodies, reserves for public purposes, and lands upon which are erected buildings for public worship.

The gross public debt of the State amounted, on June 30, 1920, to 69,680,764*l.*

Defence.

For defence, see under Commonwealth of Australia.

Production and Industry.

Of the total area of the State, 16,893,719 acres (1919) have been alienated : in process of alienation, under deferred payment system, are 9,064,089, leaving 403,162,192 acres still the property of the Crown, or about 93·95 per cent. of the total area. The receipts from the sale of land up to the end of 1919 amounted to 10,092,068*l.* Land is made available for selection in the following modes and classes:— 1) Agricultural Selections—i.e., Perpetual Lease Selections ; (2) Grazing Selections—i.e., Grazing Homesteads and Grazing Farms ; and (3) Perpetual Lease Prickly-pear Selections. The largest area that may be acquired by any one person as a Perpetual Lease Selection is 2,560 acres. The annual rent for the first 15 years of the term is 1½ per cent. of the notified capital value. The greatest area which may be applied for or held as a Grazing Homestead or a Grazing Farm is 60,000 acres. The term may be any number of years not exceeding 28. A Grazing Farm must be continuously occupied during the whole term of the lease by the selectors residing on it personally or by bailiff ; and it must be enclosed with a substantial fence within three years from the issue of the licence to occupy. The area of a Prickly-pear Selection must not exceed 2,560 acres. During the first period of the lease no rent is payable, but the prickly-pear must be regularly eradicated and the land kept clear ; thereafter the rent is 1½ per cent. of the notified capital value.

A large proportion of the area is leased in squatting runs for pastoral purposes, amounting to 211,030,440 acres in 1919, besides 76,437,422 acres in grazing farms and homesteads, and 36,590,960 acres under occupation licence. The live stock in 1919 numbered 731,705 horses, 5,940,433 cattle, 17,379,332 sheep, and 99,593 pigs. The total area under cultivation in 1919 was 988,541 acres, and of this 563,762 acres were under crops, besides which 449,019 acres are laid down with permanent artificial pasture. The wool production, expressed as greasy, in 1914, 155,478,740 lbs. ; in 1915, 130,783,277 lbs. ; and in 1916, 102,220,125 lbs. ; 1917, 87,425,558 lbs. ; 1918, 113,777,272 lbs.

A considerable area consists of natural forest, eucalypti, pine and cedar being the timbers mostly in demand, although a considerable quantity of more ornamental woods are utilised by cabinet makers. The amount of wood cut in the various saw mills in 1919, was (in superficial feet):—pine, 100,690,008 ; cedar, 629,485 ; hardwood, 38,793,800 ; other, mostly cabinet timber, 9,276,057 ; railway sleepers, No. 402,616. Forest reservations total 8,798,000 acres (1919).

The quantity actually cut for all purposes is nearly double these quantities.

The crops, &c., in two years were as follows :—

	Acres		Yield
	1918	1919	1918	1919
Maize . . . . .	149,505	165,260	4,105,974	1,830,664 bushels

In the western portion of the State water is comparatively easily found by sinking artesian bores. Up to June 30, 1919, 3,578 bores were recorded as having been sunk. Total depth bored, 626·28 miles. The continuous yield of water is estimated at 429,708,150 gallons per diem ; 1,218 bores are flowing and from 1,307 more supplies are pumped.

Commerce and Shipping.

The commerce of Queensland, exclusive of inter-State trade, is comprised in the Statement of the Commerce of the Commonwealth of Australia.

The total value of the oversea imports and exports of Queensland in recent years is given in the following table:—

1914-15	6,428,688	13,015,484	1917-18 <sup>2</sup>	4,492,746	10,960,411

SOUTH AUSTRALIA.

Constitution and Government.

South Australia was formed into a British Province by Letters Patent of February, 1836, and a partially elective Legislative Council was established in 1851. The present Constitution bears date October 24, 1856. It vests the legislative power in a Parliament elected by the people. The Parliament consists of a Legislative Council and a House of Assembly. The former is composed of twenty members. Every three years half the members retire, and their places are supplied by new members elected from each of the five districts into which the State is divided for this purpose. The executive has no power to dissolve this body. The qualifications of an elector to the Legislative Council are, to be twenty-one years of age, a natural born or naturalised subject of His Majesty, and have been on the electoral roll six months, besides having a freehold of 50*l.* value, or a leasehold of 20*l.* annual value, or occupying a dwelling-house the rent of which is not less than 17*l.* per annum, or a registered proprietor of a Crown lease with improvements to the value of at least 50*l.*, the property of the elector; head teacher of a college or school residing on premises; postmaster or postmistress residing in the building; railway stationmaster resident in premises; member of police force in charge of a station; officiating minister of religion. By the Constitution Amendment Act, 1899, the franchise was extended to women. There were 91,359 (22,853 women) registered electors in 1919. The qualification for a member of Council is merely that he be thirty years of age, a natural born or naturalised subject, and a resident in the State for three years. Each member of the Council and also of the House of Assembly, receives 200*l.* per annum and a free pass over Government railways.

The House of Assembly consists of 46 members elected for 3 years, representing 19 electoral districts. The qualifications for an elector are that of having been on the electoral roll for 6 months, and of having arrived at 21 years of age; and the qualifications for a member are the same. There were 255,529 (132,632 women) registered electors in 1919. Judges and ministers of religion are ineligible for election as members. The election of members of both houses takes place by ballot.

The executive is vested in a Governor appointed by the Crown and an Executive Council, consisting of 6 responsible ministers and the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court.

Governor of South Australia.—Lieutenant-Colonel Sir W. E. G. A. Weigall, K.C.M.G. (April, 1920).

The Chief Justice (Hon. Sir G. J. R. Murray, K.C.M.G., 2,000*l.*) being also Lieutenant-Governor, acts pending a new appointment, or during the absence of the Governor.

The Governor has a salary of 4,000*l.* per annum. The departments of the Public Service are controlled by the following ministers:—

Premier and Attorney-General.—Hon. H. N. Barwell, LL.B., M.P.

Chief Secretary and Minister of Marine.—Hon. J. G. Bice, M.L.C.

Treasurer and Minister of Education.—Hon. G. Ritchie, M.P.

Commissioner of Public Works, Minister of Railways, and Minister of Industry.—Hon. W. Hague, M.P.

Minister of Agriculture, Minister of Irrigation, and Minister of Mines.—Hon. T. Pascoe, M.L.C.

Commissioner of Crown Lands and Immigration and Minister of Repatriation.—Hon. G. R. Laffer, M.P.

The Ministry has a total salary of 5,000*l.* per annum. They are jointly and individually responsible to the Legislature for all their official acts, as in the United Kingdom.

Agent-General for South Australia in London.—Sir E. Lucas.

The settled part of the State is divided into counties, hundreds, municipalities, and district councils, the last being the most general, as they cover most of the settled districts. The ratepayers have the power of levying rates, &c., and applying the funds for road-making and other purposes. There are 49 counties, blocks of country thrown open for agricultural purposes. There are 3 extensive pastoral districts—the western, northern, and north-eastern. There are 34 municipalities and 149 district councils.

Area and Population.

The original boundaries of the State, according to the statute of 4 & 5 Will. IV. cap. 95, were fixed between 132° and 141° E. long. for the eastern and western boundaries, the 26° of S. lat. for the northern limit, and for the South the Southern Ocean. The boundaries were subsequently extended, under the statute of 24 and 25 Victoria, cap. 44. By Royal Letters Patent, dated July 6, 1863, all the territory lying northward of 26° S. latitude and between the 129th and 138th degrees of East longitude, and now known as the Northern Territory (see below), was added. On January 1, 1911, this Territory was transferred to the Commonwealth. Total area of South Australia proper is 380,070 square miles, i.e., excluding the Northern Territory (528,620 square miles).

Population (exclusive of aborigines) :—

Date of Enumeration	Population			On previous Census
	Males	Females	Total	Numerical Increase	Increase per cent.
1846 . . . .	12,670	9,720	22,390	5,024	28·9
1855 . . . .	43,720	42,101	85,821	22,121	34·7
1866 . . . .	85,334	78,118	163,452	36,622	28·8
1876 . . . .	110,491	103,780	214,271	27,645	14·0
1891 . . . .	166,801	153,630	320,431	40,566	14·5
1901 . . . .	184,422	178,188	362,610	42,173	18·2
1911 . . . .	207,358	201,200	408,558	45,954	12·7

The population of the State, June 30, 1920, was estimated at 472,432.

Population of the city of Adelaide and suburbs, 1919, 256,660.

Of the population in 1911, 255 were Chinese.

The number of aborigines in the State, including the Northern Territory, has been estimated at over 20,000.

The following are the statistics of births, deaths, and marriages for five years :—

—	Births	Marriages	Deaths	Excess of Births
1914	12,905	4,009	4,713	8,192
1916	11,857	3,602	5,077	6,780
1917	11,326	3,252	4,365	6,961
1918	11,357	3,190	4,390	6,967
1919	11,060	3,855	5,475	5,585

South Australia is a healthy country, with a good climate, and has a high birth and low death-rate. Birth-rate, 24·27, death-rate, 12·01, marriage-rate, 8·45 per 1,000 of population in 1919. Infantile mortality, 64·01 per 1,000 births, one of the lowest rates in the world.

Of the total number of births, only 430 were illegitimate in 1919.

Religion.

The aggregate number of churches and chapels in the State in 1919 was 1,621. At the census of 1911 the numbers belonging to the leading denominations were as follows:—Church of England, 113,781; Roman Catholic, 50,964; Methodists, 100,402; Lutherans, 26,681; Baptists, 21,863; Presbyterians, 22,567; Congregationalists, 13,357; Church of Christ, 9,324; Salvation Army, 3,835; other Christians, 23,769; Jews, 765; Mohammedans, 440; Confucians, &c., 226; other non-Christian, 2,148; not stated, 18,441. No aid from the State is given for religious purposes.

Education.

Public instruction (primary, secondary, technical) is under the charge of the Educational Department. Teachers are paid from the general revenue, public lands being set apart for educational purposes. Education is secular, free, and compulsory. The Government grants exhibitions and scholarships, carrying the holders to higher schools and universities. In 1919 there were 945 schools, 38 being high schools, 11 domestic art and 6 woodwork centres ; the number of children under instruction during 1919 was 75,681. There is a training college for teachers. The University of Adelaide incorporated in 1874, is authorised to grant degrees in arts, law, music, medicine, and science. There are several denominational secondary schools. There were 166 private schools, with 13,209 pupils, in 1919. There is a school of mines and industries in Adelaide, with 5 branches in the larger country centres. The Public Library, Museum, Art Gallery, and Local Institutes are supported or assisted by the State.

Justice and Crime.

There is one supreme court, a court of vice-admiralty, 5 courts of insolvency, and over 100 local courts and police magistrates' courts. There are circuit courts held at several places. There were 47 convictions for felonies and misdemeanours in the Higher Courts and 7,527 in the Magistrates' Courts in 1919. The total number of persons in gaols at the end of 1919 was 222.

Old Age Pensions.

Old Age and Invalidity Pensions are now paid by the Commonwealth Government. The number of pensioners in South Australia at March 31, 1920, was: Old Age, 9,616 ; Invalid, 2,166 ; War, 14,959.

For Defence, see under Commonwealth of Australia.

Finance.

Revenue and expenditure for six years :—

Years ended June 30	Revenue	Expenditure	Years ended June 30	Revenue	Expenditure
	£	£		£	£
1914 . .	4,822,766	4,604,129	1918 . .	5,526,226	5,500,419
1916 . .	4,350,967	4,741,877	1919 . .	5,798,814	5,876,807
1917 . .	4,874,603	5,190,453	1920 . .	6,582,788	6,457,039

Most of the revenue is derived from inland revenue, railways, and territorial receipts, while most of the expenditure is on account of public works, railways, and interest on public debt.

The public debt of the State, excluding the Northern Territory, dating from 1852, amounted, on June 30, 1920, to 43,753,146*l*. Over half of the public debt has been spent on railways, water-works, and telegraphs.

Production and Industry.

Of the total area of South Australia proper (243,244,800 acres), 13,862,911 acres were alienated and in process of alienation under systems of deferred payments on June 30, 1920. Altogether about 114 million acres are unoccupied. The freehold and leasehold land in South Australia proper amounts to 130,000,000 acres, of which 5,000,000 acres are under cultivation each year.

Value of production, 1918-19 :—Crops; 11,345,854*l*. (cereals, hay, &c., 9,550,002*l*., orchards, vineyards, and gardens, 1,795,852*l*.); manufactures, 6,955,361*l*.; pastoral, 6,102,379*l*.; minerals, 1,527,288*l*.; dairying and poultry, 1,842,253*l*.; fisheries and game, 376,698*l*.; forestry, 388,511*l*. Grand total, 28,588,344*l*., equal to 64*l*. 1*s*. 3*d*. per head of population.

The chief crops in two years were :—

—	Acres (1918-19)	Acres (1919-20)	Quantities (1918-19)	Quantities (1919-20)
Wheat . .	2,186,349	1,921,515	22,936,925 bushels	14,947,413 bushels

Bread-stuffs exported 1919-20 beyond the Commonwealth, 13,048,869<sup>l</sup>., and pastoral products, 5,619,926<sup>l</sup>.

Fruit culture is extensively carried on, and annually about 100,000 cwt. of dried fruit, 1,250,000 cases of fresh fruit, and 5,000,000 gallons of wine are produced, large quantities of which are exported to oversea countries, chiefly to the United Kingdom. The chief fruit crops, besides grapes, are currants, apples, apricots, peaches, almonds, oranges, lemons, olives, cherries, pears, plums, quinces, strawberries, raspberries. The live stock in June, 1920, consisted of 264,901 horses, 349,562 cattle, 6,014,565 sheep, and 60,295 pigs. In 1920, an area of over 150,000 square miles was held under pastoral leases.

The mineral wealth as yet discovered consists chiefly of copper, silver and gold. The value of copper produced in 1919 was 228,930<sup>l</sup>. (32,000,000<sup>l</sup>. of copper has been produced since the foundation of the State); gold, 13,696<sup>l</sup>.; ironstone flux, 307,402<sup>l</sup>.; limestone flux, 15,994<sup>l</sup>.; phosphate rock, 8,982<sup>l</sup>.; crude salt, 138,348<sup>l</sup>.; gypsum, 18,725<sup>l</sup>.; sulphuric acid, 3,105<sup>l</sup>.; opals, 20,000<sup>l</sup>. Including other minerals, the total value was 771,995<sup>l</sup>. Grand total to date, 37,895,081<sup>l</sup>.

In 1919 there were 1,313 factories in the State, employing 27,915 hands. Wages and salaries amounted to 3,651,715<sup>l</sup>. Gross value of output, 20,901,137<sup>l</sup>.; machinery, land and buildings, &c., valued at 7,224,217<sup>l</sup>.

A new government department, known as the Department of Chemistry, has been established for the purpose of fostering new industries by the utilisation of products at hand and there is also an Advisory Board of Science and Industry.

Commerce and Shipping.

The Commerce of South Australia, exclusive of inter-State trade, is comprised in the statement of the Commerce of Australia given under the heading of the Commonwealth.

Oversea imports and exports :—

Years ended June 30	Imports	Exports	Years ended June 30	Imports	Exports

The chief exports of the State are wool, wheat, wheat-flour, copper and other minerals, meats, butter, honey, wine, fruits (fresh and dried), skins and hides, tallow, leather, and manures.

In 1918-19, 704 vessels of 1,598,887 tons entered, and 691 vessels of 1,575,985 tons cleared the ports of the State.

The State possesses about 44,000 miles of made roads. There are (1920) 3,400 miles of railway in the State, including the Transcontinental Railway which has been built from Port Augusta in South Australia to Kalgoorlie in Western Australia, and which, in connection with various State lines, completes a through rail connection between Brisbane, on the east coast, and Fremantle on the west coast. Of the Transcontinental line, which is of 4ft. 8½in. gauge, 600 miles are within the borders of South Australia.

There are several good harbours, and the river Murray (navigable for 2,000 miles) is used for conveying the produce grown on the irrigation settlements along its banks. In the city and suburbs are 114 miles of electric tramways.

Banks.

There are 9 banking associations in addition to the Commonwealth Government Bank. In 1920 their total liabilities were 28,186,867*l.* (including Perpetual Inscribed Stock), and assets 17,817,783*l.*

The Savings Bank is managed by a board of trustees appointed by the Government, and has 30 branches and 286 agencies. On June 30, 1920, there were 305,705 depositors, with a total balance of 13,800,300*l.* The Commonwealth Savings Bank (not included above) had 40,094 depositors and 1,664,172*l.* deposits at the same date. Penny Savings Banks, agencies at schools, 587, depositors, 31,591, deposits, 32,040*l.*

The total banking deposits, 87,918,058*l.*, averaged 80*l.* per head. Over 79 per cent. of the population have savings bank accounts.

WESTERN AUSTRALIA.

Constitution and Government.

In 1791 Vancouver, in the Discovery, took formal possession of the country about King George Sound. In 1826 the Government of New South Wales sent 20 convicts and a detachment of soldiers to King George Sound and formed a settlement then called Fredericks Town. In 1827 Captain James (afterwards Sir James) Stirling surveyed the coast from King George Sound to the Swan River, and in May, 1829, Captain Fremantle (afterwards Sir Charles Fremantle, G.C.B.) took possession of the territory. In June, 1829, Captain Stirling founded the Swan River Settlement, now the Commonwealth State of Western Australia, and the towns of Perth and Fremantle, and was appointed Lieutenant-Governor. Western Australia thus became a British settlement in 1829.

Large grants of land were made to the early settlers, and agricultural and pastoral occupations were pursued by a small population with varying success, until, in 1850, the State was in a languishing condition, and the inhabitants' petition that it might be made a penal settlement was acceded to. Between 1850 and 1868, when transportation ceased, 9,718 convicts were sent out. The Imperial convict establishment was transferred to the Colonial Government on March 31, 1886.

In 1870 partially representative government was instituted, and in 1890 the administration was vested in the Governor, a Legislative Council, and a Legislative Assembly. The Legislative Council was, in the first instance, nominated by the Governor, but it was provided that in the event of the population of the Colony reaching 60,000, it should be elective. In 1893 this limit of population being reached, as set forth in a proclamation dated July 18, of that year, the Colonial Parliament passed an Act (57 Vict. No. 14) amending the constitution.

By the Constitution Acts Amendment Act, 1899, further amended by the Constitution Acts Amendment Act, 1911, it is provided that the Legislative Council shall consist of 30 members representing 10 electoral provinces and holding their seats for six years. Members must be 30 years of age, resident in the State for two years, and either be natural-born British subjects or naturalized for 5 years and resident in the State for 5 years. Every elector must have resided in the State for 6 months, and must possess within the province freehold estate of the clear value of £50, or be a householder occupying a dwelling-house of the clear annual value of £17, or holder of a lease of the value of £17 per annum, or the holder of a lease or licence from the Crown of the annual rental of £10, or have his name on the electoral list of a Municipality or Roads Board in respect of property in the province of the annual rateable value of £17. The Legislative Assembly consists of 50 members, each representing one electorate, and elected for 3 years. Members must be 21 years of age, have resided in Western Australia for twelve months, and be either natural-born subjects of the Crown or naturalized for 5 years. Electors must be 21 years of age, natural-born or naturalized subjects of the Crown, and must have resided in the State for 6 months and be on the roll, and must be resident in the district for at least one month when making their claims. Members of and electors for both Houses may be of either sex. No person can be registered as a voter in more than one district or more than once in each Province for which he holds a sufficient qualification. Members of the Legislature are paid 400*l.* a year, and travel free on all Government railways. The entire manager and control of the waste lands of the Crown in Western Australia is vested in the Legislature of the State. By the Parliament (Qualification of Women) Act, 1920, it has been enacted that a woman shall not be disqualified by sex or marriage for being elected to or sitting and voting as a member of the Legislative Council or the Legislative Assembly.

State of political parties (1920):—Legislative Council, Independent, 17, Primary Producer Nationalists, 4; National Labour, 4, Labour 5. Legislative Assembly, Nationalists, 16, Primary Producer Nationalists, 13, National Labour, 6, Labour, 14, Independent Labour, 1.

Governor.—Rt. Hon. Sir F. A. N. Newdegate, K.C.M.G. (April, 1920).

The salary provided for the Governor is 4,000*l.* per annum. He is assisted in his functions by a cabinet of responsible ministers, as follows:—

Premier, Treasurer, and Minister for Lands and Repatriation.—Hon. Jas. Mitchell, C.M.G., M.L.A.

Minister for Education, Public Health and the North-West.—Hon. H. P. Colebatch, M.L.C.

Area and Population.

As defined by Royal Commission, Western Australia includes all that portion of the continent situated to the westward of 129° E. longitude, together with the adjacent islands. The greatest length of this territory from Cape Londonderry in the north to Peak Head (south of King George Sound) in the south is 1,480 miles, and its breadth from Steep Point near Dirk Hartogs Island, on the west to the 129th meridian, on the east, about 1,000 miles. According to the latest computations, the total estimated area of the State is 975,920 English square miles, or, 624,588,800 acres. It is divided into 31 magisterial districts.

Western Australia was first settled in 1829, and for many years the population was small.

The enumerated population in the various census years was as follows:—

Years	Males	Females	Total
1848	2,818	1,804	4,622
1854	7,779	3,964	11,743
1859	9,522	5,315	14,837
1870	15,375	9,410	24,785
1881	17,062	12,646	29,708
1891	29,807	19,975	49,782
1901	112,875	71,249	184,124
1911	161,565	120,549	282,114

There were enumerated in 1911, 6,369 pure and 1,475 half-caste aborigines (the former not included in the table) in the settled districts and virtually in the employment of the settlers. The number of wild natives is not known, but the total number of aborigines has been roughly estimated at about 30,000.

As in all countries where the white man has settled among races that cannot in a large measure adapt themselves to his forms of civilisation, the natives, in so far as they existed in the present centres of settlement, are fast dying out, a natural consequence of the loss of their original hunting-grounds. They are of quick intelligence, but disinclined for the civilised modes of life. The Government has taken the best measures available for their protection.

Of the total population in 1911, 104,208 were returned as born in Western Australia. The number of married persons was 96,482 (50,702 males and 45,780 females); widowers, 4,180; widows, 5,785; divorced, 187 males and 103 females; unmarried, 106,060 males and 68,807 females. The number of males under 21 was 58,838, and of females 56,203. Of the males over 21, 47,323 had never been married, and of the females over 21, 13,609. The estimated population on September 30, 1914 (excluding full-blooded aboriginals) was: males, 182,682; females, 143,522; total, 326,204; on January 31, 1917, the figures were: males, 158,598; females, 148,608; total, 307,206. The decrease since 1914 was due to enlistments for the war. The total enlistments during the war numbered 34,353, of whom 20,768 had returned on September 30, 1919. The population on September 30, 1920, was estimated to be: males, 179,393; females, 156,665; total, 336,058.

Perth, the capital, at the time of the 1911 census, had a population, within the 10-mile radius area of the Metropolitan district, of 106,792. The estimate as on December 31, 1919, was 142,000. This, however, includes the chief port of the State, Fremantle, with its suburbs, the population of which, at the census, was 20,847. The other principal municipalities, with census population of 1911, are:—

Towns	1911	Towns	1911
Kalgoorlie . . .	8,781	Bunbury . . .	3,763
Boulder . . .	10,824	Geraldton . . .	3,478
Albany . . .	3,586	Northam . . .	3,361

The movement of population for the State in 5 years is given as follows:—

Years	Marriages	Births	Deaths	Immigrants	Emigrants
1914	2,660	9,204	3,043	27,270	31,097
1916	2,365	8,563	3,085	19,322	34,010
1917	1,621	7,882	2,769	17,822	22,318
1918	1,612	7,106	2,833	24,262	24,511
1919	2,194	6,937	3,590	32,561	17,695

In 1914 there were 388, in 1916, 321, in 1917, 327, in 1918, 287, and in 1919, 292 illegitimate births.

Religion.

The religious division of the population was as follows at the census of 1911:—Church of England, 109,435; Methodists, 34,348; Presbyterians, 26,678; Congregationalists, 6,208; Baptists, 4,801; other Protestants, 18,189; Roman Catholics, 56,616; Catholics (Greek and undefined), 5,754; other Christians, 1,736; Jews, 1,790; Mahometans, 1,617; Buddhists, 1,795; other non-Christians, 748; indefinite, 1,555; no religion, 1,260; not stated, 9,689.

Instruction.

Of the total white population of 15 years and upwards in 1911, 1·07 per cent. were stated to be unable to read. Education is compulsory and free.

The following table shows the average cost per head and attendance in Government schools and in private schools in three years:—

—	No. of Schools	No. of Scholars	Av. Attendance	Cost per Head of av. Attendance
Government Schools				£	s.	d.
1917	646	47,654	41,034	6	6	4½
1918	667	48,431	42,839	6	7	2½
1919	680	47,314	41,012	6	12	7½
Private Schools
1917	123	11,484	10,027		—
1918	127	11,619	10,822		—
1919	124	11,939	10,322		—

Education is free throughout from the kindergarten to the University and comprises ample provision also for secondary education, technical schools, continuation classes, scholarships, etc. During the financial year ended June 30, 1920, the total sum spent on education and schools, including a grant of 13,500*l.* to the University of Perth, was 427,830*l.*

Justice and Crime.

The following table gives the number of offences, apprehensions, and convictions for five years:—

—	1914	1916	1917	1918	1919
Apprehended or summoned . . .	17,879	15,454	11,885	11,599	9,789
Summary convictions . . .	15,849	13,595	10,535	10,162	8,702
Convictions in superior courts .	84	91	55	55	64

The total number of distinct persons committed to prison in 1919 was 825; the number of commitments totalled 1,540—viz.: adult males, 1,273, adult females, 267.

All the above figures are exclusive of aboriginal crime.

Pauperism and Old Age Pensions.

There are two charitable institutions, one situated at Claremont, and one at Fremantle, both supported by public funds, with 677 inmates on December 31, 1919. Twenty-four Government hospitals, also a Government sanatorium for consumptive patients, at Wooroloo, and two hospitals for the insane, are wholly supported by public funds, as is also a depôt for diseased natives at Port Hedland, whilst three public and twenty-eight other assisted hospitals exist, partly supported by private subscriptions and partly out of public funds, in addition to the numerous private hospitals situated in Perth and suburbs as well as the principal goldfield towns; five Protestant and three Roman Catholic orphanage industrial schools are partly supported by private subscriptions and partly out of public money. There are also nine native and half-caste institutions, six Industrial Schools supported in a similar manner, two Government native settlements at Carrolup and Moore River, and a third at Moola Bulla utilised as a cattle station, and one Government receiving dépôt for State children who are afterwards sent to the various Institutions. On June 30, 1920, a total of 806 adults and 1,877 children, total, 2,683 persons in the State received monetary assistance from the public funds for widows and others.

Old Age and Invalidity Pensions are now paid by the Commonwealth Government. The number of pensioners in Western Australia at June 30, 1920, was :—old age, 4,791 ; invalid, 1,788 ; war pensioners 22,311.

Finance.

The revenue and expenditure of Western Australia in seven years, ended June 30, are given as follows :—

Years ended June 30	Revenue	Expenditure	Years ended June 30	Revenue	Expenditure
	£	£		£	£
1914 (pre-war)	5,205,843	5,340,754	1919 . .	4,944,850	5,596,865
1916 . .	5,356,978	5,705,201	1920 . .	5,863,501	6,581,725
1917 . .	4,577,007	5,276,764	1921 <sup>1</sup> . .	6,606,404	7,006,111

More than two-fifths of the public income is derived from railways and tramways (2,463,135*l.* for the year ended June 30, 1920), and the rest mainly from various forms of taxation (844,197*l.* in 1919–20), lands, timber, and mining (408,800*l.*), water supply (336,456*l.*), other business and trading concerns (557,951*l.*), and the surplus returned to the State of the Commonwealth Revenue derived from Customs, Excise, Post Office, other receipts and interest on transferred properties (598,273*l.* for 1919–20). Western Australia had a net public debt of 39,990,825*l.* on June 30, 1920, the annual charge for which was 2,062,035*l.* The amount of accrued sinking fund on March 31, 1920, was 6,831,178*l.*

For Defence, see under Commonwealth of Australia.

Production and Industry.

Large portions of the State, for some hundreds of miles inland, are hilly, and even mountainous, although the altitude, so far as ascertained, rises nowhere above that of Mount Bruce (4,024 ft.) in the North West Division, or the Stirling Range (3,640 ft.) in the South West. The greater part of the far interior may be described as a great tableland, with an altitude of from one to two thousand feet above sea-level, the surface of which consists over large areas of sand-dunes, varied by wide stretches of clayey soils. Long, straggling rivers, broken during the summer into a series of pools, cross the country as far inland as the hills extend, widening in many cases nearer the coast into large sea estuaries. The climate is one of the most temperate in the world, especially in the South-Western portion, where excessive cold is never, and excessive heat very rarely known. The summer heat, which is mostly dry, with hardly any rainfall, is during the greater part of the hot season relieved by cool sea breezes in the afternoon. The winters are rainy, but with occasional dry spells of perfect weather.

Of the area of Western Australia, which is equal to more than half that of European Russia, probably about three-fourths is suitable for pastoral purposes. Some 60,000 square miles, at least, are equally fitted for agricultural purposes, more especially for the production of wheat, wine, and fruit, considerable areas being already under cultivation. The forests are among the most extensive within the Commonwealth, and contain some of the very finest hardwoods in the world, including jarrah (Eucalyptus marginata) and karri (Eucalyptus diversicolor). Sandalwood (Santalum cygnorum) is also found. The forests are rich in gums and resins, and barks containing tannin. Gold, coal, and other minerals in abundance are found in many parts.

In Western Australia, in 1911, there were 53,587 persons engaged in various forms of primary production. Of these, 21,566 were directly engaged in agriculture; 4,200 in pastoral pursuits; 5,868 in forestry, and 18,199 in mining and quarrying. There were, on December 31, 1919, a total of 922 industrial establishments in the State, employing either machinery or at least four hands. The total number of persons employed by them was 16,358, as against 18,799 in 1914, the highest number previously reached. The combined output of these establishments in 1919 was computed at 10,286,732*l*. The total estimated value of Western Australian production during 1919 was 22,396,694*l*., distributed as follows:—agricultural, 9,066,281*l*.; pastoral, 4,614,546*l*.; dairy, poultry, and bee-farming, 843,719*l*.; forestry and fisheries, 1,363,972*l*.; mining, 3,561,204*l*.; manufacturing, 2,946,972*l*. (value added to the raw material by the production of the industrial establishments).

Up to June 30, 1920, of the entire acreage of the State, 8,763,051 acres had been alienated; on that date 14,259,769 acres were in process of alienation; the area alienated and in process of alienation thus amounting to 23,022,820 acres. At the same date there were in force leases comprising an area of 257,610,300 acres, of which 253,436,312 acres were pastoral, and 1,622,068 acres were timber, while 61,535 acres were under mining leases, and 36,181 acres were Miners' Homestead leases. The area under crop in 1917 was 2,004,944 acres, in 1918, 1,679,772, in 1919, 1,605,088 acres, and in 1920, 1,628,746 acres. The chief crops for two recent years were as follows:—

Crops	1918-19	1919-20	1918-19	1919-20
	Acres	Acres	Bushels	Bushels
Wheat . . .	1,146,103	1,041,827	8,845,387	11,222,950

			Gallons Wine	Gallons Wine
Vines . . .	2,936 1	2,959 1	199,142	162,397

The area under wheat in 1920-21 is forecasted at 1,459,268 acres (for grain and hay).

The principal areas occupied by the more important trees of Western Australia, and the quantity cut in two years, according to the official Industrial Returns, were as follows :—

	Acres.	1918 Super. ft. cut.	1919 Super. ft. cut.
Jarrah (with blackbutt and red gum)	8,000,000	75,564,284	112,162,248

Total ... ..	20,400,000. <sup>2</sup>	94,989,530	131,476,741

The live stock at the end of 1919 consisted of 174,919 horses; 880,644 cattle; 6,697,951 sheep; 58,160 pigs; 31,986 goats; 6,137 camels; and 6,888 mules and donkeys. The wool export was, during the year 1916-17, valued at 1,420,291*l.*, during 1917-18 at 535,819*l.*, during 1918-19 at 1,952,141*l.*, and during 1919-20 at 3,937,106*l.*, these values representing respectively, 24,405,283 lbs., 10,632,022 lbs., 29,644,556 lbs. and 59,600,535 lbs., of wool. The wool-clip for the above four years respectively was: 31,334,638 lbs., 38,294,093 lbs., 43,404,670 lbs. and 39,214,336 lbs. This does not include wool exported on skins, which, during 1919, amounted to 7,085,045 lbs.

Many millions of acres are available for pastoral purposes.

Gold was first obtained in Western Australia in 1886. The sensational gold finds at Coolgardie and Kalgoorlie in 1892 and 1893 gave an impetus to Western Australian gold mining, which, in a few years' time, placed this State at the head of all the Australian Colonies as regards gold output. The aggregate output to the end of 1919, was 33,130,549 fine ozs., valued at 140,729,627*l.* There were in the State, in 1919, 819 leases of gold mines; men employed in the mines, 7,021, viz., 3,080 above and 3,941 underground; output of gold, 734,066 fine ozs., value 3,118,113*l.*

The total mineral wealth of the State for two years is shown in the following table :—

Commerce and Communications.

The external commerce of Western Australia, exclusive of inter-State trade, is comprised in the statement of the commerce of Australia, given under the heading of the Commonwealth.

The total value of the imports and exports, including inter-State trade, in 6 years is shown in the subjoined statement:—

June	1914-15	1915-16	1916-17	1917-18	1918-19	1919
	£	£	£	£	£	£
Imports	8,301,280	8,983,000	9,385,010	7,649,233	7,977,450	12,368,331
Exports	5,352,140	8,040,484	14,683,027	5,807,335	10,922,675	15,258,301

By far the most important of the exports are gold and gold specie, others being timber (465,734*l.* in 1919-20), wool (3,937,106*l.*), pearls, and shell (431,825*l.*), hides and skins (623,029*l.*), silver (49,289*l.*); sandalwood. (240,579*l.*), wheat (2,541,698*l.*), flour (2,526,602*l.*), fruit (150,087*l.*), and other local products.

There were on the West Australian register on December 31, 1919, 58 steamers of 16,753 tons, and 363 sailing vessels of 12,066 tons; total, 421 vessels of 28,819 tons. Tonnage inwards and outwards, 1919-20, from and to ports outside the State, 5,331,703.

For the year ending June 30, 1920, the State had 3,539 miles of State Government railway, and 450 miles of Commonwealth line, the latter being the western portion of the Trans-Australian line (Kalgoorlie-Port Augusta), which links the State Railway System to those of the other States of the Commonwealth.

Money and Credit.

There are seven banks in Western Australia, besides the State Government Savings Bank and the Commonwealth Bank of Australia and Savings Bank. The total paid-up capital of the cheque paying banks (including the Commonwealth Bank) in the quarter ended June 30, 1920, was 14,819,809*l.*; the notes in circulation (1920) were 26,498*l.*; deposits, 12,502,477*l.*; total average liabilities, 12,972,185*l.*; total assets, 16,205,577*l.*

State Government Savings Bank.—The amount due to depositors on June 30, 1920, inclusive of interest, was 5,739,029*l.*, whilst in addition an amount of 45,510*l.* was due under the head 'Schools Savings Bank.'

Branches of the Commonwealth Savings Bank were opened in this State at the beginning of 1913. On June 30, 1920, 1,473,301*l.* stood to the credit of 46,153 depositors.

TASMANIA.

Constitution and Government.

Abel Jans Tasman discovered Van Diemen's Land (Tasmania) on November 24, 1642. The island became a British settlement in 1803 as a dependency of New South Wales; in 1825 its connection with New South Wales was terminated; in 1851 a partially elective Legislative Council was established, and in 1856 responsible government came into operation. On January 1, 1901, Tasmania was federated with the other Australian States into the Commonwealth of Australia.

Parliament consists of a Legislative Council and a House of Assembly. The Council has 18 members, elected on a property qualification of 10*l.* a year freehold or 30*l.* a year leasehold. Certain professional men and all 'returned soldiers' are also electors. Members sit for 6 years, and retire in rotation. There is no power to dissolve the Council. The House of Assembly has 30 members, elected for 3 years by adults with six months' residence in the State. Members of both Houses are paid 300*l.* a year. Women received the right to vote in 1903. Proportional representation was adopted in 1907, after a partial trial in 1896. The method is the single transferable vote in 6-member constituencies. By-elections are superseded (from 1919) by a recount of the votes at the preceding General Election.

State of parties, June, 1920 : Nationalists, 16 ; Labour 13 ; Independent, 1.

Governor.—Rt. Hon. Sir W. L. Allardyce, K.C.M.G. (April 1920). (Salary, 2,750*l.*)

Chief Justice.—Hon. Sir H. Nicholls, Kt.

The Governor is aided in the exercise of the executive by a Cabinet of responsible ministers, as follows (came into office in April, 1916):—

Premier, Chief Secretary and Minister for Education.—Hon. Sir W. H. Lee, Kt., M.H.A.

Attorney General and Minister for Railways.—Hon. W. B. Propsting, C.M.G., M.L.C.

Minister for Works.—Hon. J. B. Hayes, C.M.G., M.H.A.

Minister for Lands.—Hon. A. Hean, C.M.G., M.H.A.

Treasurer and Minister for Mines.—Hon. Sir Neil E. Lewis, K.C.M.G., M.H.A.

Honorary Ministers.—Hon. H. Hays, M.H.A., and Hon. T. Shields, M.H.A.

Each of the ministers has a salary of 950*l.* per annum. The Premier has 200*l.* a year. A minister must have a seat in one of the two Houses.

Agent-General in London.—A. H. Ashbolt.

Secretary.—Herbert W. Ely.

Offices.—Australia House, Strand, W.C. 2.

Area and Population.

Area, with Macquarie (170 square miles), 26,215 square miles or about 16,778,000 acres, of which 15,571,500 acres form the area of Tasmania Proper, the rest constituting that of a number of small islands, in two main groups, the north-east and north-west.

The population has increased as follows (census returns):—

Year	Population	Increase per Ct. per Annum	Year	Population	Increase per Ct. per Annum
1861	89,977	2·44	1891	146,667	2·36
1871	99,328	1·13	1901	172,475	1·64
1881	115,705	1·38	1911	191,211	1·04

In 1911 there were 97,591 males and 93,620 females. The average density is 7·38 persons to a square mile. Of the total population in 1911, 79·2 per cent. were natives of Tasmania, 11·5 per cent. natives of the United Kingdom, and 7·3 per cent. natives of other Australasian colonies. There were 676 Chinese and other coloured aliens, and 227 half-caste aborigines. The pure aboriginal is extinct.

Estimated population, June 30, 1920, 216,643.

The population shows the usual Australian excess of males, fairly steady before the war, vanishing during the war, and since recovered, by June 1920, to an excess of four males in every 100 of population.

The births, deaths, and marriages for five years were as follows:—

—	Births	Marriages	Deaths	Excess of Births
1914	6,017	1,543	1,918	4,099
1916	5,642	1,483	2,056	3,586
1917	5,376	1,138	1,768	3,608
1918	5,280	1,131	1,802	3,478
1919	5,310	1,513	2,192	3,118

For the decade 1910-19, the birth-rate was 28·4, the death-rate 10·1, and the rate of natural increase of population 18·3 per 1,000, the highest in the Commonwealth. For the last 3 years, 1917-19, the infant mortality averaged 59 per 1,000 births, and the general index of mortality was 12·3, which was easily the lowest in the Commonwealth. Tasmania, with a high natural increase and small area, has been a source of population for the mainland States since the days when Tasmania founded Melbourne and colonized Victoria. For the decade, the average loss by migration has been about 1,300 per annum, or 6·7 per 1,000, leaving a net annual rate of increase of population of 11·6 per 1,000.

Population of the capital, Hobart and Suburbs (census 3rd April, 1911), 38,391, of Launceston and Suburbs, 23,726. The estimated population of Hobart and suburbs at June, 1920, was 50,000.

Religion.

In 1911, belonging to the Church of England 88,158; Roman Catholics 28,581; Catholics (undefined), 4,080; Methodists, 24,975; Presbyterians, 15,735; Independents, 6,000; Baptists, 4,757.

Instruction.

Primary education is free and secular, and compulsory between the ages of 7 and 14. Nine-tenths of the primary teaching is at State schools. The average monthly enrolment at all schools is about 88 per cent. of the total children of 'compulsory' age, and the average attendance is 81 per cent. of the enrolment. The cost of primary education to the State in 1919 was 5*l.* 10*s.* per head of average attendance, exclusive of buildings, which cost annually about 15*s.* per head. Secondary education is about equally divided between the new State High Schools and the older endowed schools. The 4 State High Schools in 1919 had an average attendance of 967, at a cost of 9*l.* per head, exclusive of buildings.

There are 4 Technical Schools, and 4 junior Technical Schools, with a total enrolment of 1,471. A large Trade School in Hobart for repatriation purposes provides courses for 14 trades, and others are being organised. The total number of returned soldiers being trained in this way is 806.

The University of Tasmania, established 1890, confers degrees in arts, science, law and commerce. A complete engineering course with degree comes into operation in 1921. There were in 1920, 221 students taking courses for degrees. University expenditure in 1920 (exclusive of capital expenditure) was about 12,000*l.* In 1920, 11 Tutorial Classes were provided by the University at different centres for the Workers' Educational Association, mostly in economics and history. Total average attendance 253. Medical inspection of children in primary schools (State and private) has been carried out since 1906. Dental treatment was commenced in 1916. The total cost in 1920 was 1*s.* 10*d.* per child on the roll.

Justice and Crime.

There are a Supreme Court, courts of petty, general, and quarter sessions, the latter presided over by a stipendiary magistrate, assisted by justices of the peace. According to the Police Report, during the year 1919-20, 4,842 persons were summarily convicted, and 68 persons were committed for trial. The figures for crime generally are higher than during the war, but show no appreciable increase over 1914 either for all offences, indictable offences, or offences against the person. There is, however, a noticeable increase under the head of assaulting and resisting the police.

The total police force on June 30, 1920, was 239. There were 2 gaols, with 69 male and 3 female inmates at the end of June, 1918.

Old Age Pensions.

Old Age and Invalidity Pensions are paid by the Commonwealth Government. The number of pensioners in Tasmania at March 31, 1920, was : Old age, 5,012 ; Invalid, 1,971 ; War (June, 1919), 7,783.

Revenue and Expenditure.

The revenue is derived chiefly from duties, licences, railways, and other public services, and from the rental and sale of Crown lands. The customs, postal and telegraph, and defence services are now in the hands of the Commonwealth, and an amount equal to 25s. per head of population is returned to the State.

—	1913-14	1916-17	1917-18	1918-19	1919-20
	£	£	£	£	£
Revenue . .	1,238,085	1,369,368	1,503,047	1,581,984	1,815,031
Expenditure .	1,235,514	1,412,893	1,459,748	1,644,512	1,828,301

The public debt of Tasmania amounted June 30, 1920, to 17,003,447l., of which 33 per cent. has been spent on railways, 6 per cent. on hydro-electric works, and 30 per cent. on roads and bridges. The railways earned 2·2 per cent. on their capital, which bears an average interest of 3½ per cent. State taxation amounts to 2l. 16s. 7d. per head, of which income tax provides 26s., land tax 8s. 2d., death duties 4s. 8d., lottery and totalisator taxation 7s. 8d. Land and income taxes and death duties are also collected by the Commonwealth, averaging 3l. 17s. 3d. per head, and customs and excise of 4l. 2s. 3d. per head. The Commonwealth contribution to the State revenue represents about 40 per cent. of the customs and excise collected on account of the State.

Defence.

For defence, see under Commonwealth of Australia.

Production and Industry.

The total area of the colony is 16,778,000 acres, including 1,206,500 acres islands and lakes. Unalienated land, principally heavily timbered or mineral-bearing, amounts to about 8,500,000 acres.
Total production in 1919-20 :—

	Value	Value per head
Agricultural and pastoral . . . . .	5,509,066	25·4
Mining . . . . .	1,301,090	6·0
Manufacturing (output less raw material)	2,653,417	12·2
	9,463,573	43·6

Agricultural production and yield per acre :—

	1919-20			1919-20
	Crop	Yield per Acre		Crop	Yield per Acre
Wheat, bushels.	218,589	18·6	Potatoes, tons .	66,225	2·8
Oats, „ .	1,242,258	25·8	Hay „ .	143,053	1·4
Pease, „ .	300,545	13·4	Fruit, bushels .	2,866,813	9·4

Wheat-growing has declined to insignificance. The production of oats, pease, potatoes and hay is steady, with seasonal variations. Fruit-growing (chiefly apples) is increasing. The last four seasons have been poor. The prospects for 1920-21 are very good. Live-stock in 1920 : Horses, 39,452 ; cattle, 214,442 ; sheep, 1,781,425 ; pigs, 35,530. The numbers of all live-stock remain steady. There is a temporary shortage of pigs. The wool-clip, 11 million pounds in 1919-20, is a little above the average.

Forests cover a considerable part of the island. The mills cut 56,800,000 s. feet of timber in 1919. The export of logs is not recorded. The present demand for timber is causing a boom in saw-milling. Value of mineral production in 1919 :—Copper, 504,961*l.* ; tin, 395,794*l.* ; silver-lead, 189,967*l.* ; zinc, 75,001*l.* ; tungsten, 69,794*l.* ; coal, 47,004*l.* ; osmiridium, 89,614*l.* ; gold, 32,650*l.* The total mineral production has averaged 1,500,000*l.* for the last 20 years, increased prices balancing decreased quantities. Copper, tin and coal remain fairly steady in total value, but gold has fallen away greatly. Osmiridium is growing in importance, and silver-lead mining gives promise of revival. Tungsten ores (wolfram and scheelite) fell greatly in price in 1920, and production is decreasing.

MANUFACTURES.—The two important manufactures for export are metal extraction and fruit-preserving. Others that have an output beyond local requirements are woollen mills and breweries. The carbide works at North-West Bay are expected to supply the needs of all Australia. The chief recent industrial development has been the provision, by a State department, of cheap hydro-electric power for manufacturing purposes. The Great Lake scheme is designed to supply 70,000 h.p. At present 18,000 h.p. are being generated, and an extension to 42,000 h.p. under construction. The total power so far surveyed for practicable schemes is 216,000 h.p. Power in large blocks has been sold as low as 2*l.* per h.p. per annum. Important applications of this power are to metal extraction and manufacture of carbide of calcium. The Electrolytic Zinc Works at Risdon, with an output of 15 tons per day, are being enlarged to a capacity of 100 tons per day. This plant will treat the complex ores of the West Coast, as well as the Broken Hill ore, on which it is now operating.

Commerce, Shipping, &c.

The commerce of Tasmania, exclusive of inter-State trade, is comprised in the statement of the commerce of Australia, given under the heading of the Commonwealth. Imports and exports :—

—	1913	1915-16	1916-17	1917-18 <sup>1</sup>	1918-19
	£	£	£	£	£
Total imports . . . .	1,025,081	982,849	1,161,576	489,249	608,786
Total exports . . . .	522,865	618,101	900,161	951,556	1,002,093

The Commonwealth alone collects statistics relating to imports and exports, which are restricted to trade external to Australia. No information is available as to inter-State or to indirect foreign trade.

The exports are chiefly wool, gold, silver, tin, timber, fruit and jam, hops, grain, hides and skins, bark.

The registered shipping in 1918 consisted of 90 sailing vessels of 3,586 tons, and 102 steamers of 12,459 tons ; total, 192 vessels of 16,045 tons. For shipping, railways, posts and telegraphs, see under Commonwealth of Australia.

Savings Banks.

The number of depositors in Savings Banks, including the Commonwealth Savings Bank, at March 31, 1919, was 98,100, and the amount on deposit 3,152,435l.

THE NORTHERN TERRITORY OF AUSTRALIA.

Government.

The Northern Territory, after forming part of New South Wales, was annexed by Royal Letters Patent, dated July 6, 1863, to South Australia. On the establishment of Federation in 1901, the Territory entered the Commonwealth as a corporate part of the State of South Australia. The Commonwealth Constitution Act of 1900 made provision for the surrender to the Commonwealth of any territory by any State, and under this provision an agreement was entered into on December 7, 1907, by the Commonwealth and South Australia for the transfer of the Northern Territory to the former. After the necessary legislation approving this agreement had been passed by the two parliaments concerned, the Territory formally passed under the control of the Commonwealth Government on January 1, 1911. The Commonwealth at the same time assumed responsibility for the State loans contracted by South Australia on behalf of the territory ; it took over by purchase the railway from Port Augusta to Oodnadatta ; and it undertook to construct a transcontinental railway from Pine Creek southwards to the boundary of South Australia, and to connect these two railways. On June 30, 1919, the public debt was 3,470,461l.

A local Advisory Council has been established, consisting of trade union representatives and Government officials, the latter predominating. It is proposed to give the territory representation in the Federal Parliament.

Administrator.—F. C. Urquhart.

Area and Population.

The Northern Territory is bounded by the 26th parallel of south latitude, and the 129th and 138th degrees of east longitude. Its area is 523,620 square miles. The area alienated at the end of 1916 amounted to 744 square miles absolutely; 166,143 were held under leases and licences; and the remainder, 356,733 square miles, was unoccupied. The coast line is about 1,040 miles in length. The Territory possesses many fine rivers and several good harbours, the principal harbour being Port Darwin, where Darwin is situated. The greater part of the interior consists of a tableland rising gradually from the coast to a height of about 1,700 feet. On this tableland there are large areas of excellent pasturage. The southern part of the territory is generally sandy with a small rainfall, but it can be watered by means of artesian bores. The climate is tropical, but varies considerably over the whole Territory. The proximity of the sea in the north keeps it fairly equable in the coastal region, but further south the climate is of a continental type, showing a great variation between the hottest and coldest months.

Population.—The population, excluding aborigines, has varied as follows:—

Year	Europeans	Others	Totals
1881	670	2,781	3,451
1891	1,144	3,754	4,898
1901	1,055	3,756	4,811
1911 (Census)	1,418	1,892	3,310
1916 (31st Dec.)	3,839	928	4,767
1919 (31st Dec.)	—	—	4,706

Of the 1911 Census total 576 were females. At the end of 1914 there were 1,033 Chinese, 77 Japanese, 86 Malays and Filipinos, and 72 of other races, including half-castes. In June 1918, Asiatics in the Territory numbered 1,177. The aborigines are estimated to number about 20,000, but it is possible this is an under-estimate.

The tribes inhabiting the Northern Territory are Larakaya and Worgait at Port Darwin, Melville Island Tribe, Port Essington Tribe, Djanan Tribe at Katherine Creek, Yangman Tribe round Elsey Creek, Mungarai Tribe along the upper part of the Roper River, Nullakun Tribe middle part of the Roper River, and the Mara Tribe south of the Roper River.

Finance.

The revenue and expenditure for 6 years were as follows:—

Year	Revenue	Expenditure <sup>1</sup>	Year	Revenue	Expenditure <sup>1</sup>
	£	£		£	£
1913-14	73,657	532,535	1916-17	102,980	805,865
1914-15	83,066	474,927	1917-18	101,483	535,456

The chief sources of revenue for the year ending June 30, 1919, were the Customs and Excise, 7,210£.; Railways, 45,725£.; and Postal revenue, 10,323£. The chief items of expenditure (excluding interest, loans, &c.) were as follows:—Buildings, roads, bridges, farms, &c., 20,971£.; interest and sinking fund, Port Augusta Railway, 85,748£.; railways, 39,080£.; salaries and contingencies, 182,579£. The Commonwealth is also liable for interest on loans and redemption, in respect of Northern Territory and the Port Augusta Railway. The deficiency for the year was 357,760£.

Production and Industry.

The soils of the Territory differ greatly, but it is stated that most products known to the tropical and temperate zones can be grown successfully. At present, however, agriculture is insignificant. In most parts the natural grasses are extremely rich in nutriment, and provide food for cattle, horses, sheep, and other stock. The numbers of stock at the end of 1918 were :— Cattle, 570,039 ; horses, 31,486 ; sheep, 58,620 ; pigs, 1,200.

The Territory is rich in mineral resources, though these are very little developed. The aggregate value of the minerals produced to June 30, 1919, and in the year 1918-19, was as follows :—

—	Total to June 30, 1919	1918-19	—	Total to June 30, 1919	1918-19
	£	£		£	£
Gold . .	2,262,687	3,521	Silver & lead	62,216	182
Copper . .	230,930	2,349	Other Metals	179,221	34,961
Tin . .	484,786	30,021
			Total .	3,219,840	70,984

Commerce.

The oversea imports and exports are given as follows :—

Year	Imports	Exports	Year	Imports	Exports
	£	£		£	£
1913	20,977	67,911	1916-17	82,775	18,251

TERRITORIES OF THE AUSTRALIAN COMMONWEALTH.

TERRITORY OF PAPUA (BRITISH NEW GUINEA).

This possession is the south-eastern part of the island of New Guinea, with the islands of the D'Entrecasteaux and Louisiade groups and all islands between 8° and 12° S. latitude, and 141° and 155° E. longitude. Area 90,540 square miles, of which about 87,786 are on the mainland of New Guinea, and 2,754 on the islands above mentioned. On June 30, 1919, the population was as follows:—European, 971; coloured (other than Papuan), 316; Papuans (estimated), 250,000. (For the part of New Guinea lately possessed by Germany and now administered by Australia, see next section.)

The government of British New Guinea is founded on the British New Guinea Act of November, 1887, and on Letters Patent issued June 8, 1888. The cost of the administration to the extent of 15,000*l.* a year was formerly contributed in equal proportions by New South Wales, Victoria, and Queensland. The Federal Government took over the control in 1901; the political transfer was completed by the Papua Act of the Federal Parliament in November, 1905, and on September 1, 1906, a proclamation was issued by the Governor-General of Australia declaring that British New Guinea was to be known henceforth as the Territory of Papua. There is an executive council composed of 6 official members, and a legislative council composed of the executive councillors and three non-official members nominated by the Governor-General of Australia.

Lieut. Governor and Chief Judicial Officer—J. H. P. Murray, C.M.G.
Government Secretary.—Herbert William Champion.

Tribes have in large areas settled down to peaceful habits. Four missionary bodies are at work; many hundreds of natives are being taught by these bodies. Approximately 218,950 acres of land have been leased, principally by planters, the principal cultures being coconuts (43,560 acres at June 30, 1919), rubber (8,598 acres), sisal hemp (5,824 acres). On June 30, 1919, there were 58,513 acres of plantations. By the Papua Act, 1905, freehold alienation is prohibited, but leases may be obtained at low rentals for long terms. Indigenous sago is plentiful in the western portion of the Territory, and there are considerable numbers of native-owned coconut trees. The forests contain valuable timbers, in most cases easily accessible by river. A regulation, which is strictly enforced, requires that each native shall plant a certain number of coconut trees or other economic trees or plants if his land is suitable.

There are four ports of entry—Port Moresby, Samarai, Daru, and Misima.

There are 8 magisterial districts, each in charge of a resident magistrate. There are also 2 relieving and 16 assistant resident magistrates, and 13 patrol officers. There is a Central Court at Port Moresby, but it holds sittings wherever and whenever necessary. For native government some simple regulations have been passed. There were (1920) 840 village policemen; armed constabulary, 331 (exclusive of Europeans who are officers of armed constabulary).

Throughout the Territory there are numerous schools belonging to the various Christian missions; the attendance of native children at these schools is compulsory if English is taught. The Native Taxes Ordinance came into force on January 15, 1919, imposing a tax not exceeding 10*s.* per head on indentured native labourers, and not exceeding 20*s.* per head on other natives. After expenses of collection are paid the balance is to be devoted firstly, to native education, and secondly, to other purposes having for their object the direct benefit of the natives. The education will be chiefly undertaken by the missions aided by grants from the taxation fund.

Revenue is mainly from customs duties. An annual subsidy is given by the Australian Government (30,000*l.* in 1919–20). In addition, 27,500*l.* has been loaned to the Territory for the establishment of Government plantations, to be repaid from profits on the plantations. On June 30, 1919, the Government plantations covered 1,701 acres. Commonwealth grants are also made for various purposes. It is hoped that Papua will soon be self-supporting.

There are 8 proclaimed mineral fields in the Territory, seven of which are gold fields, and 1 copper. Gold mining is one of the most important industries, and claims the attention of about 108 adult Europeans. Gold is obtained in the Louisiade Islands, on the mainland, and on Woodlark Island. A large area near Port Moresby with promising copper deposits has been proclaimed a mineral field, and this is being vigorously developed by a strong company, which is now (1920) building a railway from the field to the coast where smelters are to be erected. Electric power from the Rouna Falls is also to be developed. Copper ore exports in 1916–17, 1,323 tons, valued at 14,050*l.*; in 1917–18, 1,112 tons valued at 11,572*l.*; in 1918–19, 224 tons valued at 1,613*l.* In 1919–20 no copper ore was exported. In 1916–17 the gold output was valued at 37,987*l.*; 1917–18, 32,931*l.*; 1918–19, 21,550*l.*; 1919–20, 21,747*l.* Indications of petroleum have been found over an area of 1,000 sq. miles, and boring by the Anglo-Persian Oil Company is now (1920) proceeding on behalf of the Australian Government. The trade is principally with Queensland and New South Wales. The chief imports are food-stuffs, tobacco, drapery and hardware; exports, copra (1918–19, 2,598 tons, 53,264*l.*; 1919–20, 4,079 tons, 124,007*l.*); sisal hemp (1918–19, 287 tons, 12,532*l.*; 1919–20, 337 tons, 12,284*l.*); pearl shell, gold, pearls, mangrove bark, copper ore, timber, rubber (1918–19, 207 tons, 33,010*l.*; 1919–20, 242 tons, 41,542*l.*). Number of horses (1918), 338; cattle, 1,331; mules, 65.

Large steamers trade between Sydney and Port Moresby every three weeks, and small coastal steamers run at frequent regular intervals between the various inter-territorial ports. Oil launches and numerous cutters are also employed on the local trade. Ocean-going shipping entered and cleared 1919–20, 59,189 tons. There are wireless telegraph stations at Port Moresby, Samarai, and Misima.

There is a branch of the Bank of New South Wales. Commonwealth Government notes are legal tender. The currency and its legal tender are the same as in the United Kingdom and Australia.

NEW GUINEA.

(LATE GERMAN NEW GUINEA.)

German New Guinea was the name given to all those territories held by Germany in the Western Pacific which were governed from Rabaul, the capital of these possessions. It included : Kaiser Wilhelm's Land (acquired in 1884), Bismarck Archipelago (acquired in 1884), The German Solomon Islands, Nauru, the Caroline Islands, the Marshall Islands, and the Marianne or Ladrone Islands (excepting the Island of Guam). The Possessions were territories protected by the German Imperial Authorities (Schutzgebiete). There were no local legislators, and the Governor appointed by the Imperial Crown was all powerful. These Possessions were occupied by an Australian Force on September 12, 1914. The islands north of the Equator, namely, the Marshall, Caroline, Pelew, and Ladrone (Marianne) Islands are to be administered by Japan as mandatory. Those south of the Equator, namely, the Bismarck Archipelago, those of the Solomon Islands, formerly owned by Germany, and (late) German New Guinea, are assigned to Australia. (German Samoa is assigned to New Zealand.) The mandate from the League of Nations is dated December 17, 1920. The laws of the Commonwealth, subject to local modifications as necessary, may be applied to the mandated territories. The military training of the natives, except for local police or defence purposes, is prohibited, and no naval or military base or any fortifications may be established.

Nauru, a small islet just south of the Equator, is assigned to the British Empire as mandatory (see p. 439).

German New Guinea was divided into seven districts, each controlled by a District Officer, with certain judicial powers, as follows : Rabaul District, comprising New Britain and adjacent islands ; Morobe, Madang, and Kitape on the mainland of Kaiser Wilhelm's Land ; Kieta, which includes the German Solomons ; Manus, which includes the Admiralty Islands and the archipelagos adjacent, and Kaewiang district comprising a portion of New Ireland, &c. The Headquarters of the Administration were at Rabaul.

The laws of Prussia were the basic laws, and were supplemented by ordinance emanating from the Emperor, Chancellor, and the Governor of the Protectorate. German New Guinea had a financial status of its own under a special law of 1892, and was no part of the Zollverein.

Judicially, there was no appeal from the local tribunal to the Supreme Court of the Empire, but the German Emperor could be appealed to by virtue of the protective right of the Emperor over the Possessions.

Administrator late German New Guinea possessions south of Equator and Officer Commanding Naval and Military Expeditionary Force.—General E. A. Wiedem.

1. New Guinea—Kaiser Wilhelm's Land, the northern section of south-east New Guinea, was declared a German protectorate in 1884. It lies between 2° 30' and 8° south latitude, and 141° and 148° east longitude. The area, including Vulcan, Dampier, Long, Schouten, Le Maire, and some smaller islands, is 70,000 square miles. The native population has been variously estimated at from 110,000 to 530,000, but so little is known of the interior that any figures are very conjectural. The coastal districts have a native population of two to the square mile. The territory was under the control and development of the New Guinea Company from 1885 to 1899. The first settlement was formed at Finschhafen, which is situated close to the south-eastern border, adjacent to British territory. Out-stations were formed at Konstantine and Hatsfeldt harbours. The principal station on the mainland is at Frederick Wilhelm's Haven, now called Madang. The coastline is very little broken, and there are few good harbours. From the 141st to 144th meridian there are no harbours, and the only anchorages are open roadsteads under the lee of islands. There are high ranges running parallel with the coast plain, which is from 60 to 100 miles wide. The ranges in the interior have been little explored, and some of their summits are known to exceed 12,000 feet. The principal rivers are the Kaiserin Augusta, or Sepik, which is navigable for over 250 miles. It rises in the Dutch territory and flows easterly. The Ramu, or Otilis, rises in the south-east, and flows into the sea about 20 miles east of the mouth of the Sepik. The Markham is another large river, which flows into Astrolabe Bay. The climate is hot and the rainfall large. The European population in 1914 was 300—chiefly German. There are three missionary societies at work in Kaiser Wilhelm's Land: the Neusendeteleaur Mission (Lutheran), the Rheinische Mission (Lutheran Calvinistic), the Catholic Mission of the Holy Ghost Society. These missions are also planters and traders. The chief harbours are: Frederick Wilhelm's Haven (now Madang), Finsch Haven, Erima Haven, and Adolph Haven (now Morobe). Frederick Wilhelm's Haven and Erima Haven are in Astrolabe Bay. Inter-island trade is carried on by small steamships and motor-schooners. There is a two-monthly overseas service from Madang.

The area of cultivation in 1914 was 16,300 acres, which showed a decrease on the previous two years. The greater part of this area is planted with coconuts (about 14,000 acres). Rubber and coconuts are also grown. Tropical fruits grow very abundantly. The staple articles of food of the natives are yams, taro, sago, and bananas. There is very little land used for pasture in Kaiser Wilhelm's Land. The land is rich in mineral wealth, but no minerals are worked on account of the difficulty of transporting mining machinery. Native labour is used to work the plantations, and the natives are recruited either from the adjacent villages or from other parts of the Possessions. There are upwards of 8,000 native labourers so recruited for plantation purposes.

The chief towns are: Madang (white population, 243), Morobe (white population, 40), Eitape (white population, 50).

2. Bismarck Archipelago.—In November, 1884, a German Protectorate was declared over the New Britain Archipelago and several adjacent groups of islands, and in May, 1885, they were renamed the Bismarck Archipelago. The chief islands are Neu Pommern, formerly, and now, called New Britain, area 10,000 square miles; New Mecklenburg, formerly, and now called New Ireland, area 4,600 square miles; Neu Hannover, 530 square miles; Neu Lauenburg or Duke of York Islands, area 22 square miles; the Admiralty Islands (principal island, Manus), area 600 square miles. The Archipelago lies between 141 degrees and 154 degrees east longitude, and the Equator and 8 degrees south latitude. The other groups included in this Archipelago are St. Matthew Islands, Gardner Islands, Abgaris or Fead Islands, Nissan or Sir Charles Hardy Islands, The French Islands, Rook Islands, Hermit Islands, Ninigo Group, Anchorite and Commerson Islands. In these various groups there are upwards of 100 small islands. The total native population of the Archipelago has been put as high as 188,000.

New Britain, the largest island of this group, is a long island running in a crescent shape lying east and west. It has a mean breadth of 50 miles and a length of 300 miles. Except for the peninsula in the north, which is called Gazelle Peninsula, the island is practically undeveloped, and there are only a few isolated stations on the coast west of Henry Reid Bay. The interior of the island is little known. The native population numbers about 50,000. The European population in 1914 was 600, chiefly Germans. There are 1,200 Chinese and a few Japanese. All populations are exclusive of the occupying force. A mountain chain traverses the entire length of the island, and in the centre consists of several irregular ranges. There are several active volcanoes, and the range shows signs of great volcanic activity in the past. The highest known peak is the Father, about 7,500 feet high, which is an active volcano. This island has very fine harbours; the best is that of Simpson Harbour in Blanche Bay, which affords a good harbour in all weathers. Rabaul Bay and Matupi Harbour are small harbours in Simpson Harbour. Other good harbours are, Jacquinot Bay, Rugen Haven, Arawel, Lindenhafen, and Powell Haven. The only harbour visited by oversea shipping is Simpson Harbour. The principal settlement is around the shores of Blanche Bay. Coconuts are mostly grown. There are two missionary societies at work in this island: the Wesleyan with headquarters near Rabaul, and the Catholic Mission of the Sacred Heart, with headquarters at Herbertshoehe. The chief towns are, Rabaul (population 800), which since 1910 is the seat of Government. The old capital was at Herbertshoehe, now called by its native name Kokopo, which is situated 14 miles south-east of Rabaul. At Rabaul there is an anchorage for all ships and a fine jetty has been built. Rabaul is well laid out and has a fine public garden.

New Ireland, the second in size and importance of the Bismarck Archipelago, is situated north of New Britain, from which it is separated by St. George's Channel. The chief town is Kaewieng (European population, 100), at the north-west extremity of the island. The only other town is Namatanai (European population, 40), on the south-east coast. The island has a long range of mountains running through it. It is of older formation than New Britain, and does not show any signs of recent volcanic activity. The principal harbour is Nusa, on the north coast of which Kaewieng, the seat of the local administration, is situated. The interior of the island is not very well known. The native population is about 28,000. The soil is fertile and the climate similar to that of New Britain. The chief industry is coconut growing. There are numerous plantations around the coast near Kaewieng. Total population of the island, 200 Europeans, chiefly German.

The Admiralty Islands are the most important of the small groups. The chief island is Tauï or Manus, sometimes called Great Admiralty Island. The chief town is Lorengau (European population, 50) on the north-east coast. The native population of the group is 4,000. Coconuts are the chief article of culture, and there are valuable pearl and other shell fisheries.

3. Solomon Islands.—Germany owned part of this group, including the islands of Bougainville (area 3,500 square miles, native population 15,000) and Buka (area 300 square miles, native population 2,000), but Choiseul, Isabel or Mahaga, and various smaller islands to the east of Bougainville were transferred to Great Britain November 14, 1899. These islands are very mountainous. Of the several volcanic cones, Bagano is the only active volcano. The highest mountain is the dormant volcano, Mount Balbi, 10,170 ft. high, which is situated in the centre of the island. Both peaks are in the Crown Prince range. The principal harbour is Kieta, situated on the east coast of Bougainville, where there is a Government station. Other good harbours are: Rawa and Tinputz on the north-east coast of Bougainville. There is a good harbour on the west side of Buka, named Carola Hafen. Missionary work amongst the natives is carried on by the Marist Brothers of the Roman Catholic Mission. As the plantations are only new there is comparatively little export trade. The natives grow bananas, coconuts, taro, and sweet potatoes. They are skilful fishermen. The European population is 60, chiefly males.

NEW ZEALAND.

Government and Constitution.

By Order in Council of September 9, 1907, and by Proclamation, the designation of the Colony of New Zealand was changed to the Dominion of New Zealand (officially established as a Colony in 1840), on and from September 26, 1907. The present form of government was established by Statute 15 & 16 Vict., cap. 72, passed in 1852. The Colony was divided into six provinces, afterwards increased to ten, but later reduced to nine. By a subsequent Act of the Colonial Legislature, 39 Vict., No. xxi., passed in 1875, the provincial system of government was abolished, and the powers previously exercised by superintendents and provincial officer were ordered to be exercised by the Governor (Governor-General from June 1917), or by local boards. The legislative power is vested in the Governor-General and a 'General Assembly' consisting of two Chambers—a Legislative Council and a House of Representatives. The Governor-General has the power of assenting to or withholding consent from bills, or he may reserve them for His Majesty's pleasure. He summons, prorogues, and dissolves the Parliament. He can send drafts of bills to either House for consideration, but in case of appropriations of public money must first recommend the House of Representatives to make provision accordingly before any appropriations can become law. He can return bills for amendment to either House.

The Legislative Council consists (October, 1920) of forty-three members, who are paid at the rate of 350*l.* per annum. Those appointed since September 17, 1891, hold their seats for seven years only, unless reappointed. One life-member was appointed before that date. Provision has been made for the Legislative Council to be made elective at a date to be fixed by Proclamation. Twenty-four members are to be elected at the first election and 40 at subsequent elections. Three Maori members may be appointed by the Governor-General. Present sitting members hold office till the end of the term of their appointment.

The House of Representatives consists of eighty members, including four Maoris, elected by the people for three years. They are paid at the rate of 500*l.* per annum. Every man registered as an elector is eligible as a member of the House of Representatives. Women are also eligible. For European representation every adult person (of either sex), if resident one year in the Dominion and one month in an electoral district, can be registered an elector for such Electoral District. No person may be registered on more than one electoral roll. Every adult Maori resident in any of the four Maori electoral districts can vote, provided he (or she) be not registered on any European roll. Registration is not required in Native districts.

The result of the general election of December, 1919, was: Reform Party, 48; Liberal Party, 18; Labour Party, 10; Independent Party, 4. The Government holds 50 seats, and the opposition parties, 30 seats. The number of votes cast, excluding the Maoris, was 517,000.

Governor-General and Commander-in-Chief.—His Excellency Viscount Jellicoe of Scapa, G.C.B., O.M., G.C.V.O. Salary of 5,000*l.*, and 2,500*l.* allowances additional,

The Cabinet (October, 1920) is as follows:—

Prime Minister, Minister of Finance, Railways, Mines, Stamp Duties, Land and Income Tax, State Advances, Electoral and Imperial Government Supplies.—Rt. Hon. W. F. Massey, P.C.

Minister of Native Affairs, Labour, Customs and Marine, Pensions, Inspection of Machinery, and National Provident Fund.—Hon. G. J. Anderson.

Attorney-General, Commissioner of State Forests, Minister in Charge of Valuation Department, and Leader of Legislative Council.—Hon. Sir Francis Bell, K.C.M.G., K.C.

Member of Executive Council without Portfolio.—Hon. Sir W. Fraser, Kt. Bach.

Minister of Lands, Lands for Settlement, Discharged Soldiers' Settlement, Scenery Preservation and Repatriation.—Hon. D. H. Guthrie.

Minister of Defence, and War Pensions.—Hon. Sir R. H. Rhodes, K.B.E.

Member of Executive Council representing Native Race, Minister in Charge of Cook Islands.—Hon. Dr. M. Pomare, C.M.G.

Each member has a salary of 1,300*l.*, with the exception of the Prime Minister, who has 2,600*l.*, and Minister representing Native Race, 1,100*l.*, with House Allowance of 200*l.* if no Government residence is provided.

Department of the High Commissioner in London:—

High Commissioner.—The Hon. Sir James Allen, K.C.B., 415, Strand, W.C. 2.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

For purposes of local government New Zealand is divided into counties and boroughs. The counties are subdivided into ridings. County councils are empowered to constitute road districts on petition being made. Besides the road districts, which are very numerous, there are town, drainage, electric supply districts, and water supply districts and river, tramway, and harbour boards.

The ratepayers in the road districts of a county are qualified as electors for the purposes of the county council, and the members of each road board are elected by the ratepayers of the district.

Area and Population.

There are two principal islands, the North and South Islands, besides Stewart Island, and small outlying islands, including (since 1901), the Cook and some other islands in the Pacific Ocean. The group is 1,000 miles long, and 180 miles across at the broadest part; coast line 3,000 miles. New Zealand is about 1,200 miles east of Australia. Area, excluding islands annexed in 1901, 103,581 square miles. North Island, 44,130 square miles, South Island 58,120, Stewart Island 662 square miles. #### Instruction.

In 1916, 95·0 per cent. of the population over 5 years of age (excluding Maoris) were recorded at the census as able to read and write, 0·8 per cent. as able to read only, and 4·2 per cent. as unable to read,

The University of New Zealand is solely an examining body, with an annual grant of 4,000*l*. The number of graduates admitted after examination was, in 1919, 2,473. There are four affiliated colleges—the Otago University at Dunedin, with 52 professors and lecturers; the Canterbury College at Christchurch, with 31 professors and lecturers; the Auckland University College, with 24 professors and lecturers; and the Victoria University College at Wellington, with 23 professors and lecturers; students attending lectures in the four affiliated colleges, (1918) 2,140. They are all endowed with lands. The Canterbury Agricultural College is a recognised school of agriculture.

At the end of 1919 there were 34 incorporated or endowed secondary schools, with 881 (excluding 74 part-time) teachers and 9,068 pupils (excluding 686 in lower departments). Of the total income more than half is from endowments and Government payments. There are also 60 District High Schools with 105 (excluding 60 part-time), teachers and 2,159 scholars. Children receiving secondary instruction at Technical High Schools (eight) numbered 2,926 at the end of 1919. Of private secondary schools there were 21 registered with 1,497 pupils. Ten secondary schools for Maoris had 434 pupils.

For primary schools there is an Education Department (which also exercises certain functions in regard to both university and secondary schools). There are 9 Local Education Boards. At the end of 1919 there were 2,400 public primary schools, 6,062 teachers (including 436 probationers), 196,059 scholars on the rolls; average attendance (1919), 174,885. Education is compulsory between the ages of 7 and 14. The instruction given at the public schools is secular only, and for the ordinary standard course entirely free. Where there are no schools classes may be formed in the public school for extra subjects, for which special subsidies are given.

The Education Department's functions include: (a), maintenance, etc., of destitute children; (b), care of epidemic orphans; (c), training of uncontrollable and delinquent children; (d), supervision of adopted children; (e), education, etc., of all afflicted children (deaf, blind, and feeble-minded). There are 7 schools of mines; 4 normal schools; 5 central schools of art; 13 industrial schools, with 3,593 (1919) children or young persons; a school for the deaf; an institute for the blind (at Auckland); special schools for mentally backward boys in Otago and Nelson; and a similar school for girls at Richmond, Nelson. There were also at the end of 1918 320 private schools, with 1,146 teachers and 26,237 pupils.

There were 119 Native village schools, with 239 teachers and 5,190 scholars. Total net expenditure by the State on Native schools in 1919–20 was 59,166*l*. Total expenditure out of public funds in 1919–20 upon education of all kinds 2,624,000*l*.

Justice and Crime.

There are nine supreme court judges, and thirty-three stipendiary magistrates. There are numerous magistrates' courts and justices of the peace.

At the end of 1919 the gaols contained 920 prisoners.

Pauperism.

The Dominion is divided into districts, with elective boards for the administration of the public hospitals and charitable relief. The Government subsidises bequests at the rate of 10s. in the pound ; voluntary contributions, 24s. in the pound ; and contributions by local authorities, according to a sliding scale, ranging from 12s. 3d. in the pound to 24s. 3d. in the pound, according to the value of rateable property within the district. The total expenditure on Charitable Aid during the year ended March 31, 1919, was 136,177*l.* During 1919 the benevolent and orphan asylums accommodated 5,554 inmates, 3,252 children (1,934 boys and 1,318 girls) were wholly or partly maintained by the State in industrial schools and other institutions in 1917.

Old Age and Widows' Pensions.

In 1898 an Act, amended in 1905 and consolidated and amended in 1913, provided for old-age pensions. Every person, not an alien or an Asiatic, who fulfils certain conditions is entitled to a pension of 26*l.* a year. The joint annual income of a married couple in receipt of pensions must not exceed 100*l.* (including pensions). An Act of 1917 increases the rates of pensions payable during the period of the war and twelve months after. Pensions are also granted to widows, to miners incapacitated as a result of miners' phthisis, and to veterans of the Maori war. In addition are those pensions granted in respect of the recent war.

Defence.

In 1909 New Zealand passed a Defence Act, amended 1910, which provided for the gradual military training of every male New Zealander between the ages of 12 and 25, with further service in the Reserve up to age of 30. Under this Act a boy serves from 12 to 14 as a junior cadet, from 14 to 18 as a senior cadet, from 18 to 25 he becomes a soldier in the Territorial Force, and from 25 to 30 he serves in the Reserve. Before the war senior cadets did 50 drills and a musketry course annually. The soldier in the Territorial Force did 30 drills, 6 whole-day parades, and 7 days continuous annual training. The pre-war strength of the Territorial Force was about 30,000.

During the war New Zealand raised 124,211 men ; of this number 91,941 were recruited voluntarily, the remainder under a compulsory system introduced in 1916. 100,444 men were sent overseas to serve in New Zealand units and 3,370 are known to have joined British or Australian units. In addition Samoa was occupied and garrisoned by the Dominion. Quotas were contributed by the South Sea Islanders, and the Maoris maintained a battalion. The total casualties were 16,688 killed, and 41,315 wounded ; total, 58,003. The demobilisation and reorganisation of the Dominion forces was not completed at the end of 1919, but the post-war forces will be organised on the basis which existed before the war—that is to say, in cadet units and a Territorial Force. The Territorial Force is organised in the military districts, each of which furnishes an infantry brigade, with a proportion of the other arms and services.

During the war two schools of instruction were formed at Auckland for the Dominion Air Force, and at the time of the Armistice 142 cadets were in training. Three hundred New Zealand officers served in the British flying services during the war, and the Dominion presented 6 aeroplanes to the Empire and lent two.

Down to March 31, 1920, the war expenditure reached 76,953,076*l*.

The Naval Defence Act, 1920, provided for the establishment of a New Zealand Naval Force, to be raised and maintained by voluntary enlistment only, enlistment being for a prescribed period not less than two years. In time of war the Naval Force (including vessels acquired for defence purposes) is at the disposal of the British Government. The Naval force consists of training ship Philomel and cruiser Chatham which was recently presented by the Imperial Government. The establishment of a New Zealand Royal Naval Reserve is also provided for under the Act.

Production and Industry.

AGRICULTURE.

Two-thirds of the surface of New Zealand are suitable for agriculture and grazing. About 17,000,000 acres are still under forest. The total area under crop (including 15,831,604 acres in sown grasses and 68,619 in fallow) in 1919 was 17,440,511 acres. The area of Crown lands surveyed and open for selection on March 31, 1919, was 704,178 acres.

The largest freehold estates are held in the South Island. The extent of occupied holdings of or over one acre in 1919 (exclusive of holdings within borough boundaries) was as follows :—

Sizes of Holdings		Number of Holdings	Acres	Sizes of Holdings		Number of Holdings	Acres

1920	61,500,000	—	—	46,440,000

The value of imports is taken as the fair market value in the country exporting same, plus a uniform charge of ten per cent. for freight, &c. For exports the 'free-on-board in New Zealand' value is given; but, as regards the main items, the Collector of Customs examines carefully the amounts stated and compares them with current price lists, to prevent any over-estimate. Beginning with 1914 the country of origin of imports is obtained, as well as country of shipment. The country of shipment is obtained in cases of exports, but this may or may not be the country of ultimate destination. Very little cargo in transitu passes through New Zealand.

The principal imports and exports in 1919 are given as follows :—

Attached to New Zealand are the following islands :

Auckland Islands, 50° 31' S., 166° 19' E., 200 miles S. of Stewart Island. Area of largest about 330 square miles. Uninhabited. The New Zealand Government maintains a depôt of provisions and clothing for the use of shipwrecked mariners on the largest island of the group.

Chatham Islands, 43° 50' S., 177° W., 536 miles E. of New Zealand. Area 375 square miles; population (October, 1916) 477 (219 Europeans and 258 Maoris and Morioris).

The Cook and other South Pacific Islands were annexed to New Zealand in June, 1901. They lie between 8° and 23° S. lat., 157° and 170° W. long. The names of the islands with their populations (1916) are as follows:—

	Population		Population

Niue (Savage Is.) . . . . .	3,880	Total . . . . .	12,797
Palmerston Is. . . . .	90

Total area of the Cook and other islands about 280 square miles.

Rarotonga is 20 miles in circumference; Vatu, or Atiu, 20 miles; Aitutaki, 21 miles; Niue (or Savage Island), 40 miles. Laws for the Cook Islands have been made since 1890 by a general Legislature, and are administered by an Executive Council, of which the Arikis, or native chiefs, are members. At Rarotonga and Niue there are British Residents, whose approval is required for all enactments. The customs tariff of New Zealand is enforced. In 1915 an Act was passed by the New Zealand Parliament consolidating the laws relating to the Islands, and providing for the appointment of a member of the Executive Council of New Zealand as Minister of the Cook Islands. The Minister is charged with the administration of the Islands. The Act provides for the constitution of Island Councils, lower and higher Courts of Justice, and native land court, as well as for the establishment of public schools, &c. In 1919 the numbers of births, marriages, and deaths were respectively 487, 232, and 361. ## TERRITORY OF WESTERN SAMOA.

The former German Samoan Islands, now the Territory of Western Samoa, include Savaii and Upolu, the largest of the Samoan or Navigators' Islands. Samoa is a group of islands in the Western Pacific, lying in 13½ deg. to 14 deg. S. lat., and 168 deg. to 173 deg. W. long. The islands are some 130 miles N. of Tonga and between 400 and 500 miles N. E. of Fiji. The group consists of nine islands, in addition to rocks and islets. They are all, with the exception of Rose Island, of volcanic formation, and are, for the most part, surrounded with coral reefs. The four largest islands are Savaii, Upolu, Tutuila and Manua. By the Anglo-German Agreement of November 14, 1899, ratified by the United States in January, 1900, Great Britain renounced all rights over the islands in favour of Germany as regards Savaii, Upolu, Apolima and Manono, and in favour of the United States as regards Tutuila and other islands. Under the German Imperial Governor there was a native High Chief with a native council, the several districts being administered by chiefs. Justice was administered by native as well as European judges and magistrates.

On August 29, 1914, the British occupied German Samoa. By the Treaty of Peace, 1919, Germany surrendered her possessions abroad, and Samoa is assigned under a mandate from the League of Nations to His Majesty the King in right of his Dominion of New Zealand, which has been empowered to govern Western Samoa. The mandate is dated December 17, 1920, and under that authority the Governor-General of New Zealand in Council has made laws for Western Samoa. The military training of the natives, except for local police or defence purposes, is prohibited, and no naval or military base or any fortifications may be established.

Provision has been made for a nominated Legislative Council, consisting of not less than four official members, and unofficial members not exceeding in number the official members. The Administrator is entitled to preside over every meeting of the Council. No person is qualified for appointment to the Legislative Council unless he is either a natural born British subject or a Samoan, or was born in Samoa. The civil administration was inaugurated on May 1, 1920.

Savaii, with a length of 48 miles and a breadth of 25 miles, has an area of about 660 square miles; Upolu has an area of between 550 and 600 square miles. Both islands are mountainous, fertile, and well watered. Several adjacent islets, exceedingly fertile, were included in the German dependency. The port of Apia is in Upolu. The inhabitants of the islands are Polynesians, professing Christianity (Protestants, Catholics, and Mormons). Population of Western Samoa (excluding soldiers), according to the census of 1917, 41,128, distributed as follows:—Whites, 1,668 (British, 660, Americans, 236, Swedes, 42, Germans, 530, others, 200); Natives, 37,223; coolie labourers, 2,237. The native population suffered heavily during the influenza epidemic of 1918, the number of deaths being about 7,500. There were (1917) 2 Government schools with 784 pupils, and mission schools with over 8,000 pupils. There are 60 miles of good roads. The chief product is copra, and other products are cocoa, rubber, cardamoms, sugar. The revenue collected in Western Samoa for the year ended March 31, 1920, was £95,022 (mainly customs, 58,792*l.*; Court fees, &c., 11,801*l.*; native taxes, 9,404*l.*; wireless station, 7,208*l.*; post office, 4,457*l.*); the ordinary expenditure was 96,314*l.* There was an excess of assets over liabilities of 28,030*l.* on March 31, 1920. Imports (exclusive of supplies for the troops) for 1919, 291,368*l.*; exports, 532,500*l.* In 1919, 77 vessels (34,273 tons) entered at the port of Apia and 81 vessels (35,940 tons) cleared. There is regular steam communication with New Zealand. Wireless stations have been erected at Apia, in Samoa, and Nauru (or Pleasant Island, one of the Marshall Islands), respectively. Two other stations were planned—at Rabaul in New Guinea, and on Yap, one of the Caroline Islands.

The currency before the British occupation was in marks, but English and American gold and silver coin were legal tender. Since the occupation, however, the German currency has been replaced by New Zealand bank notes and specie. A branch of the Bank of New Zealand was opened at Apia in April, 1915.

The Hon. E. P. Lee, Minister of External Affairs for New Zealand, is in charge of Samoa and other late German Islands assigned to New Zealand.

NAURU ISLAND.

This is a small coral island just south of the Equator, and about 400 miles south of the nearest Marshall Islands. It was captured from the Germans, and under the Peace Treaty of 1919 the mandate for its administration was conferred on the British Empire. The mandate, as approved by the League of Nations, is dated December 17, 1920. The military training of the natives, except for local police or defence purposes, is prohibited, and no naval or military base or any fortifications may be established. Great Britain, Australia and New Zealand have agreed that Australia shall appoint the first Administrator for a term of five years, and the expenses of administration are to be defrayed out of the proceeds of the sale of phosphates. The island is valuable for its deposits of phosphates.

Administrator.—Brigadier-General T. Griffiths, C.M.G., C.B.E., D.S.O.

FIJI.

Constitution and Government.

FIJI was ceded by the chiefs and people of Fiji on October 10, 1874. The government is administered by a Governor appointed by the Crown, assisted by an Executive Council consisting of the Colonial Secretary, the Attorney-General, other official members appointed by the Governor, and two nominated members selected by the Governor from the elected members of the Legislative Council. Laws are passed by the Legislative Council, of which the Governor is president. It comprises twelve nominated members, seven elected members, and two native members.

Governor of Fiji and High Commissioner for the Western Pacific.—Sir Cecil Hunter Rodwell, K.C.M.G. (appointed, 1918). Salary 3,000*l.* as Governor of Fiji, and 1,000*l.* as High Commissioner for the Western Pacific.

The Governor is High Commissioner and Consul-General for the Western Pacific.

There is a constabulary consisting of Fijians and Indians, and a Defence Force (Europeans, half-castes, and Fijians).

For the purposes of native government the colony is divided into 17 provinces, in 6 of which a superior native chief exercises, under the title of Roko Tui, a form of rule which recognises to a large degree the principles of native administration by which the people formerly governed themselves. In seven of the provinces there are European commissioners. About 180 native officials are employed in subordinate administrative capacities. There are also 30 native stipendiary magistrates associated with 19 District Commissioners in the administration of justice. A European commissioner, who is also Government medical officer, resides in Rotuma.

Area and Population.

Fiji comprises a group of about 250 islands (about 80 inhabited) lying between 15° and 20° south latitudes and 177° east and 178° west longitude. The largest is Viti Levu, area 4,053 square miles; next is Vanua Levu, area 2,130 square miles. The island of Rotuma, between 12° and 15° of south latitude, and 175° and 177° east longitude, was added to the colony in 1880. Total area, including Rotuma, 7,083 square miles.

At the census of April 2, 1911, the population was 139,541; the Europeans, 3,707 (2,403 males, 1,304 females); Fijians, 87,096 (46,110 males, 40,986 females); Rotumans, 2,176 (1,043 males, 1,133 females); Indians, 40,286 (26,073 males, 14,213 females); Polynesians, 2,758 (2,429 males, 329 females); Chinese, 305 (276 males, 29 females); others, 3,213 (1,674 males, 1,539 females). On December 31, 1919, the estimated population was 163,847, including 87,493 Fijians and 62,640 Indians.

Among Europeans the births in 1919 were 77 and deaths 67; among Fijians, births 2,479, deaths 3,997; among Indians, births 1,806, deaths 1,016.

Suva, the capital, is on the south coast of Viti Levu ; European population (census of April 2, 1911), 1,376.

Religion and Instruction.

Attending at Wesleyan native churches in 1918, 29,883 ; Roman Catholic Mission, 11,191. The Wesleyan Mission comprises 20 European missionaries, 20 European mission sisters, 110 native ministers, 193 catechists, 757 teachers, and 3,851 local preachers, 4,422 class leaders, with 738 churches, and 366 other preaching places. The Roman Catholic Mission has 30 European ministers and 287 native teachers, 50 European sisters, 76 churches and chapels, 3 native training institutions.

There are two government grammar schools at Suva, one for boys and one for girls ; and one for both sexes at Levuka. In 1919 there were 425 scholars. The Queen Victoria School, also State-supported, is a boarding school for Fijian boys. There were 72 pupils in 1919. The Government pays grants-in-aid to 21 assisted primary schools and to 16 assisted vernacular schools. During 1919 the Wesleyan Mission had 863 schools with 13,388 scholars ; the Roman Catholic had 122 schools with 2,695 scholars. The Roman Catholic Mission maintains 3 schools for Europeans, with 195 children in 1919. Expenditure on education, 1919, 18,080*l*.

PACIFIC ISLANDS.

TONGA.

(FRIENDLY ISLANDS.)

The Tonga or Friendly Islands continued up to 1899 to be a neutral region in accordance with the Declaration of Berlin, April 6, 1886. By the Anglo-German Agreement of November 14, 1899, subsequently accepted by the United States, the Tonga Islands were left practically under the Protectorate of Great Britain. A Protectorate was proclaimed over Tonga on May 19, 1900. In December, 1900, the British High Commissioner, with the assent of the King and native chiefs, assumed the exercise of civil and criminal jurisdiction over all subjects of Foreign Powers in Tonga, and the supervision of the financial administration.

Queen.—Salote, succeeded on the death of her father, George II, on April 29, 1918.

There is a Legislative Assembly which meets annually, composed of seven nobles elected by their peers, seven elected representatives of the people, and the Ministers of the Crown, numbering seven, or twenty-one members in all. The elections are held triennially.

The kingdom consists of 3 groups of islands, called respectively Tonga tabu, Haabai, and Vavau, together with the outlying islands of Niuatobu-tabu, Taofahi, and Niuafoo, and lies between 15° and 23° 30' south, and 173° and 177° west, its western boundary being the eastern boundary of Fiji. The main group was discovered by Tasman in 1643. Total area, approximately 885 square miles; Capital, Nukualofa; population, census, April, 1911, 23,011 Tongans; 346 other Pacific islanders, and 380 Europeans. Estimated population 1919, 22,689 Tongans, 250 half-castes, 247 other Pacific islanders, and 376 Europeans; total, 23,562. The natives are Christian, there being about 16,000 adherents of the Free Church of Tonga, 4,000 Wesleyan Methodists, and 3,000 Roman Catholics. At the end of 1919, there were 64 public primary schools, with 2,742 pupils on the roll. At Tonga College there were 8 teachers and 65 students on December 31, 1919. The revenue amounted in 1918-19 to 66,901*l.*, and the expenditure to 43,688*l.* Native produce consists almost entirely of copra, of which the export in 1919 (chiefly to America) amounted to 22,221 tons, valued at 441,895*l.* Total Imports, 1918, 177,151*l.*; exports, 169,757*l.* The imports include drapery, flour, biscuits, fish, hardware, timber, sugar, meats; and the exports, copra, fungus, live stock. The trade is with New Zealand, Australia and the United States of America. Steamer communication with the outside world since the war has been limited practically to one vessel of the Union Company's Fleet which maintains a fortnightly service with New Zealand, via Fiji and Samoa.

Since May 1, 1905, British coin is the only legal tender. The weights and measures are the same as in Great Britain. Accounts are kept in pounds, shillings, and pence.

High Commissioner and Consul-General for the Western Pacific.—Sir Cecil Hunter Rodwell, K.C.M.G. Agent and Consul.—Islay McOwan.

In the sections devoted to New South Wales and New Zealand mention is made of various annexed Pacific Islands. The following summary (omitting islands described elsewhere) gives the names and positions of islands which are unattached:—

Ducie Island, 24° 40' S. lat., 124° 48' W. long. Piteairn Island, 25° 5' S., 130° 5' W.; area 2 sq. m.; pop. in 1914, 140 (35 adult males, 39 adult females, 66 children). The affairs of the island are conducted by a Council of 7 members, with a President, who acts also as Chief Magistrate, and a Vice-President, who is also Government Secretary, subject to the control of the High Commissioner for the Western Pacific. In religion the islanders (descendants of the mutineers of the Bounty) are 'Seventh Day Adventists.' The products of the island are sweet potatoes, beans, sugar cane, yams, taro, melons, pumpkins, oranges, bananas, pineapples, and arrowroot, which is prepared in limited quantities with antiquated appliances. Excellent coffee also grows, and its cultivation will probably extend. On the Island there are about 200 wild goats and a small stock of chickens. Dudoza Island, 7° 40' S. lat., 161° W. long.; area 2 sq. m. Victoria Island, area 2 sq. m., uninhabited. Phoenix Group between 2° 30' and 4° 30' S. lat., and 171° and 174° 30' W. long. Eight islands: Mary, Enderbury, Phoenix, Birney, Gardner, McKean, Hull, Sydney; area of group, 16 sq. m., pop. 59.

Gilbert and Ellice Islands Colony. The islands in this group were proclaimed as Protectorates in 1892 and annexed (at the request of the native governments) as Gilbert and Ellice Islands Colony, on November 10, 1915. The Colony includes several groups of islands. (1) The Union, or Tokelau Group, between 8° 30' and 11° S. lat., and 171° and 172° W. long. Five clusters of islets, the principal of which are Fakaofo or Bowditch, Nukunono or Duke of Clarence, Atafu or Duke of York; area of group, 7 sq. m.; pop. 900 natives approximately. (2) The Ellice Islands, between 5° 30' and 11° 20' S. lat., and 176° and 180° E. long. The principal islands are Funafuti, Nukufetau, Vaitupu, Nui (or Netherland), Niutao (or Lynx or Speiden), Nanumaga (or Hudson), Nanomea (or St Augustine), Nukulaelae (or Mitchell); area of group, 14 sq. m.; pop. (1911), 3,084 natives, 6 Europeans, and 1 Asiatic. (3) Fanning Island, 3° 50' N., 159° W.; area 15 sq. m., pop. 150, and Washington Island, 4° 40' N., 160° 20' W., area 6 sq. m., and Ocean Island. (4) Christmas Island, annexed to the Colony in November, 1919, Anatole, 90 miles in circumference, annexed to the Crown in 1888. A trading firm collects mother-of-pearl shells on its shores. There are no permanent inhabitants. (5) The Gilbert Islands on the equator. The principal islands are Butaritari, Makin, Tarawa, Abaian, Marakei, Maiana, Abemama, Kuria, Ananuka Nonouti, Tapiteuea, Beru, Nikunau, Onotea, Tamana, Arorae, and Ocean Islands. Area, 166 sq. m.; estimated pop. (1911), 26,417 natives and 446 foreigners. Education is in the hands of various missions. Revenue of the Colony was for the year ended June 30, 1919, 24,449*l.* (chief items: Customs, 8,244*l.*; native taxes, 8,310*l.*; licences, &c., 3,653*l.*; royalty on phosphate, 1,704*l.*); and expenditure, 30,784*l.* Principal crops: pandanus fruit and coconuts. The trade in 1918-19 amounted to 92,351*l.* for imports, and 139,183*l.* for exports (phosphates, 76,683*l.*, and copra, 60,000*l.*). The Colony is administered by the High Commissioner through a Resident Commissioner, whose headquarters are at Ocean Island.

British Solomon Islands, about 8° S. and 160° W., are Guadalcanar, Malaita, Isabel, San Cristoval, New Georgia, Choiseul, Shortland, Mono (or Treasury), Vella Lavella, Ronongo, Gizo, Rendova, Russell, Florida, Rennell, and numerous small islands (the Lord Howe Group or Ontong Java, the Santa Cruz Islands, Tucopia and Mitre Islands, and the Duff, or Wilson Group, are also included in the Solomon Islands Protectorate). Area 11,000 sq. miles; European population (1919), 675; native population, about 150,000. Asiatics, 75. They are under British Protection. Revenue, 1919-20, 34,545*l.* (Customs, 23,000*l.*); expenditure, 37,640*l.* About 30,000 acres planted by white planters were under coconuts in March, 1914, and about 300 acres under rubber; sweet potatoes, pineapples, bananas are grown. Copra exported, 1919-20, 8,160 tons. The value of imports in 1919-20 was 181,162*l.*; and of exports, 212,542*l.* Foreign-going vessels entered, 1919-20, 12,435 tons; cleared, 12,387 tons. A paper currency was issued in 1917-18. Little gold is in circulation, and only 4,600*l.* Protectorate paper money. The chief medium of exchange is Commonwealth bank notes. There is a Resident Commissioner, whose headquarters are at Tulagi, a small island off the south coast of Florida. (For part of the Solomon Islands lately owned by Germany and now administered by Australia, see section on late German New Guinea, p. 422).

Starbuck Island, 5° 30' S. lat., 155° W. long.; area 1 sq. m., uninhabited. Malden Island, 4° S. lat., 155° W. long.; area 35 sq. m., pop. 168. Jarvis Island, on the equator, 159° W., area 1½ sq. m., pop. 30. Palmyra, 6° N., 162° 30' W., area 1½ sq. m. Baker Islands, on the equator.

These islands are mostly of coral formation; most of them grow coconut trees, and some of them are valuable for their guano.

The High Commissioner of the Western Pacific, assisted by deputies, has jurisdiction, in accordance with an Order in Council of 1893, for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of the Pacific Islanders' Protection Acts of 1872 and 1875, and to settle disputes between British subjects living in these islands. The jurisdiction of the High Commissioner extends over all the Western Pacific not within the limits of Fiji, Queensland, or New South Wales, or the jurisdiction of any civilised Power, and includes the Southern Solomon Islands, and the various small groups in Melanesia.

The New Hebrides, however, are under the joint administration of English and French officials, as arranged by the Anglo-French Convention of February, 1906, ratified October, 1906. This convention guarantees the interests of French, British, and natives, respectively; fixes the conditions of land-holding in the Islands; and provides for the regulation of the recruitment of native labourers. Within the Islands Great Britain is represented by a Resident Commissioner, who reports to the High Commissioner for the Western Pacific. The larger islands of the group are Espiritu Santo, Mallicolo, Epi, Efate or Sandwich, Erromanga, Tanna, Futuna or Erronan, and Aneityúm. Area, 5,100 square miles; population about 70,000. At the end of 1905 there were within the group 225 British and 417 French subjects. There are 3 French Catholic mission schools, and many Presbyterian. Settlers have acquired large areas within the islands; and though there are many disputes as to rightful possession, and much of the land is still uncleared coconuts (for copra), maize, millet, coffee, cocoa, cotton, and bananas are grown, and a timber factory on Aneityum prepares Kauri wood for export. The distillation and importation of spirits are prohibited. The revenue in 1919 amounted to 10,154l., and the expenditure to 10,649l., the deficit being met by the British and French jointly. An expenditure of 7,922l. on purely British services was also incurred. There are several French and British trading companies. Imports, 1918-19, about 120,000l.; exports about 150,000l. The trade is mostly with Sydney and Nouméa (New Caledonia). The imports are provisions and foodstuffs, clothing, metal-work, and furniture; the exports are maize (1,200 tons in 1916), copra (4,100 tons), coffee (260 tons), cotton (1,700 tons), sandalwood (110 tons), cocoa (228 tons), and other island products. Vessels visit the islands frequently, including the repeated voyages of one British and two French companies, whose steamers provide for communication with Sydney, Nouméa, the Solomon Islands, and sometimes the Gilbert Islands.

PART THE SECOND

THE UNITED STATES

UNITED STATES.

(UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.)

Constitution and Government.

THE Declaration of Independence of the thirteen States of which the American Union then consisted was adopted by Congress July 4, 1776. On November 30, 1782, Great Britain acknowledged the independence of the United States, and on September 3, 1783, the treaty of peace was concluded.

The form of government of the United States is based on the Constitution of Sept. 17, 1787, to which ten amendments were added Dec. 15, 1791; an eleventh amendment, Jan. 8, 1798; a twelfth amendment, Sept. 25, 1804; a thirteenth amendment, Dec. 18, 1865 (slavery abolished); a fourteenth amendment, July 28, 1868; a fifteenth amendment, March 30, 1870 (equal rights for white and coloured citizens); a sixteenth amendment, February 25, 1913 (income tax authorised); a seventeenth amendment, May 31, 1913; an eighteenth amendment, January 29, 1919 (liquor prohibition amendment); and a nineteenth amendment, August 26, 1920 (woman suffrage).

By the Constitution, the government of the nation is entrusted to three separate authorities, the Executive, the Legislative, and the Judicial. The executive power is vested in a President, who holds his office during the term of four years, and is elected, together with a Vice-President chosen for the same term, in the mode prescribed as follows:—‘Each State shall appoint, in such manner as the Legislature thereof may direct, a number of electors, equal to the whole number of senators and representatives to which the State may be entitled in the Congress: but no senator or representative, or person holding an office of trust or profit under the United States, shall be appointed an elector.’ The practice is that in every State the electors allotted to the State are chosen by direct vote of the citizens on a general ticket, on the system known in France as scrutin de liste. The Constitution enacts that ‘the Congress may determine the time of choosing the electors, and the day on which they shall give their votes, which day shall be the same throughout the United States’; and further, that ‘no person except a natural-born citizen, or a citizen of the United States at the time of the adoption of this Constitution, shall be eligible to the office of President; neither shall any person be eligible to that office who shall not have attained to the age of thirty-five years, and been fourteen years a resident within the United States’.

The quadrennial election is held every fourth (leap) year. Electors are chosen in the several States on the Tuesday after the first Monday in November; the electors meet and give their votes at their respective State capitals on the second Monday in January next following their appointment; and the votes of the electors of all the States are opened and counted in the presence of both Houses of Congress on the second Wednesday in February. The presidential term begins on March 4, in the year following leap years.

The President is commander-in-chief of the army and navy, and of the militia in the service of the Union. The Vice-President is ex-officio President of the Senate; and in the case of the death or resignation of the President, he becomes the President for the remainder of the term.

President of the United States.—Warren Gamaliel Harding, of Ohio, born near Blooming Grove, Morrow County, in Ohio, November 2, 1865; educated at Ohio Central College ; journalist since 1884 ; senator in the legislature of Ohio, 1899–1903 ; Lieutenant-Governor of Ohio, 1904–1906 ; defeated candidate for Governor, 1910 ; United States Senator from Ohio, 1915–1920.

Vice-President of the United States.—Calvin Coolidge, of Massachusetts, born at Plymouth, Vermont, July 4, 1872 ; graduated at Amherst College, 1895 ; admitted to the Bar, 1897 ; member of the State Senate, 1912–1915 ; President of the Senate, 1914 and 1915 ; Lieutenant-Governor of Massachusetts, 1916–1918 ; Governor, 1919 and 1920.

Since the adoption of the Constitution the offices of President and Vice-President have been occupied as follows :—

By a law which came into force Jan. 19, 1886, in case of removal, death, resignation, or inability of both the President and Vice-President, the Secretary of State, and after him, in the order of the establishment of their departments, other members of the Cabinet, shall act as President until the disability of the President is removed or a President shall be elected. On the death of a Vice-President the duties of the office shall fall to the President pro tempore of the Senate, who receives the salary of the Vice-President.

The administrative business of the nation is conducted by ten chief officers, or heads of departments, who form what is called the 'Cabinet.' They are chosen by the President, but must be confirmed by the Senate. Each of them presides over a separate department, and acts under the immediate authority of the President. They are, in the order prescribed by law for their succession to the Presidency, in case both the President and the Vice-President die or become unable to take office :—

1. Secretary of State.—Charles Evans Hughes, of New York, born in New York, 1862 ; graduated at Brown University, 1881 ; admitted to the Bar in New York, 1884 ; Lecturer and Professor of Law in Columbia and Cornell Universities, 1891-1900 ; Governor of New York, 1907-1910 ; Associate Justice Supreme Court of the United States, 1910-1916 ; defeated candidate for President, 1916. Present appointment, March 4, 1921.

2. Secretary of the Treasury.—Andrew William Mellon, of Pennsylvania, born in Pennsylvania, 1852 ; educated at the University of Pittsburg ; prominent in the development of coal, coke, and iron industries, and in banking. Present appointment, March 4, 1921.

3. Secretary of War.—John Wingate Weeks, of Massachusetts, born in New Hampshire, 1860 ; graduated at Annapolis Naval Academy, 1881 ; member of Congress, 1905-1913 ; Senator from Massachusetts, 1913-1919. Present appointment, March 4, 1921.

4. Attorney-General.—Harry M. Daugherty, of Ohio, born in Ohio, 1860; university education; admitted to the Bar, 1881; member of the Ohio legislature, 1888–1893. Present appointment, March 4, 1921.

5. Postmaster-General.—Will H. Hays, of Indiana, born in Indiana, 1879; graduated at Wabash College, 1900; admitted to the Bar; prominent in State and national politics since 1900; Chairman (1920) of the Republican National Committee. Present appointment, March 4, 1921.

6. Secretary of the Navy.—Edwin Denby, of Michigan, born in Indiana, 1870; graduated at the University of Michigan Law School, 1896; admitted to the Bar, 1896; gunner's mate, U.S. Navy, in the Spanish War, 1898; member of the Michigan legislature, 1902–1903; member of Congress, 1905–1911; enlisted private U.S. Marine Corps, 1917; promoted sergeant and major, 1919. Present appointment, March 4, 1921.

7. Secretary of the Interior.—Albert Bacon Fall, of New Mexico, born in Kentucky, 1861; Associate Justice and Attorney-General of New Mexico (Territory); United States Senator from New Mexico (State), 1912–1921. Present appointment, March 4, 1921.

8. Secretary of Agriculture.—Henry Cantwell Wallace, of Iowa, born in Illinois, 1866; educated at Iowa State College; editor of papers devoted to agriculture; Chairman of war work, and member of the International Committee of the Y.M.C.A. Present appointment, March 4, 1921.

9. Secretary of Commerce.—Herbert Clark Hoover, of California, born in Iowa, 1874; graduated civil engineer, Leland Stanford Jr. University, 1895; engaged in mine development in America, Australia, and China; Chairman (in London) of the American War Relief Committee, 1914–1915; American Food Administrator, 1917–1919; Administrator of Food Relief for Belgium, 1915–1918; Commander of the French Legion d'honneur. Present appointment, March 4, 1921.

10. Secretary of Labour.—James John Davis, of Indiana, born in Wales, 1873; prominent officer in Labour organisations. Present appointment, March 4, 1921.

The Ministry for Labour was created in 1913.

Each of the above ministers has an annual salary of 12,000 dollars, and holds office during the pleasure of the President.

The whole legislative power is vested by the Constitution in a Congress, consisting of a Senate and House of Representatives. The Senate consists of two members from each State, chosen by popular vote for six years. Senators must be not less than thirty years of age; must have been citizens of the United States for nine years; and be residents in the States for which they are chosen. Besides its legislative functions, the Senate is entrusted with the power of ratifying or rejecting all treaties made by the President with foreign Powers, a two-thirds majority of senators present being required for ratification. The Senate is also invested with the power of confirming or rejecting all appointments to office made by the President; and its members constitute a High Court of Impeachment. The judgment in the latter case extends only to removal from office and disqualification. The House of Representatives has the sole power of impeachment.

The House of Representatives is composed of members elected every second year by the vote of citizens who, according to the laws of their respective States, are qualified to vote. In general such voters are all citizens over 21 years of age. Neither race, sex, nor colour affects the right of citizens. The franchise is not absolutely universal; residence for at least one year in most States (but the period varies) is necessary, in some States the payment of taxes, in others registration. On the other hand many of the Western States admit to the franchise unnaturalised persons who have formally declared their intention to become citizens. Several of the Southern States have adopted methods—which differ from one another—too complicated for explanation here, with the expressed avowed purpose of excluding the negroes from the franchise and yet avoiding the constitutional consequences of discriminating ‘on account of race, colour, or previous condition of servitude.’ Untaxed Indians are excluded from the franchise, in most States convicts, in some States duellists and fraudulent voters; in Massachusetts voters are required to be able to read English. In some Southern States they are required to give a reasonable explanation of what they read. Women by the Federal Constitution 19th amendment, 1920, have the vote and eligibility for both the Federal and the State Legislatures on the same terms as men.

The number of members of the House of Representatives to which each State is entitled is determined by the census taken every ten years. By the Apportionment Act consequent on the census of 1910 the number of representatives is 433.

In 1912 with the admission of Arizona and New Mexico it became 435, distributed as follows :—

Alabama . . . . .	10	Maryland . . . . .	6	Oregon . . . . .	3

On the basis of the census of 1910 there is one representative to every 210,415 inhabitants. Although the census of 1920 provides the numbers necessary to make a fresh apportionment of representatives, Congress has not yet (February, 1921), made such an apportionment. The House of Representatives has passed a Bill fixing the number at 435 representatives; as at present, and distributing them among the States, but the Senate has not acted upon the Bill.

The popular vote for President in 1920 was 26,661,606, or about one in four of the entire population.

According to the terms of the Constitution, representatives must not be less than twenty-five years of age, must have been citizens of the United States for seven years, and be residents in the States from which they are chosen. In addition to the representatives from the States, the House admits a ‘delegate’ from each organised Territory, who has the right to speak on any subject and to make motions, but not to vote. The delegates are elected in the same manner as the representatives.

Each of the two Houses of Congress is made by the Constitution th

'judge of the elections, returns, and qualifications of its own members'; and each of the Houses may, with the concurrence of two-thirds, expel a member.

The Congress of the United States has the power to propose alterations in the Constitution, by the 5th article of the same. The article orders that the Congress, whenever two-thirds of both Houses shall deem it necessary, shall propose amendments to the Constitution, or, on the application of the Legislatures of two-thirds of all the States, shall call a convention for proposing the amendments, which in either case shall be valid to all intents and purposes as part of the Constitution when ratified by the Legislatures of three-fourths of the several States, or by conventions in three-fourths thereof, as the one or other mode of ratification may be proposed by Congress.

The salary of a senator, representative, or delegate in Congress is 7,500 dollars per annum, with an allowance, based on distance, for travelling expenses. The salary of the Speaker of the House of Representatives is 12,000 dollars per annum.

No senator or representative can, during the time for which he is elected, be appointed to any civil office under authority of the United States which shall have been created or the emoluments of which shall have been increased during such time; and no person holding any office under the United States can be a member of either House during his continuance in office. No religious test is required as a qualification to any office or public trust under the United States, or in any State.

The period usually termed 'a Congress' in legislative language continues for two years; as, for example, from noon, March 4, 1921, until noon, March 4, 1923, at which latter time the term of the representatives to the 67th Congress will expire, and the term of the new House of Representatives will begin. The term of one-third of the Senators expires at the same time.

The 67th Congress (1921-23), elected November, 1920, is constituted as follows: Senate, 59 Republicans, 37 Democrats; House of Representatives, 301 Republicans, 133 Democrats, 1 Socialist.

The National Government has authority in matters of general taxation, treaties and other dealings with foreign powers, army, navy, and (to a certain extent) militia, commerce, foreign and inter-State, postal service, coinage, weights and measures, and the trial and punishment of crime against the United States.

Slavery was abolished throughout the whole of the United States by the thirteenth Amendment of the Constitution, passed December 18, 1865. The vast change in the political and social organisation of the Republic made by this new fundamental law was completed by the fourteenth and fifteenth Amendments of the Constitution, passed in 1868 and 1870, which gave to the former slaves all the rights and privileges of citizenship.

STATE AND LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

The Union comprises 13 original States, 7 States which were admitted without having been previously organised as Territories, and 28 States which had been Territories—48 States in all. Each State has its own constitution, which must be republican in form, and each constitution derives its authority, not from Congress, but from the people of the State. Admission of States into the Union is granted by special Acts of Congress, either (1) in the form of 'enabling Acts,' providing for the drafting and ratification of a State constitution by the people, in which case the Territory becomes a State as soon as the conditions are fulfilled, or (2) accepting a constitution already framed, and at once granting admission.

Each State is provided with a Legislature of two Houses, a Governor, and other executive officials, and a judicial system. Both Houses of the Legislature are elective, but the Senators (having larger electoral districts) are less numerous than the members of the House of Representatives, while in some States their terms are longer and, in a few, the Senate is only partially renewed at each election. Members of both Houses are paid at the same rate, which varies from 150 to 1,500 dollars per session, or from 1 to 8 dollars per day during session. The duties of the two Houses are similar, but in many States money bills must be introduced first in the House of Representatives. The Senate has to sit as a court for the trial of officials impeached by the other House, and besides, has often the power to confirm or reject appointments made by the Governor. In most of the States the sessions are biennial, the Governor having power to summon an extraordinary session, but not to dissolve or adjourn. State Legislatures are competent to deal with all matters not reserved for the Federal Government by the Federal constitution, or falling within restrictions imposed by the State constitutions. Among their powers are the determination of the qualifications for the right of suffrage, and the control of all elections to public office, including elections of members of Congress and electors of President and Vice-President; the criminal law, both in its enactment and in its execution, with unimportant exceptions, and the administration of prisons; the civil law, including all matters pertaining to the possession and transfer of, and succession to, property; marriage and divorce, and all other civil relations; the chartering and control of all manufacturing, trading, transportation, and other corporations, subject only to the right of Congress to regulate commerce passing from one State to another; the regulation of labour; education; charities; licensing, including regulation of the liquor traffic; fisheries, and game laws. The revenues of the States are derived chiefly from a direct tax upon property, in some cases both real and personal, in others on land and buildings only. The prohibition upon Congress to levy direct taxes save in proportion to population, contained originally in the national constitution, left this source of revenue to the States exclusively until 1913, when an amendment was adopted authorising the imposition of an income tax by Congress.

The Governor is chosen by direct vote of the people over the whole State. His term of office varies from 1 year to 4 years and his salary from 1,000 to 10,000 dollars. His duty is to see to the faithful administration of the law, and he has command of the military forces of the State. His power of appointment to State offices is usually unimportant. He may recommend measures, but does not present bills to the legislature. In some States he presents estimates. In all but two of the States the Governor has a veto upon legislation, which may, however, be overridden by the two houses, in some States by a simple majority, in others by a three-fifths or two-thirds majority.

The officials by whom the administration of State affairs is carried on (secretaries, treasurers, members of boards of commissioners, &c.) are usually chosen by the people at the General State elections for terms similar to those for which governors hold office, the party in power appointing its own adherents.

In the Territories of Hawaii and Alaska there is a local legislature, the form of which has been prescribed by the National Government. These bodies have powers similar to those of the States, but any of their acts may be modified or annulled by Congress. The Governor of a Territory is appointed for 4 years by the President to whom he makes an annual report. The President appoints also the Territorial secretaries and other officials, together with the Territorial judges. Porto Rico, although not designated as a 'territory' in the technical sense, is self-governing. Its government is organised on a system almost identical with that of the territories. The Philippine Islands are governed by a civil Governor and elected Upper and Lower Legislative Chambers.

The District of Columbia is the seat of the United States Government, provided by the State of Maryland for the purposes of government in 1791. It is co-extensive with the city of Washington, and embraces an area of 60 square miles. The district has no municipal legislative body, and its citizens have no right to vote either in national or municipal concerns. By an Act of Congress of 1878, its municipal government is administered by three commissioners, appointed by the President.

The unit of local government in the North, especially in the New England States, is the rural township, governed directly by the voters who assemble annually or oftener if necessary, and legislate in local affairs, levy taxes, make appropriations, and appoint and instruct the local officials (select men, clerk, school-committee, &c.). Where cities exist the township government is superseded by the city government. Townships are grouped to form counties, each with its commissioners and other paid officials who have charge of public buildings, lay out highways, grant licences, and estimate and apportion the taxation necessary for county purposes. In the South the counties are themselves the units, though subdivided for educational or other special purposes. Their officials have in general additional functions, as the care of the poor and the superintendence of schools. In the Middle and North-Western States the two systems of local government are mixed. In the West all the public land is already divided into townships six miles square.

Area and Population.

I. PROGRESS AND PRESENT CONDITION.

Population of the United States at each census from 1790. Residents of Hawaii, Alaska, Porto Rico, the Philippine Islands, Guam, Samoa, and Panama Canal zone, and persons in the military and naval service stationed abroad are not included in the figures of this table. The residents of Indian reservations are not included prior to 1890.

II. MOVEMENT OF POPULATION.

The registration area for births was established in 1915, and the birth rates are computed from returns for certain areas for which the registration of births is accepted by the Bureau of the Census as approximately complete. In 1917 these areas included Connecticut, Indiana, Kansas, Kentucky, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, New Hampshire, New York, North Carolina, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Utah, Vermont, Virginia, Washington, and Wisconsin, and the District of Columbia. The estimated population of this area was 55,033,195, or 53·1 per cent. of the total estimated population of the United States, and the number of births (exclusive of stillbirths) returned was 1,353,792, or 24·6 per 1,000 population.

Death rates are computed from returns for certain areas where local registration records are kept. In 1917 these areas included California, Colorado, Connecticut, Indiana, Kansas, Kentucky, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, Montana, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, North Carolina, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, South Carolina, Tennessee, Utah, Vermont, Virginia, Washington, Wisconsin, the District of Columbia, and the territory of Hawaii, and 43 cities in non-registration states. The estimated population for the registration area was 75,527,486, or 72·7 per cent. of the total estimated population of Continental United States and the territory of Hawaii; and the number of deaths returned for that year was 1,072,642 (including the deaths of 2,221 soldiers, sailors and marines after the beginning of the war), corresponding to a death rate of 14·2 per 1,000 population.

Marriage rate per 10,000, (for 1916) based on total population, 105.
Divorce rate per 10,000, based on total population, 112.

It is estimated that, from the foundation of the Government up to 1820, about 250,000 alien passengers arrived.

The total number of immigrants from 1820 to 1919 (June 30)

83,200,108. In the following statement, immigrants from Canada and Mexico are included in the total :—

Year	British Isles	Germany	Sweden, Norway, and Denmark	Austria-Hungary	Italy	Russia and Finland	France	Total Immigrants
1915	41,422	7,799	17,883	18,511	49,688	26,187	4,811	326,700
1916	24,702	2,877	14,761	5,191	33,665	7,842	4,156	298,826
1917	16,141	1,857	13,771	1,258	34,596	12,716	3,187	295,408
1918	2,447	447	6,506	61	5,250	4,242	1,798	110,618
1919	7,271	52	5,590	53	1,884	1,403	3,379	141,132

Of the total number in 1919, 83,272 were males, and 57,860 were females.

The total number of immigrants from China between 1820 and 1919 was 346,071. In the year 1918 there were 1,576 Chinese immigrants; in the year 1919, 1,697. In 1912 there were 6,172 Japanese immigrants; in 1917, 8,925; in 1918, 10,168; and in 1919, 10,056.

Increase of native white, and foreign born white population from 1850 to 1910, by decades :—

1910	68,386,412	11,791,033	20.8	13,345,545	3,131,728	30.7

Of the total increase of 15,977,691 in the population of the country between 1900 and 1910, whites contributed 14,922,761; negroes, 993,769; and other races, 61,161. The increase in the native population was 12,803,081, and that in the foreign-born 3,174,610, or about one-fifth of the total increase.

The percentage of increase for the whites was 22.8, and for the negroes, 11.2. The native white population increased 20.8 per cent., and the foreign-born white, 30.7 per cent.

In 1910 whites constituted 88.9 per cent. of the total population, as compared with 87.9 per cent. in 1900. Native whites, however, constituted a slightly smaller proportion of the total in the later year than in the earlier, while foreign-born whites formed 14.5 per cent. of the total in 1910, as compared with 13.4 per cent. ten years earlier.

Instruction.

Each State of the Union has a system of free public schools established by law. The work of these is largely supplemented by private and parochial schools. In 1880 the percentage of illiterates in the population above ten years of age was 17 per cent., in 1890 13·3 per cent., in 1900 10·7 per cent., in 1910 7·7 per cent. The following statistics are for 1910 :—

The United States Government has set aside for elementary schools in each of the newer States, from two to four 'sections' (or square miles) in each town-ship six miles square, the proceeds from the sale of which form the chief part of the permanent school funds of those States, the income alone being used for the support of the schools. This income is supplemented by State and local taxation, so that it constitutes about 3·3 per cent. of the total school revenue of all the States. In 1918 the amount expended on public schools of elementary and secondary grades was 644,595,145 dollars. In 1918 the 554 universities and colleges, including the 330 co-educational colleges, the 125 colleges for men only, and the 100 colleges for women only, had an income of 137,055,415 dollars from productive funds, from fees, and from United States Government, State, and Municipal appropriations.

Justice and Crime.

The judicial system, like the executive and legislative systems, is dual. The Federal or National Government maintains courts for the trial of civil and criminal cases under national laws which include Admiralty, Patent, Banking, Bankruptcy, and other laws, both civil and criminal, of the United States ; the jurisdiction of the Federal Courts includes cases between citizens of different States when the amount involved is in excess of 3,000 dollars ; and of crimes against the laws of the United States. The State Courts have jurisdiction over all civil and criminal cases arising under State laws which do not conflict with the National Constitution and laws enacted by Congress. The State Courts also have jurisdiction of proceedings in probate and divorce.

In the separate States the lowest courts are those of Justices of the Peace but in many towns and cities of fairly substantial population, Police Judges have jurisdiction as Examining Magistrates in criminal matters and to hear and determine misdemeanours for violation of the municipal laws. In all matters, except in misdemeanours for violation of the municipal laws, the Justices of the Peace have also jurisdiction in such towns or cities as examining magistrates, as well as to hear and determine civil cases involving usually not more than 200 dollars, and also to hear, determine and sentence for certain petty crimes which are not heinous.

The States are divided into counties and the latter into towns, cities, villages and townships, and there is usually a circuit or district court for each county, in some of which there are one or more judges for the county, while in others the judge's jurisdiction embraces the courts of two or more counties and he goes from county to county to hold terms of court therein. These are the highest State Courts of original jurisdiction and they have grand and petit juries.

The highest court in each State is the Supreme or Appellate Court with a Chief Justice and Associate Justices and, in some States, commissioners who hear and determine cases under assignment of the Chief Justice and the Associate Justices. The Chief Justice and Associate Justices are usually elected by the people, but sometimes are appointed by the Governor with the advice and consent of the State Senate ; they usually hold office for a term of years, but sometimes for life or during good behaviour. Their salaries range from 2,500 to 17,500 dollars.

The Judges of the United States Courts, which include the District Courts, the Circuit Courts of Appeal, and the Supreme Court of the United States, are appointed for life, but retire, with full pay, at the age of 70 years, if they so desire, and if they have served the full period of ten years.

The United States District Courts are the lowest of the Federal Courts. There are 81 of these, each State forming one or more districts. These Courts appoint Commissioners, who have the power of Examining Magistrates, but may not finally adjudge and determine, except in the Territory of Alaska, where they have jurisdiction equivalent to that of the Justices of the Peace and Probate Courts of the counties of the States. The United States District Courts try all criminal cases arising under the Laws of the United States, as indicated above, including capital offences, which are punishable by death.

when the crime is committed on land or territory owned by the Federal Government.

The Supreme Court consists of the Chief Justice and 8 Associate Justices, appointed by the President, with the advice and consent of the Senate. The United States is divided into 9 circuits, to each of which the Chief Justice or an Associate Justice is assigned, and such Chief Justice or Associate Justice, respectively, has primary jurisdiction of applications for peremptory orders in any such district respectively. The Supreme Court has jurisdiction of cases on appeal or in error from the inferior Courts, and has original jurisdiction in cases affecting foreign Ministers and those between the different States. The salary of the Chief Justice is 15,000 dollars, and that of each of the Associate Justices 14,500 dollars.

The District of Columbia, in which the seat of the National Government is located, has a Municipal Court, a Supreme Court, and a Court of Appeals. The Municipal Court has jurisdiction in matters equivalent to those of the Justices of the Peace and Police Magistrates of cities and towns; the Supreme Court is the highest Court of original jurisdiction, and is equivalent to the District or Circuit Courts of the States, and the District Courts of the United States. The Circuit Court of Appeals has jurisdiction in cases of appeal or in error from the Supreme Court of the District, and is equivalent to the Supreme Court or Court of Appeals of the various States, and the Circuit Courts of Appeals of the United States.

The territories and insular possessions have different judicial systems, generally following the State organizations, but having as well jurisdiction of cases under the Federal Laws, except Porto Rico, which has a United States District Court, separate and distinct from the Municipal, Circuit, and Territorial Supreme Courts.

The gross debt was made up as follows :—Debt bearing no interest, 230,075,349 dollars ; debt on which interest has ceased, 6,747,700 dollars ; and interest-bearing debt (between 2 and 3½ per cent.) 24,061,095,361 dollars. The net debt—that is, what remains after deducting the cash in the Treasury—was 23,939,971,391 dollars on June 30, 1920.

In 1900 the true value of property was estimated at 88,517,306,775 dollars ; in 1904, at 107,104,192,410 dollars, and in 1912 at 187,739,071,090 dollars.

STATE FINANCE.

The revenues required for the administration of the separate States are derived from direct taxation, chiefly in the form of a tax on property real and personal ; and the greater part of such revenue is collected and expended by the local authorities, county, township, or school district.

For details see the separate States.

Defence.

I. ARMY.

The Army of the United States, as authorised under the Act of Congress of June 4, 1920, consists of the Regular Army, the National Guard while in the service of the United States, and the Organised Reserves, including the Officers Reserve Corps and the Enlisted Reserve Corps.

Original enlistment in the Regular Army is for a period of one or three years at the option of the soldier, and re-enlistments are for a period of three years. Men who are in the service at the outbreak of war, or enlist during the war, remain therein until six months after its termination. Enlisted men are classified in seven grades. The pay of the lowest grade, or private, is 30 dollars per month (about 4 shillings a day at normal exchange rates), and that of the highest grade, or master sergeant, is 74 dollars per month. In addition enlisted men receive an increase of 10 per cent. of their base pay for each 5 years of service in the army, the total increase not to exceed 40 per cent. Certain enlisted men also receive additional pay as specialists, the maximum addition under this head being 25 dollars per month. Recent legislation grants temporary increases of pay to the higher grades of enlisted men, making their total pay, in some cases, as much as 142 dollars per month. These increases are to continue only until June 30, 1922.

The authorised strength of the Regular Army, including the Philippine Scouts, is as shown in the following table:—

	Officers	Enlisted men	Total
Infantry . . . . .	4,200	110,000	114,200
Field Artillery . . . . .	1,900	37,000	38,900

Total . . . . .	17,717	280,000	298,882

The actual strength at the end of 1920 was 213,067.

The war organisation and establishments of the regular army were then still under consideration. The following establishments were proposed:

Army Corps . . . . .	79,966
Infantry Division . . . . .	19,885
Cavalry Division . . . . .	6,417
Infantry Brigade . . . . .	6,153
Artillery Brigade . . . . .	8,414

At the end of 1920 the Regular Army troops stationed abroad were as follows:—

Philippines . . . . .	18,947	China . . . . .	1,406
Germany . . . . .	14,306	France and England . . . . .	106
Hawaii . . . . .	8,927	Alaska . . . . .	867
Panama . . . . .	5,600
Puerto Rico . . . . .	1,493	Total . . . . .	51,652

The Officers Reserve Corps consists of officers of all grades, including general officers, organised into sections corresponding to the various branches of the Regular Army. It is at present composed almost exclusively of men who served as officers during the World War, and on June 30, 1920, had a strength of 68,232. These officers may be called for training not exceeding 15 days each year, and with their own consent may be ordered to active service at any time and for any period.

The Reserve Officers Training Corps, maintained for the purpose of keeping up the strength of the Officers Reserve Corps, is organised into units at civil educational establishments. It is divided into a Senior Division, formed mainly at the universities, and a Junior Division, formed mainly at the secondary schools. In June, 1920, over 88,000 students were enrolled in the Reserve Officers Training Corps, divided about equally between senior and junior uni's. Graduates of the Reserve Officers Training Corps before being commissioned in the Officers Reserve Corps must graduate from Reserve Officers Training Corps camps, to be maintained each summer for a period of six weeks.

The Enlisted Reserve Corps consists of men voluntarily enlisted therein who have qualifications making them eligible for enlistment in the Regular Army. The period of enlistment is three years, except that all men who are members at the outbreak of war or enlist during the war continue in the service until six months after the termination of the war.

The National Guard, or organised militia, is maintained by the several States with the aid of grants from the Federal Government. It is organised into the same arms of the service as the Regular Army, and is supplied by the Federal Government with uniforms, arms, and equipment of the same type as issued to the Regular Army. Service in the National Guard is purely voluntary. When Congress shall have authorised the use of the armed land forces of the United States for any purpose requiring the use of troops in excess of those of the Regular Army, the President may draft into the military service of the United States any or all members of the National Guard, to serve for the period of the war or emergency. The present authorised enlisted strength of the National Guard is about 180,000, but only about one-third of that number had been organised since the armistice to August, 1920. Enlistment is for three years. Minimum training required includes 48 drill periods of one and one half hours each year, in addition to fifteen days' training in encampments or manoeuvres.

The Militia comprises all able-bodied male citizens and applicants for citizenship between the ages of 18 and 45. The total number of men registered during the war between these ages was 24,234,021. No arrangement is made during peace times for the organisation and training of the entire body of the Militia.

The President is Commander-in-Chief of both the Army and Navy. The Secretary of War controls the Army with the aid of an Assistant Secretary and a Chief of Staff. The former has supervision of the procurement of all military supplies, and is charged with the mobilisation of industrial establishments for wartime needs, while the latter is entrusted with the general supervision of the Army.

Although the infantry during the war were chiefly armed with a modified Enfield rifle, the Springfield rifle, of American design, remains the standard small arm. The 75 mm. field gun and 155 mm. howitzer have been adopted as the principal light mobile artillery weapons.

The total casualties in the United States Army during the war amounted to 302,612, of whom 47,449 were killed in battle or died of wounds, while 9,169 died from other causes.

II. NAVY.

The part played by the United States Navy during the war, its great service to the Allies, and its whole-hearted co-operation with the British Navy are well known, having been amply described. In the STATESMAN'S YEAR BOOK last year many figures were given illustrating the work of the American Fleet during the hostilities. The United States entered upon a course of great naval expansion in 1916-17, which led to a considerable increase in expenditure, due mainly to the adoption for the first time of a continuous shipbuilding programme. The period was of 3 years, the total cost was to be about 103,000,000*l.*, and in the first year 4 battleships, 4 battle-cruisers, 4 scouts, 30 submarines and 20 destroyers were to be laid down. A new programme came before Congress, designed, according to Mr. Daniels, then Secretary of the Navy (January 1, 1919), to make the United States Navy "second to none." This programme included 6 additional battleships, 2 additional battle-cruisers, 6 additional scouts, and over 100 destroyers, submarines, &c. The scheme was included in the Estimates of 1919-20, beginning with a comparatively small appropriation. The Secretary repeatedly said that the United States must have the most powerful navy in the world. The Naval Appropriation Bill passed both Houses in July, 1919, with an estimated expenditure of 123,200,000*l.* The Naval Appropriation Bill of 1920-21 amounted to 484,406,269 dollars. Provision is made for all the big ships to complete the programme.

The grounds for the maintenance of the United States Navy at great strength were stated by the last Secretary on June 25, 1919. They are the need of maintaining fleets in both the Atlantic and the Pacific.

The control of naval affairs is vested in the Secretary of the Navy, a Cabinet officer, appointed by the President, with the approval of the Senate. The Assistant-Secretary, a civilian, also appointed by the President with the approval of the Senate, the Chief of Naval Operations, the chiefs of seven administrative bureaus, the Commandant of the Marine Corps, and the Judge-Advocate-General, are directly responsible to the Secretary. The administrative bureaus are: yards and docks, navigation, ordnance, construction and repair, steam engineering, supplies and accounts, and medicine and surgery.

The Government Naval Stations and constructive and repairing establishments are at Portsmouth, N.H.; Boston, Mass.; Brooklyn, N.Y.; League Island, Pa.; Washington, D.C.; Norfolk, Va.; Pensacola, Fla.; Mare Island, Cal.; and Puget Sound; and naval stations are at Newport, R.I.; New London, Conn.; Charleston, S.C.; Port Royal, S.C.; Key West, Fla.; New Orleans, La.; Guantanamo, Cuba; Guam; Hawaii; Tutuila, Samoa; Cavite, P.I.; Olongapo, P.I.

The following is a classified statement of the strength of the United States Navy on December 31, 1918, 1919, and 1920. Vessels unserviceable for war purposes, gunboats, yachts, tugs, training ships, &c., not included:—

	Effective at end of
	1918	1919	1920
Dreadnoughts . . . . .	19	19	19
Pre-Dreadnoughts . . . . .	23	20	19

Coastal Destroyers . . . . .	20	20	17
Torpedo boats . . . . .	19	17	17
Submarines . . . . .	92?	92?	110?

With reference to the foregoing summary, it may be noted that the total number of destroyers built, building, and provided for, is 332, and of submarines, 155. Money was not provided in the last appropriation account for 9 fleet submarines, additional to the above number.

A table follows of the United States fleet of vessels built and building. It is the practice to retain on the list for service a considerable number of old vessels of little value.

In the armament column, guns of lesser calibre than 5 inch are not given.

Ships in italics will not be completed by the end of the present year.

Ten Scout Cruisers are in hand, 7,100 tons, 35 knots.

Cheyenne ex Wyoming; Talahassee ex Florida; Ozark ex Arkansas; Tonopah ex Nevada; old armoured vessels, and a considerable number of old cruisers are retained in the list, some of these protected and others unprotected. They possess little value. The largest are the Columbia and Minneapolis, 7,450 tons, and the New Orleans and Albany, 3,450 tons. A large number of gunboats are in the Fleet. The most modern destroyers are of over 1,200 tons and have a speed of 35 knots. The largest submarines, K class (1916), are of 1,880–2,650 tons, and 24-9½ knots, but the R class (1918–19) are only of 420–550 tons and 15-9½ knots.

The public lands are divided into two great classes. The one class have a dollar and a quarter an acre designated as the minimum price, and the other two dollars and a half an acre, the latter being the alternate sections, reserved by the United States in land grants to railroads, &c. Titles to these lands may be acquired by location under the homestead laws; or, as to some classes, by purchase for cash. The homestead laws give the right to 160 acres of a-dollar-and-a-quarter lands to any citizen or applicant for citizenship who will actually settle upon and cultivate the land. The title is perfected by the issue of a patent after three years (law of June 6, 1912) of actual settlement. The only charges in the case of homestead entries are fees and commissions. On July 1, 1920, 553,101,888 acres were unappropriated and unreserved, of which 352,781,760 were in Alaska. During the fiscal year ended June 30, 1920, the area patented was 11,850,401 acres, of which 9,981,043 acres were patented under the homestead laws. It is provided by law that two sections, of 640 acres of land, in each 'township,' are reserved for common schools, so that the spread of education may go together with colonisation.

The power of Congress over the public territory is exclusive and universal, except so far as restrained by stipulations in the original cessions.

The Reclamation Service (organised under the Reclamation Act of June 17, 1902) is engaged in the investigation, construction, and operation of irrigation works in the arid and semi-arid States of the West. Thirty projects have been authorised for construction or operation for irrigation of lands in Arizona, California, Colorado, Idaho, Montana, Nebraska, Nevada, New Mexico, North Dakota, Oregon, South Dakota, Texas, Utah, Washington, and Wyoming. These projects aggregate 8,200,000 acres, and the major works aid in serving an additional 1,000,000 acres under private canals that generally get stored water from the Government reservoirs. The funds for this work have come chiefly from the sale of public lands, and the money expended is returned to the fund by easy payments of settlers, usually in twenty annual instalments without interest, in accordance with the Reclamation Extension Act of August 18, 1914. The Service has built on the 30 projects over 12,000 miles of canals, ditches and drains, including 100,000 canal structures, and involving the excavation of 174,000,000 cubic yards of materials. In connection with this work there have been constructed 100 storage and diversion dams with an aggregate volume of 18,700,000 cubic yards, including the Arrowrock dam, the highest in the world (349 feet), the Elephant Butte dam on the Rio Grande, forming the largest artificial irrigation reservoir in the United States. The net construction cost to June 30, 1919, was 123,853,000 dollars.

According to census returns the total acreage of farms and the improved acreage have been :—

The output of cane sugar in 1918-19 amounted to 568,800,000 pounds; and in 1919-20, 244,250,000 pounds; and the preliminary estimate for 1920-21 was 385,974,000 pounds. The beet sugar production in 1918-19 was 1,521,900,000 pounds; and in 1919-20 was 1,452,902,000 pounds, and the preliminary estimate for 1920-21 was 2,219,200,000 pounds.

Cotton acreage and production (excluding "linters"), for the last six years were :—

Years	Acres harvested	Bales (500 lbs. gross)	Years	Acres harvested	Bales (500 lbs. gross)
1915	31,412,000	11,192,000	1918	36,008,000	12,041,000

1917	33,841,000	11,802,000	1920	36,383,000	12,987,000

The estimated cotton production in 1920 was grown in the following States: Texas, 4,200,000 bales; South Carolina, 1,530,000; Georgia, 1,400,000; Oklahoma, 1,300,000; Arkansas, 1,160,000; Mississippi, 885,000; North Carolina, 840,000; Alabama, 660,000; Louisiana, 380,000; Tennessee, 310,000; California (including some grown in Mexico), 150,000; Arizona, 110,000; Missouri, 85,000; Virginia, 19,000; Florida, 18,000; all other, 15,000 bales.

In 1920 there were under tobacco 1,894,400 acres, which yielded 1,508,064,000 lbs. of tobacco. The chief tobacco-growing States were Kentucky, 550,000 acres, yielding 467,500,000 lbs.; North Carolina, 582,000 acres, yielding 384,120,000 lbs.; Virginia, 243,000 acres, yielding 177,390,000 lbs.; Tennessee, 117,000 acres, yielding 85,410,000 lbs.; South Carolina, 103,000 acres, yielding 66,950,000 lbs.; Wisconsin, 50,000 acres, yielding 62,400,000 lbs.; Ohio, 63,000 acres, yielding 60,480,000 lbs.; Pennsylvania, 40,000 acres, yielding 60,400,000 lbs.; Connecticut, 24,400 acres, yielding 36,112,000 lbs.; Maryland, 35,000 acres, yielding 30,625,000 lbs.; Indiana, 20,000 acres, yielding 18,000,000 lbs.; Georgia, 26,700 acres, yielding 16,020,000 lbs.; Massachusetts, 10,200 acres, yielding 15,810,000 lbs.; West Virginia, 13,000 acres, yielding 10,400,000 lbs.

The following table exhibits the number of farm animals in 1900 (June 1), 1910 (April 15), 1920 and 1921 (January 1):—

Live Stock	1900 (Census)	1910 (Census)	1920 (Estimate)	1921 (Estimate)
Horses . . .	18,267,020	19,833,113	20,785,000	20,183,000

Sheep . . .	61,503,713	52,447,861	47,114,000	45,067,000
Swine . . .	62,868,041	58,185,676	71,727,000	68,649,000

The value of farm animals in the United States on January 1, 1921, was:—Cattle other than milch cows, 1,346,665,000 dollars; milch cows, 1,491,900,000 dollars; total value of all farm animals, 6,235,569,000 dollars.

In 1914, the factories used 8,431,426,426 lbs. of milk and 2,384,034,699 lbs. of cream, made 786,003,489 lbs. of butter, 377,513,409 lbs. of cheese, and 883,112,901 lbs. of condensed milk. The total value of the products manufactured was 370,688,431 dollars.

In 1901 the estimated production of wool was 302,502,328 pounds ; in 1918, 298,870,000 pounds ; in 1919, 313,638,000 pounds ; and in 1920, 302,207,000 pounds.

The census reports for 1914 show that the value of canned vegetables was 84,413,667 dollars ; of canned fruits, 24,897,174 dollars ; of dried fruits, 34,771,912 dollars ; of canned soups, 7,877,057 dollars ; and of all other products, including preserves, pickles, sauces, cider, and vinegar produced in canning establishments, 6,055,892 dollars. The total value of canned products, in 1914, was 158,015,702 dollars.

II. FORESTS AND FORESTRY.

The United States forests cover 463,000,000 acres, or about one-fifth of the whole country. Forests publicly owned contain one-fifth of all timber standing. Forests privately owned contain at least four-fifths of the standing timber. The original forests of the United States covered 822,000,000 acres, with a stand of not less than 5,200 billion feet of merchantable timber, of which about 2,215 billion board feet still remains. There are five great forest regions—the northern, the southern, the central, the Rocky Mountain, and the Pacific. The standing timber in the United States is being cut and destroyed at the rate of 26 billion cubic feet per year, or more than four times as fast as new timber is growing.

The heavy demands for timber have been rapidly pushing the great centres of lumber industry toward the South and West. In consequence, the State of Washington now leads in lumber production, followed closely by Louisiana, Oregon, Mississippi, and Arkansas.

The annual consumption, including waste in logging and in manufacture, is more than 26,000,000,000 cubic feet of wood. It includes over 110,000,000 cords of firewood, more than 40,000,000,000 board feet of lumber, 650,000,000 feet logs for veneer, 87,500,000 ties, nearly 1,300,000,000 staves, over 82,000,000 sets of heading, over 330,000,000 barrel hoops, over 4,550,000 cords of native pulpwood, 250,000,000 cubic feet of round mine timbers, 900,000,000 fence posts, 1,550,000 cords of wood for distillation, 1,250,000 cords for tanning extract, 200,000 cords for excelsior, and 4,250,000 telegraph and telephone poles, 8,850,000,000 shingles, and 2,375,000,000 lath.

The present net area of the national forests, including those in Alaska and Porto Rico and lands acquired by purchase in the White Mountains and Southern Appalachian regions for national forest purposes, is 156,032,053 acres.

The operating costs of the national forests are about 4,000,000 dollars annually. For improvements (roads, trails, telephone lines, bridges, cabins, etc.) there is an annual appropriation of 400,000 dollars, plus ten per cent, of the receipts. In addition, the Federal Aid Roads Act in 1916, made available 1,000,000 dollars yearly for ten years, for roads and trails within or partly within the national forests. There was also included in the Post Office appropriation bill, which was approved February 28, 1919, an item of 3,000,000 dollars a year for three years for road work, which became available immediately on the approval of the bill. The total regular appropriation for the support of the Forest Service, including its diversified investigative and co-operative work, for the fiscal year 1921 is 6,295,822 dollars, including 300,000 dollars for fire-fighting and 125,000 dollars for co-operative fire protection.

The receipts from the several sources for the last three fiscal years were as follows :—

Fiscal Year	Timber	Grazing	Special Uses, &c.	All sources
	Dollars	Dollars	Dollars	Dollars
1918	1,633,649	1,725,823	215,459	3,574,930
1919	1,540,100	2,609,170	209,145	4,358,414
1920	2,067,395	2,486,040	240,046	4,793,482

Under the law 25 per cent. of the receipts is paid to the States in which the national forests are located, to be expended for roads and schools. This is in addition to the 10 per cent. of the receipts already mentioned as available for improvements, which is expended under the direction of the Secretary of Agriculture for road and trail building in national forests in co-operation with State authorities or otherwise.

The grazing receipts for 1920 were paid by the holders of 81,301 permits to graze 2,035,432 cattle, 88,284 horses, and 4,066 swine, and of 6,178 permits to graze 7,280,584 sheep and 53,685 goats.

The following table shows, by States, the total cut of timber from the national forests in the fiscal year 1920 :

III. MINING.

The following are the statistics of the metallic products of the United States in 1918 and 1919 (long tons, 2,240 lbs. ; short tons, 2,000 lbs.).

The values are: for iron, at point of production; for nickel and platinum, the values at New York City; for copper, lead and zinc, the values are those of sales; for quicksilver, the value at San Francisco.

The following are statistics of the principal non-metallic minerals for two years:—

Non-Metallic Products	Quantity (1918)	Value (1918)	9)

The total value of the mineral products in 1916 was 3,513,972,000 dollars; in 1917, 5,007,937,000 dollars.

The total production of coal from 1807, the date of the earliest record, to the close of 1919 was 13,539,214,655 short tons.

The precious metals are raised mainly in California, Colorado, Alaska, and Nevada for gold, and Montana, Utah, Nevada, Idaho, and Colorado for silver. The production of gold and silver in the United States from 1792 to 1919 was as follows :—

Year	Gold		Silver
	Quantity	Value	Quantity	Value
	Ozs. troy	Dollars	Ozs. troy	Dollars
1792-1847 . . .	1,187,170	24,587,000	309,500	404,500

Total . . .	195,420,295	4,089,690,200	2,502,701,841	2,024,859,318

Precious stones are found in considerable varieties in the United States the total production was valued in 1916 at 217,793 dollars, in 1917 at 131,012 dollars, in 1918 at 106,523 dollars, and in 1919 at 123,046 dollars. The stones found are sapphires (in Montana), turquoise, tourmaline, garnets, beryl, agates, amethyst, ruby, topaz, &c.

IV. MANUFACTURES.

The following table shows the condition of manufacturing industries in the United States as reported at each census from 1880 to 1915. The censuses of 1905, 1910, and 1915, unlike the earlier censuses, did not include hand and neighbourhood industries, but were confined to establishments conducted under the factory system or producing goods for the general market. The statistics for each census cover the preceding calendar year :—

Census	Number of Establishments	Capital	Persons employed	Value of products	Cost of materials
		Dollars		Dollars	Dollars
1880 1	253 852	2,790,278,000	2,732,595	5,369,579,000	3,396,824,000

1 Including hand and neighbourhood industries.
2 Excluding hand and neighbourhood industries.
3 Includes officers, firm members, clerks and wage earners.
4 Includes salaried officials, clerks, &c., and wage earners ; does not include proprietors and firm members.

The censuses of 1890, 1900, and 1905 cover Alaska ; the census of 1910 covers Alaska, Hawaii, and Porto Rico ; the census of 1914 covers Continental United States.

The census of manufactures for 1909 and 1914 (not including Alaska, Hawaii, and Porto Rico) were confined to establishments under the factory system, to the exclusion of neighbourhood industries and hand trades such as custom dress-making, tailoring, carpentering, grist and saw-milling. The census results were as follows :—

In 1914 there were 353 blast furnaces in active plants with a daily capacity of 109,426 tons ; in 1909, 388, with a daily capacity of 101,447 tons. In 1914 the output of pig-iron was 23,269,731 tons, value 312,761,617 dollars ; in 1909 it was 25,651,798 tons, value 387,830,443 dollars. Bessemer, or modified Bessemer steel plants in 1914 had 115 converters ; in 1909, 112 ; total daily capacity of ingots or direct castings, double turn, in 1914, 53,106 tons ; in 1909, 49,005 tons. Open-hearth steel plants in 1914 had 864 basic and acid furnaces ; in 1909, 706 ; in 1904, 489 ; daily capacity of steel, in 1914, 93,650 tons ; in 1909, 62,161 tons. The total value of products of the steel works and rolling mills in 1914 was 918,664,565 dollars ; in 1909, 985,722,534 dollars. The value of output comprised :—

The output of tin plates in 1914 was of the value of 60,258,024 dollars ; in 1909, 38,259,885 dollars. The output of terne plates in 1914 was of the value of 6,012,321 dollars ; in 1909, 7,555,261 dollars.

The output of sawed lumber in 1909 amounted to the value of 684,479,859 dollars ; in 1904, to 435,708,084 dollars. The output of the leather, tanned, and curried industry, in 1914, was valued at 367,201,705 dollars ; in 1909, at 327,874,187 dollars. The boot and shoe products manufactured in 1914 were valued at 501,760,458 dollars ; in 1909, at 442,630,726 dollars ; leather gloves and mittens, products, 1914, 21,614,109 dollars ; 1909, 23,630,598 dollars.

The value of the output of paper and wood-pulp products in 1914 was 332,147,175 dollars ; in 1909, 267,656,964 dollars. The value of the output of printing and publishing industries including bookbinding and blank books, engraving steel and copper plate, lithographing, book and job music, and newspapers and periodicals, in 1914, were valued at 901,534,801 dollars ; in 1909, 737,876,087 dollars.

The output of the chemical and allied industries for 1914 and 1909, comprised products to the values shown below :—

In the United States the values are fixed not according to average prices, but according to invoices or shipping papers, which the importers and exporters have to produce. For imports the invoices are signed by an American Consul ; for exports the shipping papers are signed by the exporter or agents at the port of shipment. The quantities and values are determined by declarations.

The ' most favoured nation ' treatment in commerce between Great Britain and the United States was agreed to for 4 years by the treaty of 1815, was extended for 10 years by the treaty of 1818, and indefinitely (subject to 12 months' notice) by that of 1827.

Internal Communications.

According to Poor's Railway Manual, the extent of railways in operation in 1830 was 23 miles ; it rose to 52,922 miles in 1870 ; to 167,191 miles in 1890. According to the Interstate Commerce Commission's corresponding mileage, it was (year ended on June 30) in 1900, 198,964 ; in 1910, 249,992 ; in 1914, 263,547 ; in 1915, 264,378 ; in 1916 (year ended December 31), 266,381 ; in 1917, 266,059 ; in 1918, 264,233. The ordinary gauge is 4 ft. 8½ in.

The following table, based on the figures of the Interstate Commerce Commission, shows some railway statistics for 4 years :—

Year	Mileage	Miles of line		Railways having annual operating revenues above 1,000,000 dollars
		per 100 square miles of territory	per 10,000 of the population	Number of passengers	Weight of freights in tons

Currency and Credit.

The monetary system is monometallic, and has been so since 1873, gold being the standard.

The Act of February 28, 1878, commonly known as the Bland-Allison Act, required the purchase by the Secretary of the Treasury of silver bullion at the market price of silver of not less than 2,000,000 dollars or more than 4,000,000 dollars worth per month, the same to be coined as fast as so purchased into silver dollars. 378,166,793 silver dollars were coined under the Bland-Allison Act. The Act of July 14, 1890, known as the Sherman Act, required the purchase of 4,500,000 ounces of fine silver monthly, which was paid for in Treasury notes issued as the silver was purchased. The total amount of silver purchased under this Act from August 13, 1890, to November 1, 1893, date of repeal of the purchasing clause, was 168,674,682 five ounces, costing 155,931,002 dollars, the coinage value of which was 218,084,438 in silver dollars. From the bullion purchased under the Act of July 14, 1890, there were coined to December 31, 1901, 149,710,163 silver dollars. Under the Act of March 3, 1891 for re-coinage of trade dollars, 5,078,472 silver dollars were coined, making a total of 532,955,428 standard silver dollars coined from March 1, 1878, to December 31, 1901.

There is no Central National Bank in the United States, but the Federal Reserve Act, adopted on December 23, 1913, set up a Federal Reserve Bank in each of the 12 districts into which the United States is divided for the purpose. The 12 Federal Reserve Banks and their paid-in capital (50 per cent. of the subscribed capital) on December 30, 1920, are shown as follows:—

District	Federal Reserve Bank	Paid-in Capital (in thousands of dollars)	District	Federal Reserve Bank	Paid-in Capital (in thousands of dollars)
1	Boston . . .	7,718	8	St. Louis . . .	4,354
2	New York . . .	26,376	9	Minneapolis . . .	3,457
3	Philadelphia . . .	3,485	10	Kansas City . . .	4,456
4	Cleveland . . .	10,654	11	Dallas . . .	4,098
5	Richmond . . .	5,269	12	San Francisco . . .	6,927
6	Atlanta . . .	4,053
7	Chicago . . .	13,913		Total . . .	99,770

Every National Bank is required to become a stockholder, to the extent of 6 per cent. of its capital and surplus (of which 50 per cent. must be paid in), in the Federal Reserve Bank of the district in which it is situated. State banks and Trust companies may also become member banks under certain conditions. On December 31, 1920, there were 8,168 National Banks members of the Federal Reserve System and 1,489 Member State Banks and Trust Companies giving a total of 9,657 member banks. The largest district was Chicago with 1,423 member banks, the smallest Boston with 439 members.

The Federal Reserve Banks, except for open market purchases, do no banking business with the public, but only with their member banks. They may issue Federal Reserve notes against gold or commercial paper with a minimum gold reserve of 40 per cent. The whole system is under the control of the Federal Reserve Board, composed of the Secretary of the Treasury and the Controller of the Currency, both ex-officio, together with five other appointed members.

The following is a statement of the combined resources and liabilities of the 12 Federal Reserve Banks on December 30, 1920, and December 31, 1919:

Money, Weights, and Measures.

The dollar of 100 cents is of the par value of 49·32*d.*, or 4·8665 dollars to the pound sterling.

The monetary unit, in accordance with the monetary law of March 14, 1900, is the gold dollar of 25·8 grains (or 1·6718 gramme) ·900 fine. The Government undertakes to maintain parity between gold and silver coin, and a fund of 150,000,000 dollars in gold has been established for the repayment of United States notes and Treasury notes in gold at sight.

Gold coins in common use are 20, 10 and 5-dollar pieces called double eagles, and half-eagles. The eagle weighs 258 grains or 16·71818 grammes ·900 fine, and therefore contains 232·2 grains or 15·0464 grammes of fine gold.

The silver dollar weighs 412·5 grains or 26·730 grammes ·900 fine, and therefore contains 371·25 grains or 24·057 grammes of fine silver. Subsidiary silver coins contain 347·22 grains of fine silver per dollar.

British weights and measures are usually employed, but the old Winchester gallon and bushel are used instead of the new or imperial standards. They are :—

Wine Gallon = 0·83333 gallon.

Ale Gallon = 1·01695 „

Bushel = 0·9692 imperial bushel.

Instead of the British cwt. a Cental, of 100 pounds, issued ; the short ton contains 2,000 lbs. ; the long ton, 2,240 lbs.

1910	1,228,832	908,282	2,138,098	41·7

By sex and race the population in 1910 was thus distributed :—

—	White	Negro	Asiatic	Indian	Total
Male . . .	625,891	447,794	70	454	1,074,209
Female . . .	602,941	460,488	—	455	1,063,884
Total . . .	1,228,832	908,282	70	909	2,138,098

The foreign-born numbered 19,286, of whom 3,599 were German, 2,348 English, 1,167 Irish, and 1,120 Scotch. The large cities (census population in 1920), Birmingham 178,270; Mobile, 60,777; Montgomery (capital), 43,464. Of the total population in 1910, 17·3 per cent. was urban.

Religion, Instruction and Charity.—Protestant churches are in the ascendency in the State. The order of strength of different religious bodies is: Baptist, Methodist, Roman Catholic, Presbyterian, Disciples or Christians.

The 6,755 public elementary schools in 1918 had 2,957 male and 9,605 female teachers, and 573,762 enrolled pupils. The 196 public high schools had 796 teachers and 31,233 pupils in 1918. The 7 public normal schools in 1918 had 139 teachers and 2,402 pupils. The 9 agricultural schools in 1917 had 45 teachers and 1,605 enrolled pupils. Total expenditure on education (1918) 6 066,204 dollars (excluding private and denominational schools). For superior and professional education there are various institutions, the most important (1919) being (for men and both sexes):—

Founded	Institutions	Instructors	Students
1831	University of Alabama (State)	125	1,860
1859	Southern University, Greensboro' (M.E.So.)	12	103
1872	Alabama Polytechnic Institute	80	930
1909	Woman's College of Alabama	27	282
1880	Tuskegee Normal & Industrial Inst. (Coloured)	206	1,736

Within the State are 48 benevolent institutions (hospitals, homes, orphanages, &c.). On January 1, 1910, the number of paupers in almshouses was 739, being 34·6 per 100,000 of the population, and of prisoners in penal institutions, 3,687, being 172·4 per 100,000 of the population.

Finance.—The revenue is derived partly from occupation taxes, but mostly from taxes on property of all kinds, the assessment being made at 60 per cent. of the cash value for State and county purposes by the county assessors on the sworn statements of the taxpayers.

The receipts and disbursements in the year 1919, were:—

	Dollars
Balance in hand, Oct. 1, 1918 . . . . .	273,052
Receipts, 1918-19 . . . . .	12,686,004
Total, 1919 . . . . .	12,959,056
Disbursements, 1919 . . . . .	12,702,744
Balance, Sept. 30, 1919 . . . . .	256,312

The bonded debt of the State in 1919 amounted to 15,351,702 dollars. The assessed value of real property and of personal property in 1919 was 675,162,002 dollars.

According to the Council of the Corporation of Foreign Bondholders, Alabama has a defaulted debt estimated at 30,000,000 dollars, but the State denies any liability for such estimated indebtedness, having legally adjudicated all claims. The amount so claimed is made up of unauthorised charges, for which no lawful warrant ever existed.

Production and Industry.—Alabama is largely an agricultural State; the number of farms in 1910 was 262,901; the farm area was 20,732,312 acres, of which 9,693,581 acres were improved land; the value of all farm property was 370,138,429 dollars. The chief crops are maize, 67,149,000 bushels in 1920; wheat, 653,000 bushels; oats, 6,551,000 bushels; potatoes, 3,216,000 bushels. Other crops are hay and vegetables. Tobacco, 1,500,000 pounds. Sugar is largely grown and manufactured. On January 1, 1921, the live-stock comprised 158,000 horses, 322,000 mules, 507,000 milch cows, 791,000 other cattle, 123,000 sheep, and 1,861,000 swine. In 1918 the area under cotton was 2,451,000 acres; the yield was 820,000 bales of cotton, valued at 110,700,000 dollars. The wool clip for 1919 yielded 405,000 pounds.

In 1910 there were 3,398 manufacturing establishments with capital amounting to 173,180,038 dollars, employing 72,148 wage-earners who earned 27,284,000 dollars, used raw material worth 83,448,000 dollars, and turned out products valued at 145,962,000 dollars. The iron and steel output was worth 21,236,000 dollars; cotton goods, 22,212,000 dollars; lumber and timber products, 26,058,000 dollars; other large industries being foundry work, railway-car construction, the manufacture of fertilisers, of cotton-seed oil and cake, and of turpentine and resin.

The chief port of Alabama is Mobile, through which there is a large trade. The exports comprise raw cotton (over 12,062,000 dollars annually), timber, lumber, &c. (6,800,000), cereals and flour (2,950,000), and lard (1,800,000), besides cattle, sheep and other animals, nuts, hops, fruit, flax-seed and oil, sugar, tobacco, &c. The port is the outlet not only for products of Alabama, but for those of neighbouring States. The imports at Mobile are mostly from Mexico and consist largely of bananas, other tropical fruits, and sisal grass. The harbour channel is deepened to 22½ ft.

The larger rivers in the State are navigable (except at low water) for several hundred miles; the Alabama river for 400 miles. In 1917 the railways within the State had a length of 5,420 miles, exclusive of 365 miles of electric railway.

In 1916 there were 16 savings banks in the State with 229,000 depositors who had to their credit 13,311,009 dollars, making an average of 58·33 dollars to each depositor.

ARIZONA.

Government.—Arizona was admitted into the Union as a Sovereign State on February 14, 1912. In the laws which the first State Legislature of Arizona enacted, the affairs of State government are placed under direct control of the people, who can at any time exercise the machinery of the Initiative, Referendum and the Recall. Among the amendments to the Constitution upon which the people voted in 1912 was one giving the State power to engage in industrial pursuits.

The State Senate consists of 19 members, and the House of Representatives 35. The State is represented in the National Congress by one member of the lower house and two Senators.

Governor.—Thomas E. Campbell, 1921–22 (6,500 dollars).

Secretary of State.—Ernest H. Hall.

The State capital is Phoenix (population in 1920, 29,053). Tucson had a population of 20,286 in 1920. The State is divided into 14 counties.

Area, Population and Instruction.—Area of 113,956 square miles, of which 146 square miles is water. The Indian reservations had an area of 29,017 square miles in 1919, with a population of 42,346. According to the 1920 census, population is 333,903.

The population in four census years was :—

Years	Population	Per Sq. Mile	Years	Population	Per Sq. Mile
1890	88,243	0·8	1910	204,354	1·8
1900	122,931	1·1	1920	333,273	2·9

In 1910 the population by race and sex was :—

	White	Negro	Asiatic	Indian	Total
Male . . . . .	100,871	1,054	16,649		18,574
Female . . . . .	70,597	955	14,228		85,780
Total . . . . .	171,468	2,009	1,676	29,201	204,354

In 1910, 48,765 were foreign born, of whom 3,500 were English, 29,987 Mexicans, 2,666 Canadians, and 1,846 Germans. Of the total population in 1910, 31·0 per cent. was urban.

The order of strength of religious bodies is : Roman Catholic, Latter-day Saints, Presbyterian, Methodist, Congregationalists.

School attendance is compulsory for children between the ages of 8 to 16 years during the entire school term. Instruction is free for children from 6 to 21 years of age. The enrolled pupils in 1919-20 in the grade and high schools was 73,546, and there were 2,175 teachers. Two public normal schools at Tempe and Flagstaff had 685 students in the year 1919-20. Total expenditure for elementary and high schools 1919-20 was 6,339,288 dollars. The State University of Arizona, at Tucson, founded in 1891, had 107 professors and 860 students in 1919-20. There is a State Agricultural School also at Tucson.

Charity.—The State has reform and industrial schools and 11 penal and benevolent institutions. On January 1, 1910, the number of paupers in almshouses was 271, being 132·6 per 100,000 of population, and of prisoners in penal institutions 645, being 315·6 per 100,000 of the population. There were 539 patients at the State Hospital for the Insane for the year ending June 30, 1920.

Finance.—Revenues are derived mainly from the general property tax levied on all property not specially exempted. The revenue and expenditure in the year ending June 30, 1920, were :—

	Dollars
Balance in hand July 1, 1919 . . . . .	74,826
Receipts, 1919-20 . . . . .	8,747,419
Total . . . . .	8,821,745
Disbursements, 1919-20 . . . . .	6,847,091

The bonded debt, June 30, 1920, amounted to 2,991,925 dollars. The net value of taxable real and personal property amounted to 884,455,682 dollars for 1920.

Production and Industry.—Arizona, with its dry climate, is not well suited for agriculture, but along the watercourses and where irrigation is used the soil is productive. In Maricopa County 30,000 acres of long staple Egyptian cotton is under cultivation. The wide pasture-lands in this State are favourable for the rearing of cattle and sheep. Several large reservoirs for the storage of water have been and are being constructed by the United States and State Government, notably the Roosevelt dam, which supplies water to the rich Salt River Valley District, of which Phoenix is the principal city. The Government completed the Yuma project, by which the waters of the lower Colorado River are brought to the Arizona side under the river by means of an inverted syphon.

In 1919 Arizona contained 21,000 farms, of which 4,000 were Indian. There were 600,000 acres, of improved land. The most important crops were as follows :—Cotton, 110,000 bales ; wheat, 864,000 bushels ; corn, 644,000 bushels ; barley, 680,000 bushels ; hay, 380,000 tons ; oats, 481,000 bushels ; beans, 75,000 bushels ; and potatoes, 450,000 bushels. On January 1, 1921, there were 120,000 horses, 12,000 mules, 45,000 milk cows, and 1,100,000 other cattle, 1,200,000 sheep, and 40,000 swine. The wool clip in 1919 amounted to 5,366,000 pounds of wool. The national forests in the State have an area (1919) of 11,154,923 acres, and just recently the Grand Canyon has been made a National Park.

The mining industries of the State are important. The output of gold, silver, copper, lead, and zinc from mines in Arizona in 1919 had a total value or about 108,707,000 dollars. The production of gold was 4,281,000 dollars. The mine output of silver in 1919 was 4,927,000 ounces, and the valuation 5,479,800 dollars. The mine output of copper 522,000,000 and the valuation was 98,296,000 dollars. The mine production of lead amounted to 10,100,000 pounds, and the value of it was 575,000 dollars. The output of recoverable zinc was about 1,717,000 in 1919, and the total valuation 125,000 dollars.

The capital invested in manufacturing industries in the State in 1910 amounted to 32,873,000 dollars ; the raw material used cost 33,600,000 dollars, and the output was valued at 50,257,000 dollars. By far the most important of the industries is copper smelting and refining, for which there were 8 establishments with a capital of 21,487,000 dollars, employing an average number of 3,129 wage-earners, using material costing 12,486,782 dollars, and giving an output valued at 29,242,000 dollars. Other industries are car construction and repair by railway companies showing an output worth 2,394,000 dollars ; lumber and timber working, and flour and grist milling with an output of 1,082,000 dollars.

The lower course of the Colorado river is the only navigable waterway of the State. In 1920 there were 2,477 miles of railroad, the principal lines being the Southern Pacific, the Santa Fé Pacific, and the Santa Fé Prescott and Phoenix. There are 57 miles of electric railway.

In 1920 there were 3 savings banks in the State with 10,000 depositors, who had to their credit 3,915,524 dollars.

CALIFORNIA.

Constitution and Government.—California, though unexplored and practically unknown to Europeans, was from its discovery down to 1846 politically associated with Mexico. On July 5, 1846, the American flag was hoisted at Monterey, and a proclamation was issued declaring California to be a portion of the United States, and on February 2, 1849, by the treaty of Guadalupe, the territory was formally ceded by Mexico to the United States, and was admitted to the Union September 9, 1850.

The State Legislature is composed of the Senate of forty members, elected for terms of four years—half the number being elected each two years—and the Assembly, eighty members, elected for two years. Regular sessions are held once in two years.

The qualifications for eligibility to the Senate or Assembly are citizenship of the State for three years and residence in the district for one year.

California is represented in Congress by 2 Senators and 11 Representatives.

Governor.—William D. Stephens, 1919–23 (10,000 dollars).

Secretary of State.—F. C. Jordan.

California is divided into fifty-eight counties, one of which—San Francisco—has a combined county and city government. In each county government the legislative authority is vested in a board of five members elected from districts. The seat of the State Government is at Sacramento.

Area and Population.—Area 158,297 square miles (2,645 square miles being water). Population on Jan. 1, 1920, 3,426,861.

The population at the date of each of the Federal censuses was as follows :

In 1919 the death-rate was 14·2 per 1,000; the birth-rate, 17·5; and the marriage-rate, 12.

Religion and Instruction.—In the matter of religious association all churches are represented in California, the Roman Catholic being much stronger than any other single church; next are Methodists, Presbyterians, Baptists, and Congregationalists.

Education is compulsory for children 8–16 years of age for at least five months in the year. In the 3,453 State elementary schools there were, in 1917–18, 448,495 enrolled pupils (232,108 boys and 216,387 girls), with 14,249 teachers. In 1917–18, the 311 public high schools had 4,811 teachers and 126,759 pupils (54,107 boys and 72,652 girls); eight State normal schools had 315 teachers and 4,322 students. In 1917–18, 27,356 pupils (13,251 boys and 14,099 girls), with 672 teachers, were enrolled in the public kindergartens. The total expenditure for education was (1918) 33,813,821 dollars.

There are in California two great universities—the State University, or University of California, at Berkeley (established in 1868) and Leland Stanford Junior University. The former comprises the colleges of letters and science, commerce, mechanics, mining, civil engineering, chemistry and agriculture, as well as the Lick Astronomical Department. In 1920 the University had at Berkeley 1,521 professors and teachers with 9,670 students. Leland Stanford Junior University near Palo Alto was chartered in 1885, and opened its doors to students in 1891. An endowment, now amounting to about 22,000,000 dollars in interest-bearing funds, besides large landed estates, was given by Mr. and Mrs. Leland Stanford in memory of their son. In 1920 it had 376 professors and teachers and 2,949 students. The University of Southern California at Los Angeles (Meth. Episcopal) had 378 instructors and 3,874 students (1920). There are several other prosperous colleges in the State.

California is the only State in the American Union having a comprehensive library system, at the head of which stands the State Library at Sacramento with about 275,000 volumes (including the Sutro Branch at San Francisco).

Charity.—In the State there are 153 benevolent institutions. On January 1, 1910, the number of paupers in almshouses was 4,646, being 195·4 per 100,000 of the population, and of prisoners in penal institutions, 4,155, being 174·8 per 100,000 of the population.

Finance, Defence.—For the fiscal year ending June 30, 1920, the receipts and disbursements of all State funds was as follows :—

	Dollars
Cash on hand, July 1, 1919 . . . .	12,650,128
Receipts, 1919-20 . . . .	58,742,199
Total . . . .	71,392,327
Disbursements, 1919-20 , . . .	61,908,140
Cash in hand, June 30, 1920 . . . .	9,484,187

The assessed value of taxable property on June 30, 1920, was 4,555,445,447 dollars. The net bonded debt amounted to 50,259,500 dollars on June 30, 1920.

The Mare Island Navy Yard, the most important of the Federal naval establishments on the Pacific coast, is situated in California about 25 miles north of San Francisco, and there are United States Army posts at San Francisco, Benicia, Monterey, and San Diego.

Agriculture and Forestry.—At the date of the last Federal census (1910) there were 88,197 farms, comprising 27,931,444 acres, of which 11,389,894 acres were improved. The value of farms was 1,614,694,584 dollars, and the value of the annual product 153,111,013 dollars. Total forest area (1919) is 18,314,659 acres. California is the only State in which the best European varieties of grapes are successfully cultivated, and this gives great importance to the wine product, but owing to the prohibition law the latter must soon be discontinued. Extending seven hundred miles from north to south, and being intersected by several ranges of mountains, California has almost every variety of climate, from the very wet to the very dry, and from the temperate to the semi-tropical. Irrigation is extensively practised, being necessary in the more arid districts and beneficial in a larger area.

The wheat industry has declined in relative importance, while horticulture has made rapid strides. The cereal crops in 1920 were maize, 3,150,000 bushels; wheat, 9,100,000 bushels; oats, 5,425,000 bushels; barley, 28,750,000 bushels. Apples, pears, peaches, figs, apricots, plums, grapes, oranges, lemons, and other fruits are grown in vast quantities. Olives, honey, hops, walnuts, and almonds are also largely produced.

On January 1, 1921, the farm animals were 380,000 horses, 57,000 mules, 577,000 milch cows, 1,683,000 other cattle, 2,950,000 sheep, and 930,000 swine. The wool clip (1919) produced 13,298,000 pounds of wool. There are 9 ostrich farms in the State.

Mining, Manufactures, etc.—Gold was first discovered in 1848. In 1919 the gold output was valued at 17,335,100 dollars, and the silver output valued at 1,244,464 dollars. Other mining products were (1919) copper, 22,162,605 pounds (4,122,246 dollars), and 4,139,562 pounds of lead (219,397 dollars); quicksilver, 15,200 flasks (of 75 pounds net), valued at 1,353,381 dollars. California produces more petroleum than any other State of the Union, with the occasional exception of Oklahoma; in 1919 the output reached 101,182,962 barrels, valued at 142,610,563 dollars. Granite and stone, &c., were valued at 4,286,643 dollars; Portland cement (4,645,299 barrels), valued at 8,591,990 dollars. From California comes all of the borax produced in the United States. The output in 1919 was 66,791 short tons, valued at 1,717,192 dollars. The State also produced pyrite, 146,024 short tons (540,300 dollars); salt, 633,994 tons (896,963 dollars); mineral waters, 2,233,842 gallons (340,117 dollars); magnesite, 44,696 short tons, value 452,094 dollars. Bismuth, asbestos, manganese, lithium, tungsten, chromium, infusorial earth, ochre, and a great variety of precious stones are found in the State. In 1919 there were 50 different mineral substances, exclusive of a segregation of the various stones grouped under Gems. The value of all the minerals produced in 1918 was 199,758,837 dollars; in 1919, 196,473,560 dollars.

In California in 1910 there were 7,659 manufacturing establishments with an aggregate capital of 537,134,000 dollars, employing 18,203 salaried officials and 115,296 wage-earners, using materials costing 325,238,000 dollars, and giving an output worth 529,761,000 dollars. Statistics of the more important industries are given in THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK for 1916, p. 494.

The coast and river fisheries are important, giving employment to 5,000 persons. A year's catch is thirty to forty million pounds, worth about 4,000,000 dollars. Salmon is the most valuable variety of fish taken, but as many as one hundred and thirty different varieties of fish are found in the markets of San Francisco.

Commerce and Transportation.—The chief commercial port of California is San Francisco, through which in 1919 the imports amounted to the value of 238,027,065 dollars, and the exports to 240,517,739 dollars.

Railways have been built in California to the extent of 8,355 miles (1919) for steam roads and about 2,715 miles (1919) for electric railways. San Francisco is now the terminus of three trans-continental railways.

In September, 1920, there were 106 savings banks in the State, and 227 savings departments of departmental banks with 1,459,058 depositors who had to their credit 855,355,090 dollars, being an average of 586 dollars to each depositor.

British Consul-General at San Francisco.—A. C. Ross, C. B.

British Consul.—Wellesley Moore.

There are British Vice-Consuls at San Francisco, Los Angeles, and San Diego.

CONNECTICUT.

Government.—Connecticut has been an organised commonwealth since 1637. In 1639 a written constitution was adopted which, it is claimed, was the first in the history of the world formed by a social compact. This was confirmed by a charter from Charles II. in 1662, and replaced in 1818 by a State Constitution, framed that year by a constitutional convention. Connecticut was one of the thirteen original States of the Union.

The General Assembly consists of a Senate and a House of Representatives. All male citizens (with necessary exceptions) 21 years of age, resident in the State for a year and in the town for six months preceding the election, have the right of suffrage provided that they can read the Constitution in English. The Senate at present consists of 35 members, the House of Representatives of 258 members. Members of each House are elected for the term of two years, and each receives 300 dollars for that term and one mileage each way for each session, at the rate of 25 cents per mile. Legislative sessions are biennial.

Governor.—Everett J. Lake, 1921–23 (5,000 dollars).

Secretary.—Donald J. Warner.

The State is represented in the Federal Congress by two Senators and five Representatives. For local administration the State is divided into eight counties which are sub-divided into towns within which are cities and boroughs. The State Capital is Hartford.

Area, Population, and Instruction.—Area 5,004 square miles, of ## DELAWARE.

Government.—Delaware is one of the thirteen original States of the Union. The General Assembly consists of a Senate of 17 members elected for four years and a House of Representatives of 35 members elected for two years. Senators must be 27 years of age, and Representatives 24; both must be citizens who have resided three years in the State, and one year in the electoral district immediately preceding the election.

With necessary exceptions all citizens, registered as voters, who have resided in the State one year, in the county three months, and in the district 30 days next preceding the election have the right to vote. But no person who shall attain the age of 21 after the year 1900 has the right to vote unless he is able to read English and to write his name; United States soldiers and sailors merely stationed in the State are not considered resident.

Delaware is represented in Congress by two Senators and one Representative.

Governor.—William D. Denney, 1921–25. (4,000 dollars.)

Secretary of State.—Alden R. Benson.

The State capital is Dover (population 3,720 in 1915). Delaware is divided into three counties.

Area, Population, Instruction.—Area 2,370 square miles, of which 405 square miles is water. Census population on Jan. 1, 1920, 223,003.

Years	White <sup>1</sup>	Negro	Total	Per sq. mile
1800	49,852	14,421	64,273	32·7
1900	154,038	30,697	184,735	94·0
1910	171,141	31,181	202,322	103·0
1920	192,662	30,341	223,003	113·5

In 1910 the population by sex and colour was :—

—	White	Negro	Asiatic	Indian	Total
Male . .	87,387	16,011	34	3	103,435
Female . .	83,715	15,170	—	2	98,887
Total .	171,102	31,181	34	5	202,322

The foreign-born (1910) numbered 17,420, of whom 2,893 were Irish, 2,572 German, 1,555 English, and 2,893 Italian.

The largest city in the State is Wilmington, with a census population of 110,168 in 1920. Other towns (1915), Dover, 3,720; Milford, 2,603. Of the total population in 1910, 48·0 per cent. was urban.

The most numerous denominations of the State are, Methodist, Roman Catholic, Presbyterian, Episcopalian, and Baptist.

The State has free public schools and compulsory school attendance, separate schools being provided for white and coloured children. In 1919-20, the 446 public schools had 961 teachers and 37,135 enrolled pupils. The 26 high schools had 173 teachers and 3,045 pupils. Total expenditure for school purposes, 1,738,884 dollars. The State has two normal schools, agricultural and mechanical colleges and at Newark, Delaware College, founded in 1834, having, in 1919, 52 professors and 296 students. A college for coloured students at Dover has 6 professors and 136 students.

Charity.—The State has a hospital and an industrial school for girls. It grants assistance to indigent soldiers and sailors, and to widows with children of school age, and contributes to institutions for the support and training of the deaf, dumb, and blind outside the State. An institution for the care of the feeble-minded is being erected in the State.

In each county the sole charge of the poor and of almshouses is in the hands of trustees of the poor. They appoint the overseer of their almshouse, who must provide employment for the inmates. County liability for support of paupers is determined by settlement, which is obtained in various ways (by the applicant having held public office for a year, having paid poor taxes for any two years, having paid a rent of at least 50 dollars for a year, &c.). Parents and grand-parents are liable for support of pauper children, and vice versa. There is a penalty for bringing paupers into a county.

Finance.—For the year ending January 13, 1921, the receipts and disbursements of the State General Fund were :—

	Dollars
Cash in hand, January 12, 1920 . . . . .	207,616
Receipts 1920-21 . . . . .	885,130

Expenditure, 1920-21 . . . . .	992,890
Cash in hand January 13, 1921 . . . . .	99,856

On January 13, 1920, the outstanding debt amounted to 2,066,785 dollars.

Production and Industry.—Delaware is mainly an agricultural State, 85 per cent. of the land being in farms, which in 1920 numbered 10,140. and had a total area of 944,511 acres, 653,052 acres being improved land. The total value of all farm property was 80,137,614 dollars. The chief crops are maize and wheat, but fruit and tomato-growing are important. About 16,000 acres are devoted to tomatoes. Delaware stands second in the States of the Union in the quantity of tomatoes packed. On January 1, 1921, the State had 33,000 horses, 6,000 mules, 8,000 sheep, 68,000 pigs, 45,000 milch cows, and 22,000 other cattle. The wool clip in 1919 yielded 31,000 pounds.

The State has oyster and other fisheries which are receiving increasing attention.

The mineral resources of Delaware are not extensive.

The capital invested in manufacturing industries in the State in 1910 amounted to 60,906,000 dollars ; the persons employed (owners, firm members, clerks, &c., and wage-earners) numbered 23,984; the cost of materials used was 30,938,000 dollars, and the output was valued at 52,840,000 dollars. Statistics of the chief industries are given in THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK for 1916, p. 503.

The leather output comprised 11,005,292 goatskins valued at 10,232,463 dollars. Other industries are fruit-canning, and the manufacture of hosiery and knitted goods.

In 1916 the length of railway in the State was 335 miles, besides 153 miles of electric street railway track.

There is an active coastwise trade, particularly with New York, which is connected with Wilmington by a line of steamers. Chesapeake Bay and Delaware Bay are connected by a canal. There is some foreign commerce direct through Wilmington.

In 1919, there were 2 savings banks in the State, with 45,555 depositors who had to their credit 17,422,000 dollars, being 382.43 dollars to each depositor.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

Government.—The District of Columbia is the seat of Government of the United States, and consists of an area of about 70 square miles which was ceded by the State of Maryland to the United States as a site for the National Capital. It was established under the authority and direction of Acts of Congress approved July 16, 1790, and March 3, 1791, which were passed to give effect to a clause in the eighth section of the first article of the Constitution of the United States, giving Congress the power:—

‘To exercise exclusive legislation in all cases whatsoever over such district (not exceeding ten miles square) as may, by cession of particular States and the acceptance of Congress, become the seat of the Government of the United States, and to exercise like authority over all places purchased, by the consent of the legislature of the State in which the same shall be, for the erection of forts, magazines, arsenals, dockyards, and other needful buildings.’

The authority of the United States over it became vested on the first Monday of December, 1800.

The present form of local government, which dates from July 1, 1878, is a municipal corporation, and is administered by a board of three Commissioners having in general equal powers and duties. Two of these Commissioners are appointed from civil life by the President of the United States, and confirmed by the Senate of the United States, for a term of three years each. The other Commissioner is detailed from time to time by the President of the United States from the Engineer Corps of the United States Army. This Commissioner is selected from among the captains or officers of higher grade having served at least fifteen years in the Corps of Engineers of the Army of the United States. The Commissioners are in a general way vested with jurisdiction covering all the ordinary features of municipal government, except that the Congress of the United States, only, has authority to enact legislation and appropriate money for the municipal expenses. Congress has, by sundry statutes, empowered the commissioners to make and enforce reasonable and usual police regulations for the protection of lives, health, quiet, &c., of all persons, and the protection of all property within the District, and other regulations of a municipal nature. They have also been constituted a 'Public Utilities Commission.'

Secretary to the Board of Commissioners.—Daniel E. Garges.

Area and Population.—The area of the District of Columbia originally was about ten miles square, but by the retrocession to the State of Virginia, in the year 1846, of the portion derived from that State, was reduced to 69.245 square miles, 60.01 of which are land.

The population in 1800 numbered 14,093; in 1860, 75,080; in 1880, 177,624; in 1900, 278,718; in 1910, 331,069; in 1914, 353,378. Population on February 21, 1920, was 437,571, of whom approximately 115,000 were negroes or of negro descent.

A portion of the District of Columbia embracing 6,654 acres is known as the City of Washington. But that name is, and has been since May 31, 1871, a geographical distinction only, as the territory it includes is not a municipality separate from the rest of the District, but is subject to the same government in every respect.

Religion and Instruction.—The most numerous religious bodies are : Roman Catholic, Baptist, Methodist, Protestant, Episcopal, Presbyterian, Lutheran, and Christian Science.

The public schools of the District in 1920 had 1,442 white teacher and 45,775 white pupils, and 654 negro teachers and 19,523 negro or coloured pupils. Total number of pupils, 65,298. There were 9 public high schools with 383 teachers and 8,470 pupils; and 26 private schools with 2,400 pupils. For the instruction of teachers there were 2 public normal schools with 25 teachers and 199 pupils. Total expenditure on public education (1920), 4,155,790 dollars, exclusive of sites and buildings.

Superior education is given in Georgetown University, an institution under the management of the Jesuit Order, founded in 1795; it has 200 professors and 1,900 pupils: the George Washington University, non-sectarian, founded in 1821, has 249 instructors, and 3,333 students; the Howard University, principally engaged in the higher education of negroes, was founded in 1867, and has 121 professors and 1,688 pupils; the Catholic University, a post-graduate institution, was founded in 1884, and has 82 professors and 531 students.

Finance.—The revenues of the District are derived from the general real property tax, taxes on corporations and companies, and licences for various businesses and from appropriations by the United States of approximately three sevenths of the total revenues.

In 1920 the finance of the District of Columbia was as follows :—

	Dollars
Balance, July 1, 1919 . . .	7,337,851
Receipts to July 1, 1920 . . .	20,467,301
Total . . .	27,805,152
Disbursements, 1919-20 . . .	19,504,578
Balance, July 1, 1920 . . .	8,300,574

The net bonded debt at the end of the year amounted to 2,152,626 dollars. The District of Columbia has no other debt.

In 1920 the assessed valuation of the real property within the municipality amounted to 426,623,630 dollars; and of tangible personal property such as furniture, horses, wagons, ships, etc., 91,982,374 dollars and intangible personal property such as stocks, bonds, etc., 323,031,277 dollars; total 841,637,281 dollars.

Production and Industry.—The District has considerable industries, the products of which are mainly for local consumption. The United States census of manufactures in 1919 showed that (excluding government works) the capital invested in such industries amounted to 62,906,202 dollars; the salaried officials, superintendents, managers and clerks numbered 3,208; and the average number of wage-earners employed during the year was 10,577; the raw material used cost 31,036,917 dollars, and the output was valued at 67,936,000 dollars.

Within the District are 215 miles (1920) of electric street railway track, as single track.

On June 30, 1920, there were in the District 45 national banks, trust companies and savings banks. Their aggregate resources and liabilities balanced at 216,778,000 dollars. Their paid-in capital stock stood at 20,572,000 dollars; surplus funds at 11,187,000 dollars; individual deposits at 153,297,000 dollars; United States deposits at 1,722,000 dollars; national bank notes outstanding, 5,742,000 dollars; and loans and discounts at 116,017,000 dollars.

Of the total, the foreign-born (1910) numbered 33,842, of whom 1,896 were from the West Indies, 2,917 from England, 2,442 from Germany, 4,538 from Italy, 1,698 from Canada, and 4,183 from Spain. The largest cities in the State are Jacksonville, with a census population of 91,558 in 1920 ; Tampa, 51,608 ; Pensacola, 31,035 ; Miami, 29,549 ; Key West, 18,749. Of the total population in 1915, 44·2 per cent. was urban.

Of the church members of the State 41·6 per cent. are Baptist, and 37·2 per cent. Methodist. Others are chiefly Roman Catholics, Protestant Episcopalians, and Presbyterians.

Attendance at school is not compulsory. There are no provisions as to religious instruction in public schools. Separate schools are provided for white and coloured children.

In 1920 the 2,584 public elementary schools had 6,296 teachers and 212,465 enrolled pupils. In 125 public high schools there were 525 teachers and 12,695 pupils in 1920. Total expenditure on education (1918), 4,674,111 dollars. The State provides higher education in a University of the State of Florida at Gainesville (founded 1884) with (1919) 43 professors and 988 students, and a State College for Women (founded at Tallahassee in 1905), with 598 students ; Rollins College at Winter Park (founded 1885) has 25 professors and 175 students. There is also the John B. Stetson (Baptist) University at De Land (founded in 1887), with 32 professors and 649 students.

On January 1, 1910, the number of paupers in almshouses was 207, being 27·5 per 100,000 of the population, and of prisoners in penal institutions 1836, being 243·9 per 100,000 of the population. Number of convicts in 1915, 1,082.

Finance.—For the year 1920 the receipts and disbursements amounted to the following sums :—

	Dollars
Balance Jan. 1, 1919 . . . . .	1,825,899
Receipts in 1920 . . . . .	8,835,345
Total . . . . .	10,661,244
Disbursements in 1920 . . . . .	8,390,294
Balance Jan. 1, 1921 . . . . .	2,270,950

On January 1, 1921, the public debt of the State consisted of refunding bonds to the amount of 601,567 dollars at three per cent. interest, all of which were held by State educational funds. The assessed value of real property for 1920 is 253,785,338 dollars; for personal property, 104,664,992 dollars; railroad and telegraph property, 51,138,608 dollars; making a total for 1920 of 409,588,938 dollars.

Production and Industry.—Florida is largely a peninsula stretching from north to south, between the Atlantic Ocean and the Gulf of Mexico. The surface is generally level. No elevation exceeds 301 feet above the level of the sea. The climate is semi-tropical, but liable at times to severe frost which destroys the fruit crops. Agriculture is pursued generally in all parts of the State. In 1918 there were 133,347 farms, with a total acreage of 4,878,344, of which 1,886,277 acres were improved. Total value of all farm property in 1918, 141,262,776 dollars. The chief products are pineapples and oranges, the former fruit being grown almost nowhere else in the United States. Other crops are tobacco, 4,620,000 pounds in 1920; rice, 72,000 bushels in 1920; besides maize, oats, peas, and peanuts. In 1920 the cotton area was 101,000 acres, and the yield 18,000 bales, valued at 1,530,000 dollars. On January 1, 1921, the State had 58,000 horses, 40,000 mules, 89,000 sheep, 1,493,000 pigs, 156,000 milch cows, and 917,000 other cattle. The wool clip in 1919 yielded 460,000 lbs. Forests of valuable timber cover three-fourths of the State, and large quantities of pitch-pine are exported as well as oak timber for ship-building. Tar, turpentine, and rosin are prepared in increasing quantities. The total forest area on June 30, 1919, was 808,268 acres.

The chief mineral product is phosphate rock; Fullers' earth, lime, and mineral waters are also produced.

Florida, with its long coast line, has extensive fisheries, which, though not fully developed, are more important than those of any other Gulf State. The chief fishery products are shad, red snappers, mullet, turtles, and sponges, of which Florida has almost a monopoly. Pensacola is said to be the most important fresh fish market on the Gulf. From this port tar, resin, and turpentine are exported to the value of over 500,000 sterling annually, and also cotton (1,806,000 lbs.), tobacco, and phosphate produced in other States.

The manufacturing industries of Florida in the year 1917 had 5,493 establishments, with a capital invested of 65,061,746 dollars; the average number of wage-earners was 69,955; the amount paid in wages was 40,075,037 dollars.

The tobacco industries are prosperous, and Key West and Tampa compete with Cuba in the manufacture of fine cigars. In 1917 the output of cigars numbered 469,301,042, valued at 30,127,941 dollars, and of cigarettes 7,800,000, valued at 154,000 dollars.

The State has facilities for transportation both by land and water. A large trade is carried on through Pensacola, where the domestic exports were largely cottons; other merchandise being forest products, phosphate, tobacco, wheat, flour, &c. The harbour channel is now 30 feet deep at low tide. At Jacksonville harbour improvements are being carried out. In 1917 there were 5,248 miles of steam railway, and 206 miles (1919) of electric railway. The Atlantic Coast railway and the Louisville and Nashville railway run through the State. The Florida East Coast Railway extension to Key West was opened January 22nd, 1912. The U.S. Government is deepening the channel at Key West and making other improvements.

In 1920 there were 3 savings banks in the State, with 6,931 depositors who had to their credit 1,486,609 dollars, being 214·40 dollars to each depositor.

On January 1, 1920, the bonded debt of the State amounted to 5,818,202 dollars, including an unfunded debt of 90,202 dollars on which interest at seven per cent. per annum was paid to the University trustees. According to the Council of the Corporation of Foreign Bondholders the State has a defaulted debt estimated at 13,000,000 dollars. The assessed valuation of real and personal property in 1919 amounted to 1,079,236,826 dollars.

Production and Industry.—In 1910 there were 291,027 farms in the State, having an area of 26,953,413 acres, of which 12,298,017 acres were improved land. Total value of all farm property in 1910 was 580,546,381 dollars; 37 per cent. of the farms are operated by negroes, and 86 per cent. of negro farms are rented. The negro farmers raise little but cotton, in the production of which Georgia ranks second among the States, while it is the largest producer of sea-island cotton. For 1920 the cotton yield was 1,400,000 bales as against 1,730,000 bales in 1919, the area under cultivation being 4,958,000 acres and the value of the yield 107,100,000 dollars. In the northern part of the State the cultivation of cereals is of importance, corn being grown on five times the area of other cereals. The yield of corn (maize) in the State in 1920 was 76,500,000 bushels. Oats and wheat are also grown, while rice is an important product of coast counties (29,000 bushels in 1920). The growth of sugar cane is increasing. Forests of pines, &c., cover 42,000 sq. miles. On January 1, 1921, the farm animals were 132,000 horses, 347,000 mules, 470,000 milch cows, 763,000 other cattle, 119,000 sheep, 3,102,000 swine. The wool clip in 1919 yielded 422,000 lbs.

The fisheries of the State are of some importance, especially the oyster and shad fisheries.

The State has considerable mineral resources, gold, silver, coal, iron, and manganese ores, iron pyrites, bauxite, graphite, lime, ochre, infusorial earth, natural cement, talc and soapstone, marble and other quarries, and mineral springs being worked. The marble of Georgia has a high reputation all over the States. The clay-working industries (bricks, tiles, pottery) are also important.

In 1914 Georgia had 4,639 manufacturing establishments with a total capital of 258,325,811 dollars, employing 118,565 persons (salaried and wage-earning), using material costing 160,088,609 dollars, and giving an output worth 346,452,413 dollars.

The chief manufacturing industries are given in THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK for 1916, p. 511.

In 1914 there were 153 cotton mills, 41,881 looms and 2,092,834 spindles.

The means of transportation by sea and land are ample. The principal port is Savannah, which has 8 miles of river frontage, and which, by harbour improvements, is to be made accessible to vessels of large tonnage. The river is being deepened, and now has a mean low water depth of 26 feet, and a depth of 32 at high tide on the bar. From this port in 1919-20 the imports amounted to 39,199,507 dollars, and the exports to 311,171,389 dollars, chiefly cotton, cotton seed, and meal and cake of cotton seed, besides turpentine and lumber.

The railways in the State have a length (1918) of 7,555 miles, besides 491 miles (1919) of electric railway.

In 1918, Georgia had 23 savings banks with 48,000 depositors who had to their credit 11,874,016 dollars, being 247.38 dollars to each depositor.

IDAHO.

Government.—Idaho was admitted into the Union on July 3, 1890. The Legislature consists of a Senate of 37 members, and a House of Representatives of 65 members, all the legislators being elected for two years. Sessions are held biennially. The electorate of the State consists of citizens, both male and female, over the age of 21 years, who have resided in the State over six months. The State is represented in Congress by two Senators and two Representatives.

Governor.—D. W. Davis, 1921–23 (5,000 dollars).

Secretary of State.—William T. Dougherty.

The State is divided into 41 counties. The capital is Boise (census population, 21,393 in 1920). Pocatello had a population of 14,961 in 1920.

Area, Population, Religion, Instruction.—Area 83,888 square miles, of which 534 square miles is water. Area of Indian reservations in 1919, 85 square miles, with a population of 4,066. In the last 4 census years the total population was :—1880, 32,610 (0·4) ; 1890, 84,385 (1·1) ; 1900, 161,772 (1·9) 1910, 325,594 (3·9).

Census population on January 1, 1920, 431,866.

In 1910 the population by sex and birth was :—

	White.	Negro	Asiatic	Indian	Total
Male . . . . .	181,237	398	2,144	1,767	185,546

Total . . . . .	319,221	651	2,234	3,488	325,594

Of the total population 40,427 were foreign-born, 4,983 being English, 5,049 German, 5,361 Canadian, 4,985 Swedish, 2,566 Norwegian, and 1,782 Irish. Of the total population in 1910, 21·5 per cent. was urban.

The population is partly Mormon, other religious denominations, in the order of their numbers, being Catholics, Methodists, Presbyterians, and Disciples or Christians.

For supervision of the public schools there is a State Board of Education. In 1919–20 the 1,771 public elementary schools had 3,752 teachers, and 102,358 enrolled pupils. The 177 high schools had 5,756 boys and 7,442 girls ; number of teachers, 127 men and 230 women. The two public normal schools had 372 pupils in 1920. Total expenditure on education (1919–20) 9,036,693 dollars. Superior instruction is given in the college of Idaho at Caldwell, the State University of Idaho, founded at Moscow in 1892, which had 90 professors and 1,330 students in 1919. The State has an industrial training school, and a school for the deaf and blind. There are also 5 sectarian colleges or schools to which, however, pupils are admitted without respect to their religious belief.

On January 1, 1910, the number of paupers in almshouses was 97, being 29·8 per 100,000 of the population, and of prisoners in penal institutions 287, being 88·1 per 100,000 of the population.

Finance.—For the biennium ending September 30, 1920, the receipts and disbursements were as follows :—

	Dollars
Cash in hand, October 1, 1918 . . . . .	705,187
Receipts, 1918-20 . . . . .	18,461,455

Disbursements, 1918-20 . . . . .	16,967,502
Balance, September 30, 1920 . . . . .	2,199,140

On Sept. 30, 1920, the State bonded debt amounted to 3,880,750 dollars, and the assessed value of real and personal property for 1920 to 377,865,027 dollars.

Production and Industry.—A great part of the State is naturally arid, but extensive irrigation works have been carried out irrigating 3,266,386 acres, and there are now being constructed works to cost 18,811,000 dollars for the irrigation of 480,000 acres in the State. In 1910 the number of farms was 30,807, with a total area of 5,283,604 acres, of which 2,778,740 acres were improved land. Total value of all farm property in 1910, 305,317,185 dollars. The most important crop is wheat, to which, in 1920, 1,050,000 acres were devoted, the yield amounting to 23,600,000 bushels. Other crops in 1920 were oats, 8,000,000 bushels; barley, 4,256,000 bushels; besides potatoes and hay. Fruit and vegetables are also grown. There is an active live-stock industry, the number of horses on January 1, 1921, being 262,000; mules, 5,000; sheep, 2,623,000; milch cows, 137,000; other cattle, 505,000. The wool clip (1919) was 22,145,000 pounds. The State contains (June 30, 1919) 17,606,792 acres of national forest.

The State has rich deposits of gold, silver, and other metals. About 7,000 miners are employed. Coal is mined, but not to a great extent. Iron, nickel, cobalt, mica, phosphate rock, antimony, tungsten, granite, sandstone, limestone and lime, pumice, and salt are worked more or less.

Besides the agricultural and mining industries the State has manufactures of considerable importance. In 1910 there were together 725 industrial establishments, employing a total of 9,909 persons, including 8,220 wage-earners, with a total capital of 32,477,000 dollars, cost of material being 9,920,000 dollars and value of output 22,400,000 dollars. The chief of these industries are the working of lumber and timber, (capital, 17,872,000 dollars; wage-earners, 5,212; cost of material, 3,345,000 dollars and value of product, 10,689,000 dollars), and flour and grist milling (capital, 2,038,000 dollars; wage-earners, 125; cost of material, 2,025,000 dollars, and value of product, 2,480,000 dollars). Within the State there are 260 lumber mills; one at Potlatch is said to be the largest in the world and can cut 750,000 feet daily. Idaho has also 46 flour mills.

The State has (1917) 2,861 miles of railway, besides 113 miles (1919) of electric railway track. The principal railways crossing the State are the Great Northern, the Northern Pacific, and the Oregon Short Line. In 1915 (May 5), the Celilo Canal, on the Oregon side of the Columbia River, was opened and Idaho now has a seaport, Lewiston. Vessels can pass from the Pacific to Lewiston, a distance of 480 miles.

ILLINOIS.

Government.—Illinois was first discovered by Joliet and Marquette, two French explorers, in 1673. In 1763 the country was ceded by the French to the British. In 1788, Great Britain recognised the title of the United States to Illinois, which was admitted into the Union on December 3, 1818. The Legislature consists of a Senate of 51 members elected for four years (about half of whom retire every two years), and a House of Representatives of 153 members elected for two years. Sessions are biennial. Qualified electors are all citizens 21 years of age, resident in the State one year, in the county 90 days, and in the district 30 days next before the election.

The State is divided into Senatorial districts, in each of which one Senator and three Representatives are chosen. For the election of Representatives each elector has three votes, of which he may cast one for each of three candidates, or one and a half for each of two, or all three for one candidate.

Governor.—Len Small, 1921–25 (12,000 dollars).

Secretary of State.—Louis L. Emmerson.

The Constitution in effect in Illinois at the present time is that of 1870. In 1917 the 50th General Assembly adopted a resolution to submit to the electors of the State the question of calling a Constitutional Convention. This resolution was approved by a majority of all votes cast at the election on November 5, 1918. In 1919 the 51st General Assembly passed an Act calling a "Convention to revise, alter or amend the Constitution of the State of Illinois" to meet January 6, 1920. The revision, alteration or amendments prepared by the Convention will be submitted to the electors for ratification or rejection at an election within six months after the adjournment of the Convention.

Illinois is divided into 102 counties, the most important being Cook County, within which is the city of Chicago. The State capital is Springfield.

Area, Population.—Area of 56,665 square miles, of which 622 square miles is water. Census population on Jan. 1, 1920, 6,485,280.

The central portion of the State contains the "blue grass region" which, having a rich soil, produces cereals, grasses and fruits of fine quality. In 1920 the maize crop amounted to 100,650,000 bushels; and the wheat crop to 5,610,000 bushels, other farm products being hay, potatoes, sweet potatoes, water-melons, and fruits of many sorts. Besides hemp is grown some cotton, and also sorghum. The chief crop, however, is tobacco, under which in 1920 were 550,000 acres, yielding 467,500,000 pounds, valued at 70,125,000 dollars.

Stock raising is important in Kentucky, which has long been famous for its horses. The live stock on January 1, 1921, consisted of 420,000 horses, 250,000 mules, 466,000 milch cows, 562,000 other cattle, 1,187,000 sheep, and 1,429,000 swine. In 1919 the wool clip yielded 3,211,000 pounds of wool.

The principal mineral product of Kentucky is coal. There is also a also a considerable output of petroleum. The quarries also yield sandstone and limestone, and the clay working establishments turned out bricks, tiles, pottery, &c. Other mineral products are iron, lead, stone, barytes, lime, natural cement, asphalt, natural gas, and mineral waters.

In 1910 the census of manufactures showed there were 4,776 manufacturing establishments with an aggregate capital of 172,779,000 dollars; 65,400 wage-earners who earned 27,888,000 dollars, and turned out manufactures worth 228,754,000 dollars. The output of the flour and grist industries was valued at 22,365,000 dollars; lumber and timber products, 21,381,000 dollars; tobacco, 18,598,000 dollars; spirits and ales, 44,360,000 dollars; men's clothing, 3,276,000 dollars.

The Ohio and Mississippi rivers provide natural facilities for transport. In 1917 the State had 3,858 miles of railway besides 494 miles (1919) of electric railway track. The principal railway lines are the Louisville and Nashville, the Chesapeake and Ohio, the Illinois Central, and the Southern.

LOUISIANA

Government.—Louisiana was admitted into the Union on April 8, 1812. The Legislature consists of a Senate of 41 members and a House of Representatives of 115 members, Senators and Representatives being chosen for four years. Sessions are biennial.

Qualified electors are (with the usual exceptions) all registered male citizens resident in the State for two years and in the parish one year next before the election. For registration, however, the citizen must show his ability to read and write, or must own property worth 300 dollars, or must prove that his father or grandfather was entitled to a vote on January 1, 1867, but in this case the applicant must have resided in the State for five years next before the election. The “father or grandfather” clause is intended to secure white supremacy.

The State is represented in Congress by two Senators and seven Representatives.

Governor.—John M. Parker, 1920–1924 (7,500 dollars).

Secretary.—James J. Bailey.

Louisiana is divided into 60 parishes (corresponding with the counties of other States). The State Capital is Baton Rouge.

Area, Population, Instruction.—Area, 48,506 square miles (3,097 square miles being water). Census population on January 1, 1920, 1,798,509.

Most of the white population are descended from the early French settlers. In 1910 the foreign-born numbered 51,782, of whom 20,233 were Italian (39·1 per cent.), 8,918 German, 5,302 French, 3,753 Irish, and 2,056 English. The largest city in the State is New Orleans with a census population of 387,219 in 1920. Other cities are Shreveport, 43,874 ; Baton Rouge (Capital), 21,782. Of the total population in 1910, 30·0 per cent. was urban.

Most of the Southern States are strenuously Protestant, but over 61 per cent. of the population of Louisiana are Roman Catholic. Of Protestants in the State, Baptists and Methodists are the most numerous, then Protestant Episcopalians and Presbyterians.

According to the State constitution no funds raised for the support of the public schools of the State shall be appropriated to or used for the support of any private or sectarian school. City school systems are under separate organisation. In 1919–20 the 3,076 elementary public schools had 9,106 teachers and 354,079 enrolled pupils; 205 public high schools had 906 teachers and 14,392 pupils. The 5 public normal schools had 153 teachers and 4,276 students in 1919. Expenditure on education (1919–20) was 7,572,960 dollars. Superior instruction is given in the Louisiana State University and Agricultural and Mechanical College. The university was opened in 1860, and the college in 1874; on June 1, 1877, they were by law united into one and the same institution with its seat at Baton Rouge. In 1920 it had 81 professors and 1,503 students. Tulane University (founded in 1834) in New Orleans had, in 1919, 348 professors and 2,908 students. This university has State support to the extent of the remission of certain taxes. The Roman Catholics have Jefferson College at Convent with 19 professors and 180 students, and a University (Loyola University, founded 1904) at New Orleans with 65 professors and 530 students. The New Orleans University (established 1874) is for coloured persons. It had 20 instructors and 492 enrolled students in 1920. There is an Industrial Institute at Ruston and another at Lafayette. The State has also an institution for the deaf and dumb and another for the blind, both at Baton Rouge.

Louisiana has 56 benevolent institutions, most of which have been provided by private persons or ecclesiastical bodies. They comprise ten hospitals (four public), 25 orphanages, 17 homes for adults (two public), and three schools for the deaf and blind (two public).

On January 1, 1910, the number of paupers in almshouses was 187, being 11·3 per 100,000 of the population, and of prisoners in penal institutions, 2,400, being 144·9 per 100,000 of the population.

Finance, Defence.—For the year 1919 the receipts and the disbursements were :—

	Dollars
Balance in hand, January 1, 1919 . . . . .	1,944,629
Receipts, 1919 . . . . .	15,863,852
Total . . . . .	17,808,481
Disbursements, 1919 . . . . .	16,404,803
Balance December 31, 1919 . . . . .	1,403,678

The bonded and floating debt of the State up to March 1 1919, amounted to 14,345,981 dollars. According to the Council of the Corporation of Foreign Bondholders the State has a defaulted debt estimated at 6 million dollars. The assessed valuation of property in 1919 amounted to 726,291,145 dollars.

The militia or State National Guard, with headquarters at Baton Rouge, consists of infantry, artillery, and cavalry, with a mounted signal corps. There is also a naval militia.

Production, Industry.—The surface of the State is chiefly a great plain sloping from north and north-east to the Mississippi delta. The State is divided into two parts, the uplands and the alluvial and swamp regions of the coast. A delta occupies about one-third of the total area. Louisiana surpasses the other States in extent of navigable waterways—3,782 miles. The Gulf coast line is 1,250 miles in length. The climate is semi-tropical, the summers being long and hot, the winters more severe than in corresponding latitudes. Agriculture is the leading industry.

In 1910 the State had 120,546 farms with an area of 10,439,481 acres, of which 5,276,016 acres was improved land. The total value of all farm property in 1910 was 301,220,988 dollars. The products and manufactures of Louisiana are very various. The chief crops in 1920 were corn, 1,906,000 acres, producing 36,955,000 bushels; rice grown on 500,000 acres, yielding 36,595,000 bushels. For 1920 the cotton area was 1,442,000 acres, and the yield 380,000 bales, valued at 26,980,000 dollars. Oats, potatoes, and tobacco are also grown, but not extensively. On January 1, 1921, the State contained 211,000 horses, 166 mules, 209,000 sheep, 1,250,000 swine, and 382,000 milch cows. In 1920 the wool clip yielded 612,000 pounds.

Louisiana has valuable fisheries. Oyster reefs extend almost continuously along the coast, and the oyster fisheries are the most valuable south of Virginia, the area suitable to planting and growing oysters being over 7,000 sq. miles.

Rich sulphur mines are found in Louisiana, and wells for the extraction of sulphur by means of hot water and air at the surface are in operation. Another mineral worked is rock salt.

The manufacturing industries are chiefly those associated with the products of the State: sugar, lumber, cotton-seed, rice. In 1910 there were 2,516 manufacturing establishments which employed altogether 8,108 clerks, &c., and 76,165 wage-earners. The material used cost 134,865,000 dollars, and the output was valued at 223,949,000 dollars. The statistics (1910 census) of the more important industries are given in THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK for 1916, p. 531.

Brewing, confectionery, printing, and other works are also prosperous.

A large international trade is carried on through the port of New Orleans, where in 1920 the imports amounted to 252,587,790 dollars, and the exports to 589,409,222 dollars. The exports consisted of cotton and cotton-seed products, wheat, flour, rice, and other produce.

The State has ample facilities for traffic, having, besides 24,900 miles of public roads, the Mississippi and other waterways, with 4,794 miles of navigable water. In 1917 the railways in the State had a length of 5,363 miles, besides (1919) 318 miles of electric railway track. The principal lines are operated by the Illinois Central, Queen and Crescent, Louisville and Nashville, Texas and Pacific, and the Southern Pacific systems.

In 1918, there were 14 savings banks in the State with 100,000 depositors having to their credit 38,863,885 dollars, which is 338.64 dollars to each depositor. The bank clearings at New Orleans in 1918 amounted to 2,575,655,000 dollars.

MAINE.

Government.—Maine was admitted into the Union on March 3, 1820. There is a Legislature of two Houses, the Senate, consisting of 31 members, and the House of Representatives with 151 members, both Houses being elected at the same time for two years. The suffrage is possessed by all registered male citizens of the United States, 21 years of age, who can read English and write his own name; but paupers and un-taxed Indians have no vote.

Governor.—Percival P. Baxter, 1921-23 (5,000 dollars).

Secretary of State.—Frank W. Ball.

For local government the State is divided into 16 counties, subdivided into towns, cities, plantations and various unincorporated places. The State Capital is Augusta.

Area, Population, Education.—Area, 33,040 square miles, of which 29,895 square miles is land. Census population on January 1, 1920, 768,014.

Years	Population		Years	Population
	Total	Per sq. mile		Total	Per sq. mile

1900	694,466	23.2	1920	768,014	25.7

The population by sex and race in 1910 was :—

—	White	Negro	Asiatic	Indian	Total
Male . . .	375,766	700	586		377,052
Female . . .	364,229	633	427		365,019
Total . . .	739,995	1,368	121	892	742,371

The foreign-born population numbered 110,133, of whom 40,905 were English Canadian, 35,013 French Canadian, 7,890 Irish and 5,645 English. Within the State, especially in the north, there is a strong French and French-speaking element.

The largest city in the State is Portland with an census population of 69,196 in 1920. Other cities and towns (with population in 1920) are: Lewiston, 31,707; Bangor, 25,948; Biddeford, 18,008; Auburn, 16,985; Augusta, 14,144; Bath, 14,731; Waterville, 13,351. Of the total population in 1910, 55.9 per cent. was urban.

The largest religious body is Roman Catholic; then come Baptists, Congregationalists, Methodists, and Protestant Episcopalians.

Education is free for pupils from 5 to 21 years of age, and compulsory from 5 to 14. Cities and towns have elective school attendance committees. In 1920 the 4,567 public elementary schools had 4,779 teachers and 116,719 enrolled pupils. The 207 public high schools had 892 teachers and 19,225 pupils. For the training of teachers in 1920 there were five public Normal Schools with 53 teachers and 560 students. The University of Maine, founded in 1868 at Orono, had (1919) 155 professors and teacher and 691 students. It is endowed by and receives large appropriations from the State. Bowdoin College, founded in 1794 at Brunswick, had (1919) 28 professors and 425 students, Bates College at Lewiston 29 professors and 447 students, and Colby College at Waterville 25 professors and 360 students.

Public schools are mainly supported by appropriations from the towns or cities and from the State, and by the income from school funds. Total expenditure on education in 1920, 6,606,121 dollars.

On January 1, 1910, the number of paupers in almshouses was 945, being 127·3 per 100,000 of the population, and of prisoners in penal institutions, 730, being 98·3 per 100,000 of the population.

Finance.—For 1920 (January 1, to December 31) the amount of revenue and expenditure was as follows :—

	Dollars
Balance from 1919 . . . . .	2,217,995
Receipts in 1920 . . . . .	16,677,644
<hr/>

The bonded debt on January 1, 1921 amounted to 8,902,300 dollars.

In 1920 the assessed value of real property amounted to 484,754,706 dollars, and of personal property to 152,648,727 dollars.

Production, Commerce, Railways.—The products of Maine are derived chiefly from agriculture, forestry, quarrying, and fisheries. The State has, besides other attractions, excellent hunting and fishing, and is a favourite summer resort. The soil is not generally fertile, an important exception being that of the Aroostook valley, which is well adapted for the growing of fruit and vegetables. In 1910 the State contained 60,016 farms with a total acreage of 6,296,859 acres, of which 2,360,657 acres was improved land. The total value of all farm property in 1910 was 199,271,998 dollars. The chief crops are oats (1920), 4,974,000 bushels ; maize, 226,000 bushels ; buckwheat, potatoes, and hay. On January 1, 1921, the farm animals comprised 104,000 horses, 171,000 milch cows, 129,000 other cattle, 140,000 sheep, and 97,000 swine. The wool clip in 1919 amounted to 936,000 pounds of wool.

The commercial mineral products of Maine are, considering the size and population of the State, few in number and of minor importance. Only in one mineral, feldspar, has Maine ranked first during the last 3 years.

In the State are large granite works, cotton mills, paper mills, manufactures of clothing, &c. In 1910, according to the census of manufactures of that year, the State had 3,546 manufacturing establishments employing all together 4,860 salaried officials and 79,955 wage-earners. Their aggregate capital amounted to 202,260,000 dollars ; the cost of raw materials in a year to 97,101,000 dollars, and the value of a year's output to 176,029,000 dollars. Statistics of some of the leading industries are given in THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK for 1916, p. 535.

In 1917 there were 2,269 miles of railway and 528 miles (1919) of electric railway within the State. The railways are connected with the Canadian railway systems.

In June, 1919, there were 44 savings banks in the State, with 235,277 depositors, having to their credit 97,253,000 dollars, being 413·35 dollars to each depositor.

At Portland there is a British vice-consul.

MARYLAND.

Government.—Maryland was one of the thirteen original States. The General Assembly consists of a Senate and a House of Delegates. There are 27 senators and 102 Delegates. The Senators serve for four years, and the Senate is renewed to the extent of half every two years. Delegates are elected for two years.

There is universal suffrage for United States citizens who have resided one year in the State, six months in the Congressional District, and one day in the precinct next preceding election. It is necessary for a person entering the State to declare his intention of becoming a resident of the State one year before he is entitled to register as a voter.

Maryland is represented in Congress by two Senators and six Representatives.

Governor.—Albert C. Ritchie, 1920-24 (4,500 dollars).

Secretary of State.—Philip B. Perlman.

The State is divided into 23 counties and Baltimore City. The State Capital is Annapolis.

Area, Population, Instruction.—Area, 12,327 square miles, of which 9,941 square miles is land and 2,386 are water, the Chesapeake Bay alone occupying 1,203 square miles. The extreme breadth from north to south is 128 miles; the extreme length from east to west is 315 miles. Census population on January 1, 1920, 1,449,681.

Years	Population	Per sq. mile	Years	Population	Per sq. mile
1820	407,350	41·3	1910	1,295,346	130·3
1900	1,188,044	119·5	1920	1,449,681	145·8

In 1910 the population by sex and race was:—

	White	Negro	Asiatic	Indian	Total
Male . . .	529,072	114,749	404		644,225
Female . . .	533,567	117,501	58		651,121
Total . . .	1,062,639	232,250	402	55	1,295,346

Of the total population 104,174 were foreign born, of whom 36,652 were from Germany (35·2 per cent.), 9,701 from Ireland, 27,582 from Russia and Russian Poland, and 5,197 from England.

The largest city in the State and also the chief manufacturing and commercial centre, is Baltimore, with a census population in 1920 of 733,826. Other cities, with population in 1920, are Cumberland, 29,837 ; Hagerstown, 28,029 ; Frederick 11,066 ; Annapolis (Capital), 11,214. Of the total population in 1910, 50·8 per cent. was urban. Over two-fifths of the population of the State live within the corporate limits of the City of Baltimore.

The prevailing forms of religion are Protestant, but Roman Catholics have 35·3 per cent. of the Church membership in the State.

Education is compulsory for children 8 to 12 years of age in the entire State since September 1, 1916, and 8 to 16 unless legally employed.

In 1920, there were in the 2,423 public elementary and high schools of the State, 181,547 white (92,964 boys and 88,583 girls) and 43,543 coloured (21,091 boys and 22,452 girls) elementary pupils and 15,541 white (6,825 boys and 8,716 girls), and 987 (278 boys and 709 girls) high school pupils. The State had 3 normal schools, with 74 teachers and 350 pupils in 1920. The total expenditure on education in 1920 was 8,916,441 dollars.

The most important institution for higher education is Johns Hopkins University, organised in 1876. It is non-sectarian, and in 1919 had 350 instructors and 2,000 students. Its hospital with educational features is famous. Goucher College, formerly the Woman's College of Baltimore, founded in 1888, has 60 instructors and 712 students. Other institutions are the Peabody Institute for the Education of Music, the Maryland Institute School of Art and Design, Walter's Art Gallery, Maryland University, Maryland Agricultural College with 40 professors and 224 students ; the Princess Anne Academy for Coloured Youths, with 4 teachers and 47 students.

The Enoch Pratt Free Library has 11 branches, and a recent donation made by Andrew Carnegie of 500,000 dollars provides for 20 additional branches.

For charitable purposes the State contains (besides almshouses and asylums for the insane) 117 institutions nearly all provided by private or ecclesiastical charity. They comprise 32 hospitals (one public), 10 dispensaries (two public), 38 orphanages, three day nurseries, 30 homes for adults, and four schools for the deaf and blind (two public).

On January 1, 1910, the number of paupers in almshouses was 1,681, being 129·8 per 100,000 of the population, and of prisoners in penal institutions 2,146, being 165·7 per 100,000 of the population.

Finance, Defence.—For the year ending September 30, 1920, the total receipts and disbursements were as follows :—

	Dollars
Balance, Sept. 30, 1919 . . . . .	2,445,716
Receipts, 1919-20 . . . . .	13,083,601

<hr/>	<hr/>
Balance, Sept. 30, 1920 . . . . .	3,224,971

On September 30, 1920, the gross debt of the State amounted to 28,364,880 dollars, and the net debt to 18,343,876 dollars. In 1919 the assessed valuation of real and personal property amounted to 1,392,944,923 dollars.

The Militia or National Guard consists of infantry, cavalry, a signal corps, and a hospital corps. The naval militia has 21 officers and 188 enlisted men. The Federal authorities have a navy recruiting rendezvous and a navy pay office at Baltimore. The United States Naval Academy, for the education of boys intended for the Federal naval service, is at Annapolis.

Production and Industry.—Agriculture is an important industry in the State, about 82 per cent. of the area being in farms mostly worked by their owners. In 1910 there were 48,923 farms with an area of 5,057,140 acres, of which 3,354,767 acres was improved land. The total value of farm property in 1910 was 286,167,028 dollars. The chief crops are wheat (670,000 acres, producing 11,390,000 bushels in 1920), maize (25,795,000 bushels, valued at 20,894,000 dollars), hay, potatoes (60,000 acres, 6,120,000 bushels, valued at 5,814,000 dollars in 1920), vegetables and fruit. In 1920 the yield of tobacco was 30,625,000 pounds, valued at 8,881,000 dollars. Maryland canned 36.4 per cent. of the tomatoes put up in the United States in 1915. The dairy output in 1910 was worth 4½ million dollars; the poultry products, 3,650,000 dollars. The flour mills in 1910 gave an output of 1,015,866 barrels of wheat-flour, besides corn meal, feed, and offal. The farm animals in the State on January 1, 1921 were: horses, 158,000; mules, 25,000; milch cows, 180,000; other cattle, 136,000; sheep, 220,000; swine, 427,000. The wool clip in 1919 yielded 812,000 pounds of wool.

Of mining industries in the State the most important is coal mining, which, in 1919, gave an output of 3,716,559 short tons. Second in importance is clay working. Quarrying is also of importance. Other products were sand, talc, slate, lime, and natural rock cement.

The fisheries of the State are valuable, especially the oyster fisheries, which yield more than any other State in the Union. Other fishery products are shad, bass, perch, and various shell-fish.

According to the Census report of 1915, Maryland had 4,799 manufactories, capital employed 295,934,000 dollars; persons engaged in manufactories 131,333; proprietors and firm members 5,014; salaried employees 14,801; average number of wage-earners 111,518; salaries 18,008,000 dollars; wages 53,821,000 dollars; cost of material 238,982,000 dollars; value of products 377,764,000; an increase over 1910 of 19.7 per cent.

Maryland ranks 27th among the States in population, 41st in land area, 8th in manufacturing. In canning and manufacturing of fertilizers it ranks 1st, in the production of tobacco 8th, in iron and shipbuilding 2nd, in the manufacturing of clothing 3rd, in iron and steel 10th, and in cotton goods 13th.

The State has ample facilities for traffic both by sea and land, having a network of roads nearly 1,000 miles in extent (1915), railways with (1917) 1,425 miles of line in the State and 693 miles of electric railway (1919), while 30 steamboat lines enter the port of Baltimore, which is one of the best ports on the Atlantic coast.

The construction of a Chesapeake and Delaware ship canal by the Federal Government is progressing. The Inter-coastal commission has recommended its purchase at a cost of 2,500,000 dollars (514,400%), and that it be increased to a width of 250 feet on the surface and a depth of 25 feet. It further recommended that the canal be continued from Norfolk to North Carolina by the purchase of the existing Albemarle and Chesapeake Canal, linking th

Elizabeth River near Norfolk with Currituck Sound in North Carolina. This canal is to have a depth of 12 feet. The entire section, from the Delaware to Beaufort, is estimated to be fully completed within four years after construction has been begun.

There were 141 State banks and trust companies in the State on December 31, 1915, including 15 branches with resources of 157,655,891 dollars; 19 saving institutions with 106,405,307 dollars resources. The total amount of deposits in all the banks of Maryland on December 31st, 1915, was 166,473,063 dollars.

On June 30, 1919, there were 17 mutual savings banks in the State, with 264,940 depositors, who had to their credit 116,086,000 dollars, being 438.14 dollars to each contributor.

MASSACHUSETTS.

Constitution and Government.—In 1614, the Plymouth Company undertook exploring expeditions to New England, and obtained a Royal Charter granting sovereign powers over the region lying to the north of Virginia. It is supposed that the coast of Massachusetts was visited by the Norsemen as early as the year 1,000, but the first permanent settlement within the borders of the present state was made at Plymouth in December, 1620, by the Pilgrims from Holland, who were separatists from the English Church. This was the nucleus of the Plymouth Colony. In 1628 another company of Puritans settled at Salem, and from that beginning the Massachusetts Bay Colony was formed. In 1630 Boston was settled. In 1629 the whole region called New England was formed into a province. By a special Charter the Government was divided between the colony of Plymouth and that of Massachusetts Bay, but in 1692 they were re-united, and thenceforward acted together both in peace and war. In the struggle which ended in the separation of the American colonies from the mother country, Massachusetts took the foremost part, and became one of the thirteen original States of the Union.

There is a legislative body consisting of a Senate and a House of Representatives, styled collectively the General Court of Massachusetts. The Senate consists of 40 members elected annually by popular vote, the State being divided into 40 senatorial districts each of which returns one senator. The House of Representatives consists of 240 members, elected in 165 districts, each of which returns one, two, or three representatives according to population. Since November, 1920, there is a biennial session of the Legislature.

All citizens of the United States who can read and write may vote in all State elections, provided they are not paupers or under guardianship, and provided they have lived one year in the State and six months in the election district or precinct,

The State sends 2 Senators and 16 Representatives to the Federal Congress.

Governor.—Channing H. Cox, 1921 (salary, 10,000 dollars).

Secretary of the Commonwealth.—Frederic W. Cook, 1921.

There are 14 counties in the State, varying largely in population, and there are 38 cities and 316 towns. The State Capital is Boston.

Area and Population.—Area 8,266 square miles (227 square miles being water.) The population as determined by the Federal Census of January 1, 1920, was 3,852,356.

The population at the date of each of the Censuses was as follows:—

Years (Census)	White	Coloured	Total	Per sq. mile
1870	1,443,156	14,195	1,457,351	185.0
1890	2,215,373	23,574	2,238,947	284.3
1900	2,769,764	85,582	2,805,346	356.2
1910	3,324,926	41,490	3,366,416	427.4
1915	3,644,273	49,037	3,693,310	468.9

In 1915 the population by sex and race was :

The Registrar's Report for 1919 showed : Live births, 87,826, or 22.9 per 1,000 population ; deaths, 52,345, or 13.6 per 1,000 population ; marriages, 34,329, or 11.3 per 1,000 population.

Divorces granted in 1919 numbered 2,536, or 1.7 per 1,000 married population. Divorces were granted for desertion, adultery, cruel and abusive treatment, intoxication, imprisonment, impotency and non-support.

The infant mortality rate in 1919 was 88·5 per 1,000 live births. The maternal mortality rate in 1919 for diseases caused by pregnancy and confinement was 6·9 per 1,000 confinements, or women at risk.

The “corrected death rate” (excluding deaths of non-residents) for the City of Boston in 1919 (based on the population of 747,628 on July 1, 1919) was 13·09 as compared with a corresponding “corrected death rate” in 1918 of 20·10.

The principal religious bodies are the Roman Catholics and Protestants. The leading Protestant bodies are Congregationalists, Baptists, Methodist-Episcopalian, Protestant-Episcopalian, Unitarians, Presbyterians, Universalists, and Christian Scientists.

Instruction.—There is a State Department of Education. School attendance is compulsory for children from 7 to 14 years of age. For the school year ending June 30, 1920, the total expenditure was 36,614,623 dollars, and the number of teachers required for the public schools was 20,114, the total number of pupils enrolled was 618,828, and the average attendance was 516,871. The 250 public high schools had 3,921 teachers and 88,628 pupils. There are 10 State normal schools with a total enrolment for the school year, 1920–21, of 2,053 pupils and 181 teachers. In 1915 the Legislature passed an Act establishing a Department of University Extension, and to provide for educational extension courses under the direction of the Board of Education. Student enrolment between January 1, 1916, and December 1, 1920 : in classes, 43,455 ; in correspondence courses, 13,102 ; total, 56,557. Number of students who have completed courses, 17,406.

Within the State there are 17 colleges and universities, of which 14 are non-sectarian and 3 are sectarian (2 Catholic and 1 Methodist). Of these 17 institutions, 5 are exclusively for women. Data for these institutions as of November, 1920, are :—

Charity and Correction.—On October 1, 1920, there were in the State twelve public institutions strictly for the insane, two institutions used in part for insane, two for the feeble-minded, and one for epileptics, and in addition to these, there were 15 private institutions for the insane, epileptics, and inebriates, and 6 for feeble-minded. The whole number of insane in institutions and in family care in the State on October 1, 1920, was 15,520, of which number 15,129 were under public care. Of the total number, 7,435 were males and 8,085 were females. The total number of feeble-minded in the State was 3,185, of whom 1,663 were males and 1,522 females.

On December 1, 1920, there were 5 institutions under the supervision of the Department of Public Welfare, consisting of the State infirmary with 2,154 inmates, three industrial schools with 1,007 inmates, and a hospital school for crippled children with 294 inmates. In addition to the above, there were on December 1, 1920, as State minor wards, under the custodial care of the Board, 3,929 children boarded in families and 1,695 children in families without board, also 3,305 children in care of the Trustees of the Massachusetts Training Schools, placed in families and supervised by the Department of Public Welfare. The number of paupers in almshouses during the fiscal year ending March 31, 1919, was 6,815.

The penal institutions in the State consist of 5 strictly State institutions and 21 county jails or houses of correction. On September 30, 1920, the number of prisoners in these institutions was 2,083 males and 269 females.

Finance, Defence.—For the fiscal year ending November 30, 1920, the net revenue and expenditures of the State were as follows :—

	Dollars
Cash in Treasury, December 1, 1919 . . . . .	12,065,772
Net receipts, year ending November 30, 1920 . . . . .	136,588,177
Total . . . . .	148,653,949
Total net expenditure, year ending Nov. 30, 1920 . . . . .	132,353,937
Cash in Treasury, December 1, 1920 . . . . .	16,300,012

The total bonded debt of the State on December 1, 1920, amounted to 143,150,662 dollars, while the sinking fund amounted to 50,914,469 dollars, leaving a net total debt of 92,236,192 dollars.

For the year 1920 the figures for certain tax values are as follows :—

	Dollars
Assessed value of real estate . . . . .	4,368,363,457
Assessed value of personal property . . . . .	975,790,200
Amount of deposits in savings banks (average for last six months) . . . . .	1,217,774,406

For the financial year ending January 31, 1920, the actual receipts of the city of Boston were 57,447,190 dollars, and the actual expenditures were 50,750,073 dollars, while the net funded debt of the city, including the Cochituate Water Debt and the Suffolk County Debt for which the city is responsible, was 80,908,397 dollars.

The military force of the State is the Massachusetts National Guard, with an estimated actual strength of 400 officers and 4,600 enlisted men on December 31, 1920.

Production, Industry, Commerce.—In 1910 the number of farms in Massachusetts (a farm being defined for census purposes as ‘any tract of land of three or more acres used for agricultural purposes, and also any tract containing less than three acres which produced at least 250 dollars worth of farm products in the year 1909’) was 36,917, with an area of 2,875,941 acres, of which 1,164,501 acres was improved land. The value of all farm property (including land valued at 105,532,616 dollars) in the State in 1910 was 226,474,025 dollars. Of the 36,917 farms in the State approximately 87 per cent. were operated by the owners, 5 per cent. by managers, and 8 per cent. by tenants. The total value of the agricultural products of the State during the year 1909, was 31,948,095 dollars, representing an increase of 38 per cent. over the corresponding total for the year 1899. The principal crops in 1920 with their values were: Hay and forage, 610,000 tons, valued at 17,080,000 dollars; potatoes, 4,000,000 bushels, valued at 6,000,000 dollars; maize, 840,000 bushels, valued at 1,050,000 dollars; tobacco, 15,810,000 pounds, valued at 6,419,000 dollars. On Jan. 1, 1921, there were in the State 47,000 horses, 157,000 milch cows, 100,000 other cattle, 28,000 sheep, and 130,000 pigs. In 1920 the wool clip yielded 181,000 pounds.

In the last half of the nineteenth century so many industrial enterprises came into existence that Massachusetts has been quite transformed from an agricultural into a manufacturing community. At present nearly three-fourths of the population dwell in the cities or closely settled places.

The census of manufactures in the State in 1918 showed that the total capital invested in manufactures was 2,510,730,295 dollars, employing on the average 719,210 persons, who earned 679,401,273 dollars, using raw material valued at 2,249,822,722 dollars, and turned out products worth 3,851,346,215 dollars (in 1905, 1,124,092,051 dollars).

Condensed statistics of the more important industries are given in the following table (Massachusetts Statistics of Manufactures, 1918):—

There is very little mining within the State. The principal minerals, as in most of the New England States, are from the stone quarries and the clay pits. There are large stone quarries at Quincy, Rockport, Worcester, and Milford.

A large foreign trade is carried on through the Massachusetts Customs District (i.e., Boston and eight minor ports) by twenty-two Trans-Atlantic steamship lines. In the calendar year 1919 the imports were valued at 299,364,999 dollars and the exports (including foreign, transhipped) at 334,554,031 dollars.

In 1919 the vessels engaged in foreign trade which entered the Massachusetts District had a tonnage of 1,770,439; and those which cleared, 1,281,459. The number of vessels from domestic ports entering the port of Boston was 6,506.

The total number of immigrant aliens from Trans-Atlantic ports admitted at the port of Boston during the year 1919, arriving for the first time and intending to remain permanently, was 5,572.

On December 31, 1919, there were 2,127 miles of main and branch steam railroads in the State. The 3 principal railroads, the Boston and Albany (New York Central lessee), the Boston and Maine, and the New York, New Haven and Hartford, each having a terminus in Boston, have operated about 95 per cent. of the railroad mileage and conducted over 98 per cent. of the entire passenger and freight business as expressed in gross revenue from those sources. On December 31, 1919, the total length of electric railways (main and second track, surface and elevated) within the State was 2,836 miles. The elevated track is confined to Boston and Cambridge.

On September, 1919, there were 159 National banks in operation in the State, of which 12 were in Boston. The total assets of the 159 National banks amounted to 1,054,265,000 dollars. On October 31, 1919, there were in operation in the State 196 savings-banks with assets of 1,215,244,815 dollars and 190 co-operative banks with assets of 154,879,638 dollars. and 105 trust companies having aggregate assets of 1,076,214,436 dollars. For many years there have been no State banks, strictly so called, in Massachusetts, but two such banks were incorporated during the year 1917. On December 1, 1919, the total assets of both amounted approximately to 1,250,000 dollars. The total clearings of the Boston Clearing House during the calendar year 1920 amounted to 18,816,978,696 dollars.

MICHIGAN.

Government.—Michigan was admitted into the Union on January 26, 1837. According to the revised constitution adopted in 1908 the legislative authority is vested in a Senate of 32 members elected by the counties or groups of counties for 2 years, and a House of Representatives of 100 members, the electoral districts being re-arranged according to population every 10 years. Electors are all citizens over 21 years of age resident in the State for 6 months next preceding the election, and resident at the time of the election in the district, county, or township for which the election is held.

The State is represented in Congress by 2 Senators and 13 Representatives.

Governor.—Alexander J. Groesbeck, 1921–23 (5,000 dollars).

Secretary of State.—Charles J. De Land.

For local government the State is organised in counties, cities, townships, and villages. There are 83 counties, each of which is a corporate body with a Board of Supervisors as its administrative authority. Cities must have each a population of not less than 3,000, but a few which have been long incorporated have a smaller population. Cities hereafter incorporated must have at least 2,000 inhabitants and 500 persons per square mile. Villages in the legal sense have a population of at least 300 within an area of a square mile. The State Capital is Lansing.

Area, Population, Education.—Area, 57,980 square miles, of which 500 square miles is water. This is exclusive of 16,653 square miles of Lake Superior, 12,922 square miles of Lake Michigan, 9,925 square miles of Lake Huron, and 460 square miles of Lakes St. Clair and Erie. The total length of Michigan coast line is 1,620 miles.

The bonded debt of the State on February 28, 1921, was 2,852,588 dollars. The assessed valuation of real property was 1,271,722,246 dollars, and of personal property in 1920 was 396,301,860 dollars.

Production and Industry.—Montana has considerable undeveloped agricultural and mineral resources, and opportunity is offered to prospective settlers of acquiring land and becoming permanent residents. In 1910 there were 26,214 farms with an area of 13,545,603 acres, of which 3,640,309 acres was improved land. The total value of all farm property in 1910 was 85,663,187 dollars. Large irrigation projects are being constructed by the United States Government, and many private enterprises are being successfully carried out. The total forest area in 1917 was 16,027,463 acres.

The chief crop is wheat, amounting in 1920 to 19,850,000 bushels, and worth 25,408,000 dollars; oats, 16,800,000 bushels, value 8,568,000 dollars; barley, 1,540,000 bushels, value 1,001,000 dollars; flax seed, 1,353,000 bushels, value 2,868,000 dollars; potatoes, 5,060,000 bushels, value 5,318,000 dollars; hay, 1,516,000 tons, value 18,152,000 dollars. Fruit is now very widely cultivated in the State; there were over 2,000,000 fruit-bearing trees in 1914. The raising of sheep, cattle, &c., is a very important industry. Montana has more sheep and produces more wool than any other State in the Union. The wool clip in 1919 yielded 17,750,000 pounds of wool. On January 1, 1921, there were 2,450,000 sheep; horses, 520,000; milch cows, 185,000; other cattle, 918,000; swine, 200,000.

Montana has great mineral resources, including coal, copper, lead, gold, silver, zinc, tungsten, grindstones, corundum, mineral waters, and sapphires.

The manufacturing industries of the State are prosperous. In 1909 there were 677 manufacturing establishments. The salaried officials numbered 1,380. Their wage-earners, 11,655. The wages paid amounted to 10,901,000 dollars; the salaries paid, to 2,054,000 dollars; the cost of materials used, to 49,180,000 dollars; the value of output, to 73,272,000 dollars; value added by manufacture, to 24,092,000 dollars. By far the most important of the industries is the smelting and refining of copper, but details of copper and some other works are necessarily withheld. Details of other industries are given in THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK for 1916, p. 561.

In 1917 there were 4,953 miles of railway in the State, besides (1919) 798 miles of electric railway. The telegraph lines had a length of 9,556 miles, and the telephone lines 5,384 miles.

In June, 1919, the total resources of all State and national banks doing business in Montana were 222,481,000 dollars, compared with 114,742,763 dollars in 1915. Their combined deposits in June, 1919, were 177,626,894 dollars compared with 85,654,485 dollars in 1915.

NEBRASKA.

The Nebraska region was first reached by white men from Mexico under the Spanish general Coronado in 1541. It was explored by French for traders in the period 1700-1800, and claimed by France, Spain and England in the early colonial period, ceded by France to Spain in 1763, retroceded to France in 1801, and sold by Napoleon to the United States as part of the Louisiana purchase in 1803. Fort Atkinson on the Missouri River, the farthest western post of the United States, was established in 1819, abandoned in 1827. Bellevue, the present oldest continuous settlement, was established by French fur traders about 1820. The creation of Nebraska territory was part of the programme of the United States government in 1844 as a step in establishing a military highway to hold Oregon, then in controversy with Great Britain. On May 30, 1854, Nebraska became a territory and on March 1, 1867, a State. "Arbor Day," now a world-wide institution observed with planting of trees, originated in Nebraska on January 4, 1872.

Government.—The Legislature consists of a Senate of 33 members and a House of Representatives of 100 members. The Legislators are elected for two years. The franchise extends only to native born citizens, including women, and to persons of foreign birth, who shall become citizens of the United States by naturalisation at least thirty days prior to an election. Voters must have resided in the State for six months, in the county for 40 days, in the precinct for ten days next before the election. The present constitution was adopted in 1875. Important amendments adopted in 1912 provide for legislation through the initiative and referendum, for a State Board of Control over sixteen State institutions, for biennial instead of annual elections, and permit cities of more than 5,000 inhabitants to frame their own charters.

Nebraska is represented in Congress by two Senators and six Representatives.

Governor.—S. R. McKelvie, 1919–21 (2,500 dollars).

Secretary of State.—D. M. Amsberry.

There are 93 counties in the State. The State Capital is Lincoln.

Area, Population, Instruction.—Area 77,510 square miles, of which 702 square miles is water. The population in decennial census years from 1860 was :—

Years	Population	Per sq. mile	Years	Population	Per sq. mile
1860	28,841	0·38	1900	1,066,300 <sup>1</sup>	13·9

1889	Cotner University, Bethany (Disciples) .	25	337

A grant of 3,000,000 acres of public lands for permanent endowment of her schools was made by the Federal Government. Of this 1,661,405 acres are still held by the State. Further sale of this land, with some minor exceptions, is forbidden, Nebraska being the only State which has adopted the policy. The total value of the permanent school endowment is 21,564,714 dollars.

On August 1, 1920, the charitable and penal institutions had 5,105 inmates. The appropriation for their maintenance for the year ending March 31, 1821, was 3,992,770 dollars,

Finance.—For the biennium ending November 30, 1920, the receipts and disbursements of the State funds were :—

	Dollars
Balance, December 1, 1918 . . . . .	868,744
Receipts, 1918-20 . . . . .	25,239,505
Total . . . . .	26,108,249
Disbursements, 1918-20 . . . . .	25,427,019
Balance, November 30, 1920 . . . . .	681,230

The State has no debt. In 1919 the assessed valuation of real and personal property (under a law requiring the assessed value to be 20% of the actual value) amounted to 568,456,926 dollars, of which 212,697,098 dollars was personal, and 355,759,828 dollars real property.

Production and Industry.—Nebraska is one of the most important agricultural States In 1910 it contained 129,678 farms with a total area of 98,622,021 acres, of which 24,382,577 acres was improved land. The total value of all farm property in 1910 was 2,079,818,647 dollars. The Federal irrigation district in Western Nebraska embraces 300,000 acres, two-thirds of which is already under water. The principal crops are cereals, hay, potatoes, and apples. In 1920 the yield of maize was 255,528,000 bushels ; wheat, 60,480,000 bushels ; oats, 83,040,000 bushels. Beet-sugar is also produced, 125,000,000 pounds being the estimate for 1916. The live-stock industry is pursued on a large scale. On January 1, 1921, the State contained 965,000 horses, 99,000 mules, 560,000 milch cows, 2,650,000 other cattle, 290,000 sheep, and 3,063,000 swine. From 217,000 sheep in 1919 the wool clip yielded 1,730,000 pounds of wool.

Nebraska has some quarries and mines. The more important of these are sand quarries, limestone quarries, potash plants, and brick and tile plants. There are also possibilities of oil and gas. The Nebraska potash industry is the largest in the United States.

The most important manufacturing industries are associated with the pastoral and agricultural produce of the State. In 1914 there were 2,492 manufacturing establishments in the State; their aggregate capital amounted to 121,008,000 dollars; the persons owning or working them (proprietors, firm members, clerks, &c., and wage-earners) numbered 33,695; the material used cost 174,114,000 dollars, and the output was valued at 221,616,000 dollars. The chief of these industries is slaughtering and meat-packing, which has its centre at South Omaha. Statistics of four industries are given in THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK for 1916, p. 564.

Other industries are printing and publishing, soap and candle making, brick and tile work, smelting, sugar manufacture, &c. The Alkali Lakes of Nebraska have become the largest producers of potash for the American market. The estimated production in 1918 was 15,000 tons.

In 1918 there were 8,832 miles of railway in the State, besides the 253 miles of electric railway track (1919). Omaha is a centre whence 9 trunk lines of railway radiate. Commercial navigation of the Missouri river, which was abandoned for 35 years, has been resumed, steamboats and barges carrying grain and live stock ply between Omaha and Sioux City every week.

In September, 1919, there were 999 State banks and 176 National banks in the State, with total resources of 1,032,365,000 dollars. In June, 1918, there were also 19 savings banks with 19,940 depositors, who had to their credit 4,357,983 dollars, being 218.55 dollars to each depositor.

There is a British Vice-Consul at Omaha.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.

Government.—New Hampshire was one of the thirteen original States of the Union. The sense of the people as to the calling of a convention for the revision of the Constitution must be taken every seven years. If a convention is held the amendments to the Constitution which it proposes must be laid before the people, and approved by two-thirds of the qualified voters present and voting on the subject. The Legislature consists of a Senate and a House of Representatives. The Senate consists of 24 members, elected for two years. The House of Representatives consists of from 300 to 409 members, the number varying slightly with each session, as representation is on the basis of population. Electors are all citizens 21 years of age, resident six months in the place to be represented, able to read and write, duly registered and not under sentence for crime or paupers.

Governor.—Albert O. Brown, 1921–23 (3,000 dollars).

Secretary of State.—Edwin C. Bean.

New Hampshire is represented in the Federal Congress by 2 Senators and 2 Representatives. The State is divided into 10 counties. The State Capital is Concord.

The largest city of the State is Manchester, with a population of 78,384 in 1920. Other cities are Nashua, 28,379; Concord (capital), 22,157; Dover, 13,029; Berlin, 16,014; Portsmouth, 13,569; Laconia, 10,897; Keene, 11,210; Rochester, 9,678. Of the population in 1910, 59·2 per cent. was urban.

The prevailing form of religion is the Roman Catholic, which has 63 per cent. of the Church membership; other bodies are Congregational, Baptist, Methodist, and Protestant Episcopal. Religious instruction is not given in the public schools. The Roman Catholics maintain parochial schools in all the cities and some of the large towns.

The State law requires that at least 36 weeks of schooling must be provided in every town annually. School attendance is compulsory for children from 8 to 14 years of age during the whole school term; and if they have not completed the elementary grades the school age extends to 16. In 1920 the public elementary schools of the State had 2,648 teachers, and 64,205 enrolled pupils; 86 public high schools had 673 teachers and 13,055 pupils. The 2 normal schools had 31 teachers and 286 students in 1920. The principal colleges within the State are Dartmouth College, at Hanover, founded in 1769, and the New Hampshire College of Agriculture and the Mechanic Arts, at Durham, founded in 1868. They are non-sectarian. Dartmouth had (1919) 125 instructors and 1,127 students; the State College 62 instructors and 659 students. Expenditure on Education in 1920, 3,960,075 dollars.

NEW MEXICO.

Constitution and Government.—New Mexico from the time of its discovery by Europeans was politically associated with Mexico. On May 11, 1846, the Mexican war began ; when peace was made February 2, 1848, New Mexico was recognised as belonging to the United States. On September 9, 1850, the Organic Act of the Territory was passed by the United States Congress. The boundaries of the Territory had been made to include part of Texas, but Utah was formed into a separate Territory ; in 1861 part of New Mexico was transferred to Colorado, and in 1863 Arizona was disjoined, leaving to New Mexico its present area. On June 20, 1910, Congress passed an Enabling Act permitting the Territory of New Mexico to frame a State Constitution, and in November, 1911, New Mexico was admitted to Statehood.

The State legislature consists of 24 members of the Senate and 49 members of the House of Representatives.

Governor.—M. C. Mechem, 1921–23 (5,000 dollars).

Secretary of State.—Manuel Martinez.

For local government the State is divided into 29 counties. The administrative capital of the State is Santa Fé, population (as shown by the census of 1920), 7,236.

Area, Population, Instruction.—Area, 122,634 square miles (131 square miles being water area). Census population on January 1, 1920, 360,350.

In five census years the population was :—

Years	Population	Per sq. mile	Years	Population	Per sq. mile
1880	119,565	1.0	1910	327,301	2.7
1890	160,282	1.3	1920	360,350	2.6

NEW YORK STATE.

Constitution and Government.—From 1609 to 1664 the region now called New York was under the sway of the Dutch ; then it came under the rule of the English, who governed the country till the outbreak of the War of Independence. Between July 9, 1776, and April 20, 1777, a Convention framed a Constitution under which New York was transformed into an independent State, afterwards, in 1788, entering the Union as one of the 13 original States.

The legislative authority is vested in a Senate of 51 members elected every two years, and an Assembly of 150 members elected annually. There are annual sessions.

The right of suffrage resides in every citizen 21 years of age, who has been a citizen for 90 days, and has resided in the State for a year preceding the election. A voter must also have resided four months in the county, and 30 days in the election district.

The question whether there shall be a Convention to revise the Constitution has to be submitted to the people every 20 years, beginning with 1916, 'and also at such times as the Legislature may by law provide.'

The State is represented in Congress by 2 Senators and 43 Representatives.

Governor.—Nathan L. Miller, 1921–23 (10,000 dollars).

Secretary of State.—John J. Lyons.

The seat of the State executive is at Albany.

For local government the State is divided into 62 counties.

Cities are in 3 classes, the first class having each over 175,000 inhabitants and the third under 50,000. Each is incorporated by charter, under special legislation. The government of New York City is vested in a board of Aldermen, elected for 2 years. Its members are the President, elected by the city ; the presidents of the 5 city boroughs (Bronx, Manhattan, Brooklyn, Queens, and Richmond) ; 67 aldermen, one elected in each of the 67 districts. constituting a board of 73 members. The chief executive officer is the Mayor, elected for 4 years ; he appoints all the heads of departments, except the Comptroller, who is elected by the city.

Of the total population in 1915, 74·8 per cent. was urban. Indian reservations in 1918 covered an area of 137 square miles and had a population of 6,342.

In 1915 the death-rate in cities was 14·8 per 1,000 of population, in rural districts 15·5 ; in the whole State, 15·6.

The chief churches are Roman Catholic, Methodist, Presbyterian, Protestant Episcopal, and Baptist.

Education.—Education is compulsory between the ages of 7 and 16. Instruction in physical training and kindred subjects of all pupils above 8 years of age in the elementary and secondary schools of the State is made compulsory by an amendment of 1916 to the Education Law. An amendment to the Military Law creating the Military Training Commission, consisting of the Major-General of the National Guard, a representative appointed by the Regents, and one appointed by the Governor, also makes compulsory the military training of all boys between the ages of 16 and 19 who are pupils in a public or private school or in a college, for at least three hours a week during the school year and in the case of boys who are not pupils for a period not exceeding this, between September of each year and the ensuing 15th day of June.

In 1918–19 the children enrolled in the 11,898 public schools numbered 1,672,311; the number of teachers was 52,858. There were 964 public high schools and academies with 197,119 pupils and 8,375 teachers. There were 10 public normal schools with 348 teachers and 7,020 students. There were about 133 vocational schools employing 1,331 teachers with 61,139 pupils. Total expenditure on education in 1919 was 126,050,447 dollars. There were 136 universities, colleges, professional and technical schools with 5,634 professors and teachers, and 52,043 students.

The University of the State of New York is governed by a Board of Regents, whose members are at all times three more than the existing judicial districts of the State—at present 9 districts and 12 Regents. The University is the State Education Department. The Regents elect by ballot the President of the University and the Commissioner of Education.

The names, year of foundation, and numbers of instructors and students in 15 of the 46 colleges and universities in 1918-19 were as follows :—

There are also in the State 15 schools of theology, 9 of law, 4 of education, 10 of medicine, 4 of dentistry, 5 of pharmacy, 2 of veterinary medicine, 8 of technology, and 3 of library science.

Charity.—The institutions subject to the supervision of the State Board of Charities for the year ending June 30, 1919, included 16 State institutions with a population of 9,545 ; 165 institutions for children with 35,672 inmates ; 238 medical charities, ministering to 24,012 people ; 96 almshouses, homes for the aged, &c., with a population of 11,663 ; and 12 institutions for the feeble-minded with 3,900 inmates. Total institutions, 527 ; total number of people affected, 84,792.

Finance.—The State revenue and expenditure for the year ending June 30, 1919, were respectively as follows:—

	Dollars
Balance in hand, July 1, 1918 . . . . .	39,506,937
Receipts, 1918-19 . . . . .	86,433,925
Total . . . . .	125,940,862
Disbursements, 1918-19 . . . . .	95,105,451
Balance, July 1, 1919 . . . . .	30,735,411

The total bonded debt of the State, June 30, 1919, amounted to 236,744,660 dollars. The assessed value of real property in 1919 was 12,322,150,324 dollars ; of personal property 435,871,630 dollars ; total, 12,758,021,954 dollars.

The City of New York, January 1, 1919, had a gross bonded debt of 1,225,055,569 dollars.

Defence.—Under the provisions of the Military Law of the State a new active organisation was created September 1st, 1917, to take the place of the National Guard then in the Federal service. The New York Guard consisted on June 30, 1920, of 9,440 officers and men, which figure does not include 8,788 officers and men comprising sixty-two companies, troops and batteries of the organisations of the division which have been recognised by the War Department as National Guard. The aggregate is, therefore, 18,228. It is part of the active militia of the State, is partly subject to Federal control, and receives rifles and ammunition from the Federal Government. It is organised as a division of four brigades, as before 1916.

The Naval Militia has never been federalised in the same sense as the National Guard, so that while it was actually in the Federal service as a part of the Naval Reserve, no new organisation has taken its place.

Production, Industry, Commerce.—New York has large agricultural interests. In 1910 it contained 215,597 farms of a total area of 22,030,367 acres, of which 14,844,039 acres was improved land. The total value of all farm property was 1,451,481,495 dollars. Common agricultural crops are raised ; market-gardening, fruit-growing, sugar beet production, and tobacco culture are pursued. In 1920 the crops comprised maize, 32,595,000 bushels ; wheat 10,998,000 bushels ; oats, 44,275,000 bushels, besides potatoes, hay, and other products. The area under tobacco was 2,400 acres ; the yield, 3,072,000 pounds. Beet sugar is produced. The farm animals on January 1, 1921, comprised 543,000 horses, 7,000 mules, 1,448,000 milch cows and 882,000 other cattle, 745,000 sheep, and 781,000 swine. The wool clip in 1919 yielded 4,022,000 pounds of wool.

Other productive industries are mining and quarrying. In 1918 the mines within the State yielded 1,003,961 tons of iron ore (5,802,870 dollars). In 1918 the output of talc was 71,167 tons, valued at 902,100 dollars. The yield of crude petroleum in 1918 was 808,843 barrels, valued at 3,307,814 dollars ; the yield of natural gas in 1918 was of the value of 5,500,870 dollars. Mineral springs yielded 5,887,746 gallons, valued at 566,910 dollars. The output of granite, trap rock, sandstone, marble, and limestone in 1918 was valued at 6,106,760 dollars ; of Portland cement, 4,074,159 barrels, valued at 6,568,746 dollars ; of salt, 15,218,071 barrels valued at 7,336,867 dollars. The production of bricks, tiles, pottery, &c., was estimated at the value of 11,862,954 dollars. In 1918 the output of gypsum was 531,039 tons, valued at 2,677,099 dollars. The State also produces infusorial earth, emery, garnet, crystalline quartz, and other minerals. The total value of mineral output in 1918 amounted to 54,997,036 dollars.

Manufacturing Industries.—The statistics of the manufacturing industries of New York State according to the census results of 1905 and 1910 are summarised thus :—

		1905	1910
Establishments . . . . .	Number	37,194	44,935

Value of output . . . . .	"	2,488,345,579	3,369,490,000

For the more important industries (or groups of industries), judged by the value of output in 1910, see THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK for 1917, p. 572.

In 1919 there were 2,082 newspapers, &c., of which 203 were dailies, 969 weekly, 35 semi-weekly, 8 tri-weekly, 700 monthly, 51 semi-monthly, 38 bi-monthly, 1 tri-monthly, 69 quarterly, 2 semi-annual, 2 five times a year, 2 four times a year, 1 twenty times a year, and 1 every forty days. In English 1,874 were published; of the foreign languages there were 28 in Spanish, 24 in Italian, 22 each in German and Yiddish, 12 in Hungarian, 11 in Polish, 10 in French, 7 in Bohemian, 6 each in Arabic, Greek, Portuguese and Swedish, 5 in Russian, 4 each in Lithuanian, Slovak and Slovenian, 3 in Chinese, Croatian, Finnish and Serbian, 2 each in Albanian, Hebrew, Japanese, Judæo-Spanish, Swiss, Welsh, 1 each in Armenian, Danish, Lettish, Norwegian, Persian, Roumanian and Ukrainian.

New York City now ranks as the first shipping port of the world. The imports, including specie and bullion, during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1920, amounted to the value of 2,904,648,933 dollars, and the exports to the value of 3,383,638,588 dollars. The exports consist largely of grain, flour, cotton, sugar, tobacco, apples and other fruits, preserved provisions, cattle, and frozen meat. Most of the great railway lines which bring merchandise from the west have their terminals on the New Jersey side of the harbour, but there are ample facilities for the transfer of goods to the docks on the eastern side by means of lighters and of barges which carry the loaded cars across.

In 1919 the bank clearings in New York City amounted to 189,237,015,492 dollars for the first ten months of the year.

In New York State there were in 1917 8,534 miles of railway track and 6,039 miles (1919) of single track electric railway. The canals of the State, used for commercial purposes, have a length of 638 miles, of which the Erie canal has 361 miles. The State Barge Canal to connect New York City with Buffalo by means of a deep water route of 790 miles, having a minimum depth of 12 feet, is completed. It has a capacity of 20,000,000 tons per season.

In the year ending June 30, 1919, there were 141 savings banks in the State, with total resources of 2,367,041,901 dollars, 3,579,057 depositors who had 2,179,034,583 dollars to their credit, being 608 dollars to each depositor.

British Consul-General at New York.—H. G. Armstrong
There are six Vice-Consuls.

NORTH CAROLINA.

Government.—North Carolina is one of the thirteen original States of the Union. The General Assembly consists of a Senate of 50 members, and a House of Representatives of 120 members, elected for two years.

All citizens of the United States, resident in the State one year, and in the county six months next before the election, and registered, have a vote. For registration, the requirement is ability to read any section of the Constitution in the English language.

The State is represented in Congress by two Senators and ten Representatives.

Governor.—Cameron Morrison, 1921–25 (6,500 dollars).

Secretary of State.—J. Bryan Grimes.

North Carolina is divided into 100 counties. The State Capital is Raleigh.

Area, Population, Instruction.—Area, 52,426 square miles, of which 8,686 square miles is water. Population of census in 1920, 2,556,486.

Years	White <sup>1</sup>	Negro	Total	Per sq. mile
1820	419,200	219,629	638,829	18·2
1900	1,269,341	624,469	1,893,810	38·9
1910	1,508,444	697,843	2,206,287	45·3

<sup>1</sup> Including Indians and Asiatics.

In 1910 the population by sex and birth was:—

—	White	Negro	Asiatic	Indian	Total
Male	754,852	339,581	4,043	3,890	1,098,476
Female	745,659	358,262			1,107,811
Total	1,500,511	697,843	82	7,851	2,206,287

Of the total in 1910, 6,092 were foreign-born, 1,074 being German, and 940 English. Urban population formed 14·4 per cent. of the whole. Cities (with population in 1920) are: Charlotte, 46,338; Winston-Salem, 48,395; Wilmington, 33,372; Durham, 21,719; Asheville, 28,504; Raleigh, (capital), 24,418; Greensboro, 19,861. Indian reservations in 1919 covered an area of 98 square miles and had a population of 2,235.

About half of the church members are Baptist, and one-third Methodist. The others are mostly Presbyterian, Lutheran, or Protestant Episcopal.

School attendance is compulsory. Separate schools are provided for white and for coloured children. In 1918 the 7,877 public elementary schools of the State had 14,550 teachers, and 634,250 enrolled pupils. There were 248 public high schools with 639 teachers and 12,788 pupils in 1918. Teachers are trained in 9 public normal schools, with 105 teachers and 1,362 students in 1911. Total expenditure in 1918, 7,521,954 dollars.

Higher instruction is given in 15 university and college institutions, the more important of which are the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill (founded in 1795) in 1920 with 85 professors and 1,406 students ; and the Agricultural and Engineering College at West Raleigh (founded in 1889) with 83 professors and 819 pupils. Higher education for young women is given in the State College for Women (Greensboro) which, in 1919-20, had 91 professors and 760 students. There are large sectarian colleges, and also schools and colleges for coloured youths.

Charity.—North Carolina has a State Board of Charities and Public Welfare. The county is the unit. Each county has a Superintendent of Public Welfare and a juvenile court to care for the children. These are compulsory in every county of the State. There are three hospitals for the insane, one for negroes, two for whites ; a school for the blind and deaf of each race ; a school for the white feeble-minded children and women under thirty ; a reform school for white boys ; a training school for delinquent girls and women ; and epileptic colonies at the hospitals for the insane. A hospital-school for crippled children is in course of construction. The State also maintains a home for Confederate Veterans and a home for Confederate women.

Child-caring institutions are private, but must be licensed and inspected by the State Board of Charities and Public Welfare. Maternity homes and societies for children are also under this law. Twenty-five institutions and societies have been licensed.

Private hospitals for the care and treatment of insane, feeble-minded, and inebriates must be licensed. Five are so licensed.

The poor are cared for in County Homes. At the close of the fiscal year 1918, the number of inmates reported was 1,500.

Finance.—The State had receipts and disbursements in the year ending November 30, 1919, as follows :—

	Dollars
Balance, December 1, 1917 . . . . .	1,372,104
Receipts, 1918-19 . . . . .	10,314,337
Total . . . . .	11,686,441
Disbursements, 1918-19 . . . . .	10,298,870
Balance, December 1, 1919 . . . . .	1,381,571

In 1919 the outstanding debt amounted to 10,090,104 dollars. The assessed value of personal and real property in 1919 was 1,029,993,778 dollars. According to the Council of the Corporation of Foreign Bondholders the State has a defaulted debt estimated at 12,600,000 dollars. The State declares these bonds to have been fraudulently and corruptly issued during reconstruction days.

Production and Industry.—The chief occupation of the inhabitants of the State is agriculture. In 1910 the State had 253,725 farms, while the area of the farm land was 22,439,129 acres, of which 8,813,056 acres was improved land. The total value of all farm products in 1919 was 683,168,000 dollars. Wheat and maize are grown, the yield of the former in 1920 having been 8,471,000 bushels, and of the latter, 64,032,000 bushels. The chief crop, however, is cotton, of which the area for 1920 was 1,518,000 acres, and the yield 840,000 bales (of 500 pounds, gross weight). Another important product is tobacco, grown on 582,000 acres, which yielded in 1920, 384,120,000 pounds, valued at 97,182,000 dollars. Other products are peanuts, potatoes, oats, and rye. The rice crop in 1920 amounted to 10,000 bushels. Stock-raising is not important, but there is a growing dairy industry. On January 1, 1921, the farm animals were 179,000 horses, 281,000 mules, 381,000 milch cows, 386,000 other cattle, 138,000 sheep, and 1,528,000 swine. The wool clip in 1919 yielded 587,000 lbs.

In the eastern portion of the State there are shad and oyster fisheries, both valuable.

Minerals in great variety, but not in large quantities, are found in the State, the chief being mica, iron, talc, and soapstone barytes, feldspar, coal, phosphate rock, gold, silver, sand and gravel. The quarries yield granite, limestone, and sandstone. Monazite and zircon, used in the manufacture of incandescent light mantles, are also found.

The prosperity of North Carolina is associated chiefly with cotton, tobacco, and lumber, but within the State a variety of other industries are pursued. The value of the output of all manufactures in the State in 1918 was put at 658,547,476 dollars.

The chief seaport is Wilmington, the exports from which, in 1919, amounted to 33,941,084 dollars, nearly all for cotton grown in North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, and Alabama, and shipped mostly to Bremen, Liverpool, and Ghent. Harbour improvements are in progress.

The State has several navigable rivers; in 1919 it contained 4,954 miles of steam railway, and 285 miles of electric railway track. The chief railway lines are the Atlantic coast line, the Seaboard Air line, the Southern railway, and the Norfolk and Southern railway, the latter being formed by the union of about half-a-dozen independent lines.

In 1919, deposits in savings banks amounted to 32,352,948 dollars.

There is a British Vice-Consul at Wilmington.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Government.—North Dakota was admitted into the Union on February 22, 1889. The Legislative Assembly consists of a Senate of 49 members elected for four years, and a House of Representatives of 113 members elected for two years. Qualified electors are (with necessary exceptions) all citizens and civilised Indians. Residence required: in the State one year, in the county six months, in the precinct ninety days next before the election. The State is represented in Congress by two Senators and three Representatives.

Governor.—L. J. Frazier, 1921-23 (5,000 dollars).

Secretary of State.—Thomas Hall.

The State is divided into 53 organised counties. The capital is Bismarck (population 6,951 in 1920, Census).

Area, Population.—Area, 70,605 square miles (662 square miles being water). The area in 1919 of the Indian reservations was 156 square miles with a population of 8,891 Indians. The population of the State in 1920 (Census) was 645,680.

The population at each of the Federal censuses was:—

Production and Industry.—Agriculture is the chief pursuit of the North Dakota population. In 1918 there were 70,149 farms with an area of 28,847,607 acres, of which 17,928,761 acres was improved land. The assessed valuation of all farm property in 1918 was 229,397,669 dollars. The area to be irrigated within the State under the Federal Reclamation Act extends to 40,000 acres. The chief products are cereals, potatoes, hay and flax. The wheat crop in 1920 amounted to 68,400,000 bushels; oats, 59,640,000 bushels; barley, 22,640,000 bushels. In the same year the area under flax (grown for the seed) was 735,000 acres, and the yield amounted to 3,896,000 bushels of seed, valued at 6,935,000 dollars. The State has also an active live-stock industry, chiefly horse and cattle-raising. On January 1, 1921, the farm animals were 800,000 horses, 464,000 milch cows, 604,000 other cattle, 272,000 sheep, and 402,000 swine. The wool crop yielded 1,654,000 pounds of wool in 1919.

The mineral resources of North Dakota are inconsiderable. Cement is made and there are coal mines.

In the State in 1914 there were 699 manufacturing establishments with an aggregate capital of 14,213,000 dollars, employing 3,275 wage-earners, using raw material costing 14,484,000 dollars, and giving an output valued at 21,147,000 dollars. The most important of these industries was flour and grist milling. The value of the dairy and creamery industry (butter, cheese, and condensed milk) amounted in 1918 to 16,901,267 dollars. Quantity of cream sold in creameries, 19,694,669 pounds.

OHIO.

Government.—Ohio was admitted into the Union on February 19, 1803. The question of a general revision of the Constitution is submitted to the people every 20 years, provision being made for the election of a Convention to draft alterations.

The Legislature consists of a Senate of 37 members and a House of Representatives of 125 members, both Houses being elected for two years. Qualified as electors are (with certain necessary exceptions) all citizens 21 years of age who have resided in the State one year, in the county 30 days, and in the township 20 days next before the election.

Ohio is represented in Congress by two Senators and 22 Representatives.

Governor:—James M. Cox, 1921-23 (10,000 dollars).

Secretary of State.—Harvey C. Smith.

Ohio is divided into 88 counties. The State Capital (since 1816) is Columbus.

The public debt of the State on June 30, 1920, amounted to 1,665 dollars, being the Canal Loan not bearing interest.

Production and Industry.—Ohio is extensively devoted to agriculture. In 1920 it contained 256,699 farms, a decrease in number of 15,346, or 5.6 per cent. since 1910. The total value of all farm property in 1910 was 1,902,694,589 dollars. The chief crops are cereals, hay, potatoes, fruits and vegetables, besides tobacco. The maize crop in 1920 amounted to 162,099,000 bushels, and the wheat crop to 28,698,000 bushels; oats, 71,339,000 bushels. The area under tobacco (63,000 acres in 1920) yielded 60,480,000 pounds. Beet sugar to the amount of 51,000 short tons was produced in 1920. Horse-rearing, cattle-breeding, and dairy farming are important. On January 1, 1921, the live-stock in the State was 795,000 horses, 28,000 mules, 1,009,000 milch cows, and 993,000 other cattle, 2,773,000 sheep, and 3,921,000 swine. The wool clip in 1920 yielded 12,449,000 pounds of wool. The farm products and live-stock industries give rise to the manufacture of butter and cheese, and the meat-packing industries.

Ohio has also extensive mineral resources; it is the fourth State in the Union for mineral output. The two leading products are coal and manufactures from clay. Other mineral products are petroleum, sandstone and limestone, Portland cement, salt, grindstones, pulpstones, oilstones, and scythestones, besides mineral waters.

In 1910 the capital invested in manufacturing industries in the State was 866,898,083 dollars; the amount paid in salaries and wages was 228,984,923 dollars; the raw material used cost 529,893,658 dollars, and the value of the output was 960,799,991 dollars. The value of the corresponding output in 1900 was 748,670,855 dollars. The chief manufacturing industries, according to the census results for 1910, are given in THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK for 1916, p. 590.

The railways of the State in 1918 had a length of 9,160 miles, besides 3,227 miles of electric railway track. Ohio has also facilities for traffic by water, and its most important city, Cleveland, has sprung up on the shore of Lake Erie.

On June 30, 1920, there were 775 State banks in Ohio, with a total of 1,150,313,376 dollars deposits, 370 national banks having 802,093,000 dollars deposits, and 718 building and loan associations having 159,985,470 dollars deposits, making a grand total of 1,863 institutions for saving in Ohio having in the aggregate, 2,112,391,846 dollars deposits.

OKLAHOMA.

Government.—The State of Oklahoma, comprising the former Territory of Oklahoma and Indian Territory, was constituted on November 16, 1907, by Proclamation made by the United States President under the enabling act of June 16, 1906. The constitution provides for the initiative and the referendum, 8 per cent. of the legal voters having the right to propose any legislative measure and 15 per cent. to propose amendments to the constitution by petition. The referendum may be ordered (except as to laws necessary for the immediate preservation of the public peace, health or safety) either by petition signed by 5 per cent. of the legal voters or by the Legislature. The referendum applies to municipalities as well as to the State. The control of railways and other public service corporations is vested in a commission of 3 members elected for six-year periods, from whose decision an appeal lies only to the Supreme Court, no other court having power to interfere with its duties.

The Legislature consists of a Senate of 44 members who are elected for 4 years, and a House of Representatives elected for 2 years, and consisting of not less than 99 nor more than 102 members. Qualified as electors are (with necessary exceptions) all citizens resident six months in the State, 60 days in the county or town, 30 days in the precinct. Indians, to be qualified as voters, must have severed tribal relations.

Governor.—J. B. A. Robertson, 1919-23 (4,500 dollars).

Secretary.—Joe S. Morris 1919-23.

The State is represented in Congress by 2 Senators and 8 members of the House of Representatives. The State capital is Oklahoma City.

Area and Population.—Area, 70,057 square miles, of which 643 square miles is water. Census population on January 1, 1920, 2,028,283. Indian reservations in 1919 had an area of 10 square miles with a population of 119,101.

[For the history of the relations between the Indians and the Federal Government see THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK for 1907, p. 593.]

The population at the date of each of the Federal censuses was :—

Of the total population in 1910, 19·3 per cent. was urban. The most important cities are Oklahoma City (population in 1920, 91,258), Muskogee (30,277), Tulsa (72,075), Enid (16,576), McAlester (12,095), Shawnee (15,348), Okmulgee (17,430), Guthrie (11,757), Ardmore (14,181).

Religion, Education.—The chief religious bodies are Methodist, Baptist, Roman Catholic, Disciples (Christians), and Presbyterians.

The State has a school system embracing elementary and high public schools, normal schools, and also colleges for superior instruction. Separate schools have to be provided for whites and negroes, all children not negroes being classed as white. In 1918 there were in the State public elementary schools 510,139 white and 41,276 negro pupils and 14,181 teachers; 605 public high schools with 34,932 enrolled pupils and 1,954 teachers in 1916. There were in 1918 7 normal schools with 125 teachers and 4,660 students. Total expenditure on education (1918) 13,803,861 dollars. The University (founded at Norman in 1892) had, in 1919, 150 professors and 3,683 students; the Agricultural and Mechanical College (founded in 1891 at Stillwater) had 106 professors and 1,769 students; while the coloured Agricultural and Normal University (founded 1897 at Langston) with 27 instructors, has 823 students.

Oklahoma has 3 hospitals, 6 orphanages, and 2 homes for adults and children, a school for the deaf and one for the blind.

Finance.—Income and expenditure for the year 1920 :—

On Jan. 1, 1920, the State debt amounted to 2,972,900 dollars. The assessed value of real and of personal property was 1,664,448,745 dollars.

Production and Industry.—Oklahoma is mainly agricultural. In 1910 it had 190,192 farms with a total area of 28,859,358 acres, of which 17,551,337 acres were improved land. The total value of all farm property was 918,198,882 dollars. The yield of maize in 1920 was 89,320,000 bushels; of wheat, 46,240,000 bushels; of oats, 48,000,000 bushels. Other products are potatoes, hay, sorghum, fruits, and cotton. The cotton crop for 1920 on 2,765,000 acres amounted to 1,300,000 bales, valued at 68,250,000 dollars. Flax is also widely grown. The western part is devoted to stock-raising. On January 1, 1921, the stock comprised 549,000 milch cows, and 1,118,000 other cattle; 836,000 hogs, 110,000 sheep, 667,000 horses, and 292,000 mules. Wool clip yielded 526,000 lbs. in 1919.

Oklahoma has become an important mineral State in the last few years principally because of the increase in the production of petroleum, which followed the discovery of oil in 1904. Natural gas is also obtained. Coal, lead and zinc are also worked.

There are few manufacturing industries, flour and grist-milling, cotton ginning, the manufacture of cotton-seed oil and oil cake being the more important. In 1910 the State had a total of 2,310 industrial establishments, employing 13,143 wage-earners, with a total capital of 38,873,000 dollars, the cost of material being 34,153,000 dollars, and the value of the output 53,682,000 dollars. Statistics of leading industries are given in THE STATES-MAN'S YEAR-BOOK for 1916, p. 593.

In 1917 Oklahoma had 6,502 miles of steam railway besides 331 miles of electric railway (1919). The principal lines are the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fé; the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific; the Choctaw, Oklahoma and Gulf; and the St. Louis and San Francisco; the Missouri, Kansas and Texas; the St. Louis and San Francisco; and the Santa Fé Pacific Railways.

OREGON.

Government.—Oregon was admitted into the Union on February 14, 1859. The Legislative Assembly consists of a Senate of 30 members, chosen for four years (half their number retiring every two years), and a House of 60 Representatives, elected for two years.

The Constitution was amended in 1902, under the terms of which amendment the people reserve to themselves the power to propose laws and amendments to the Constitution and to enact or reject the same at the polls independent of the Legislative Assembly, and also reserve the power at their own option to approve or reject at the polls any Act of the Legislative Assembly. This is known as the initiative and referendum. Not more than eight per cent. of the legal voters are required to propose any measure to be voted upon by the people at the next ensuing general election. Measures thus initiated are enacted or rejected at the polls independently of the Legislative Assembly. Under the referendum, any Bill passed by the Legislative Assembly, except such as are for the preservation of the public peace, health, and safety, may, by petition signed by five per cent. of the legal voters, be referred to the people to be voted on for approval or rejection at the next ensuing general election.

At the General Election held November, 1912, suffrage was extended to women and "every citizen of the United States of the age of 21 years and upwards who shall have resided in the State during the 6 months immediately preceding such election shall be entitled to vote."

The State is represented in Congress by two Senators and three Representatives.

Governor.—Ben. W. Olcott, 1919–1923. (5,000 dollars.)

Secretary of State.—Sam A. Kozer.

The State Capital is Salem. There are 36 counties in the State.

The foreign-born in 1910 numbered 113,136, of whom 17,958 were German, 12,409 Canadian, 7,998 English, 10,999 Swedish, 4,995 Irish, 5,538 Italian, 3,555 Greeks, and 6,843 Norwegian. The Indian reservations in 1919 comprised 1,889 square miles with a population of 3,912 Indians, while in addition there are approximately 3,000 Indians on the public domain.

Of the total population in 1910, 45·6 per cent. was urban. The largest towns, according to the 1920 census, are Portland, with a population of 258,288 ; Salem, 17,679 ; Medford, 5,756 ; Eugene, 14,027 ; Astoria, 10,595.

The chief religious bodies in the State are (in order of strength) Catholic, Methodist, Presbyterian, Baptist, Disciples of Christ, and Congregational denominations.

School attendance is compulsory for the full school term for children 9 to 15 years of age. For school year ending June 30, 1920, the 2,673 public schools had 7,695 teachers and 148,412 enrolled pupils, 220 standard 4 year high schools had 1,163 teachers and 24,641 pupils ; and the public normal school had, in 1920, 30 teachers and 230 pupils. Total expenditure on public school education (1919) 11,217,385 dollars. The State supports an Agricultural College at Corvallis, founded in 1870, which has an instructional staff of 265 (1920-21) and 3,623 students, and a University, known as the University of Oregon, organised at Eugene in 1876. In 1920 it had 123 professors, and 1,686 students. There are also Methodist, Presbyterian, Catholic, Congregational, and Baptist Colleges.

On January 1, 1910, the number of paupers in almshouses was 48, being 2·9 per 100,000 of the population, and of prisoners in penal institutions 1,668, being 100·7 per 100,000 of the population.

Finance, Defence.—The receipts and disbursements of the General Fund of the State, for the year ending September 30, 1920 :—

	Dollars
Balance, October 1, 1919 . . . . .	226,787
Receipts, Oct. 1, 1919—Sept. 30, 1920 . . . . .	7,984,650
Total . . . . .	8,211,437
Disbursements, Oct. 1, 1919—Sept. 30, 1920 . . . . .	8,194,950
Balance, September 30, 1920 . . . . .	16,487

In 1920 the amount of the State indebtedness was 19,859,025 dollars. In 1919 the assessed value of taxable property, as equalised, was 990,435,472 dollars.

On November 30, 1920, the National Guard of the United States and of the State of Oregon consisted of 12 companies of Infantry, 1 Headquarters company, 1 Supply Company, and 1 Machine Gun Company, completely equipped and officered ; also, 3 companies of Coast Artillery.

Production and Industry.—Oregon is one of the semi-arid States. In the river valley west of the Cascades there is a good rainfall and almost every variety of crop common to the temperate zone is grown. East of the Cascades lack of rainfall has been to some extent compensated for by irrigation by private companies as well as by State enterprise. Oregon has one-sixth of the standing timber of the United States ; in 1920 the forest area was 20,000,000 acres, of which 10,500,000 were in forest reserves. In 1910 there were 45,502 farms with an acreage of 11,685,110, of which 4,274,803 acres were improved land. The total value of all farm property in 1910 was 59,461,828 dollars ; in 1912, it was 631,317,255 dollars. The leading crops are wheat (22,900,000 bushels in 1920), hay (2,160,000 tons), and potatoes (4,230,000 bushels). Oats, barley, and flax-seed are grown to some extent. Sugar beet and hops are important crops. Fruits are grown, especially plums, apples, pears, strawberries, cherries, and loganberries. There is an active live-stock industry. Horses on January 1, 1921, numbered 276,000 ; milch cows, 216,000 ; other cattle, 675,000 ; sheep, 2,270,000 ; swine, 272,000. In 1920 the wool clip yielded 14,040,000 pounds. The salmon, sturgeon, halibut, and oyster fisheries are abundant.

The State has not risen to much importance as a mining State, although it possesses various mineral resources, including gold, silver, copper. The output of coal in 1917 was 28,327 net tons, valued at 95,663 dollars. Granite and other building stones were extracted to the value of 413,867 dollars. Other minerals are occasional gems, cobalt, lead, gypsum, and platinum.

In 1914 the manufacturing industries of Oregon had 2,320 establishments with an aggregate capital of 139,500,379 dollars ; they employed 4,431 salaried officials and 28,829 wage-earners ; the cost of the raw material used was 63,257,821 dollars, and the value of the output, 109,761,951 dollars. These industries are associated with the forest, agricultural, pastoral, and fishery products of the State.

Oregon has good water facilities in the Pacific Ocean, the Columbia river the Willamette river, and the Snake river. The Dalles and Celilo Canal, completed in 1915, opens the Columbia and Snake rivers to river navigation to a length of 570 miles from the ocean. Large ocean-going vessels can navigate the Columbia as far as Portland. Rivers and harbours are constantly dredged and improved. The value of imports at Portland for year ending December 30, 1919, was 3,151,964 dollars, and of exports, 112,464 dollars. In 1919 the State had a total railway mileage of 3,214, besides 722 miles of electric railway track. The principal lines are the Oregon-Washington Railroad and Navigation Company and the Southern Pacific and the so-called 'Hill lines.'

In November, 1920, there were 284 banks in the State, with total deposits of 281,420,908 dollars; of this amount 61,293,491 dollars was in savings deposits, including postal savings accounts; demand deposits amounted to 195,606,807 dollars; time deposits, 24,520,610 dollars.

PENNSYLVANIA.

Government.—Pennsylvania is one of the thirteen original States in the Union. The General Assembly consists of a Senate and a House of Representatives. Every citizen 21 years of age, resident in the State for one year, and in the election district for two months preceding the election, is entitled to vote, provided that he has paid a State or County tax within two years and at least one month before the election. The Senate consists of 50 members chosen for four years, 25 Senators being elected at each General Assembly election bi-annually. The House of Representatives consists of 207 members chosen for two years.

The State is represented in Congress by two Senators and 36 Representatives.

Governor.—Wm. C. Sproul, 1919-1923 (10,000 dollars).

Secretary of the Commonwealth.—Cyrus E. Woods (8,000 dollars).

For local administration the State is organised in counties, cities, boroughs, and townships. On a population basis, cities are divided into three classes and townships into two classes. There are 67 counties. The State Capital is Harrisburg.

Area, Population, Instruction.—Area, 45,126 square miles, of which 294 square miles is water area (excluding 891 square miles of Lake Erie).

Years	Population		Years	Population
	Total	Per sq. m.		Total	Per sq. m.
1860	2,906,215	64·6	1910	7,665,111	171·0
1900	6,302,115	140·6	1920	8,720,150	193·2

In 1910 the population by race and sex was :—

—	White	Negro	Asiatic	Indian	Total
Males : . . .	3,843,589	95,880	2,897		3,942,206

Of the total population in 1920, 49 per cent. was urban.

The chief religious bodies in the State are Roman Catholic, Methodist, Lutheran, Presbyterian, and Reformed bodies.

School attendance is compulsory for children 8 to 14 years of age for the full school term, but in fourth class (under 5,000) districts this may be reduced to 70 per cent. of the term for children over 12. In the year 1919 the 42,748 public elementary schools had 44,992 teachers and 1,741,143 enrolled pupils ; and the 911 public high schools had 5,155 teachers and 124,015 pupils. In the 13 State normal schools in 1919 there were 282 teachers with 4,331 pupils. Total expenditures on public school education (1919) 69,961,096 dollars. The Pennsylvania State College devotes special attention to modern industrial pursuits and to agriculture ; in connection with the college there is an Agricultural Experiment Station which receives from the United States Government an appropriation of 30,000 dollars a year. In addition to the above expense the State normal schools receive from the State 1,505,000 dollars.

The more important academic institutions (1920) within the State are as follows :—

Begun	Institutions.	Professors	Students
1740	University of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia (non-sect.)	949	11,344
1787	University of Pittsburg (non-sect.) . . . .	425	4,500

Charity.—In Centre County a State Penitentiary has been constructed. It is considered a model for such institutions. In it all electrocutions take place. There are 31 State Institutions of which 5 are in state of construction (10 general hospitals, 9 insane, 3 feeble-minded and epileptic, 3 reformatories, 1 home for soldiers and sailors, 2 penitentiaries, 1 deaf and dumb, 1 blind, 1 inebriate); and 7 semi-State institutions (1 insane, 1 feeble-minded and epileptic, 2 blind, 1 reform school, 2 deaf and dumb). There are 207 private hospitals, of which 167 receive State aid, 16 sanatoria of which 10 receive State aid, and 298 homes, of which 116 receive State aid. Of the State-aided homes 43 are for children, 11 for women and children, 12 for males, 33 for females, 8 for men, women and children; and 9 for men and women. In these homes there were 13,451 inmates. There are 20 county insane asylums subject to State supervision. On January 1, 1919, there were 15,650 inmates of almshouses, and 4,489 inmates of county jails.

Finance, Defence.—For the year ending Nov. 1, 1920, the receipts, payments, and balances were:—

	Dollars
Balance, November 1, 1919 . . . . .	14,266,021
Receipts, November 1, 1919, to Oct. 31, 1920	50,302,586
Total . . . . .	64,568,607
Expenditure, November 1, 1919, to Oct. 31, 1920	66,384,612
Deficit, November 1, 1920 . . . . .	1,815,695

On Dec. 1, 1917, the outstanding bonds of the State amounted to 22,651,110 dollars, which are partly covered by a sinking fund of 2,151,110 dollars. On November 1, 1920, the assessed value of real property amounted to 6,836,165,155 dollars, and the taxable value of personal property amounted to 1,907,734,355 dollars.

The State of Pennsylvania has been authorised under the Act of Congress, approved June 3, 1916, known as the National Defence Act, and which has been amended by the Act of Congress, approved June 5, 1920, to organise one division of National Guard troops, to be known as the 28th Division, and which is authorised to wear the insignia of the red keystone. In addition to this division, four regiments of infantry are being organised.

Of this organisation, consisting of about 728 officers and 15,500 men, there have been enlisted or commissioned to date 367 officers and 5,892 men.

Tables of organisation are now being prepared by a committee in the War Department, which will fix the relative strength of the various organisations of a division.

Production and Industry.—Agriculture, market gardening, fruit growing, horticulture and forestry are pursued within the State. In 1919 there were 202,256 farms; the farm area was 18,586,882 acres, of which 12,673,519 acres were improved. In 1918 the total value of all farm property was 1,253,274,862 dollars. In 1920 the yield of wheat was 26,774,760 bushels; oats, 44,858,325 bushels; tobacco, 60,541,000 pounds; maize, 66,457,800 bushels; rye, 3,810,470 bushels; buckwheat, 5,174,000 bushels; potatoes, 26,151,000 bushels; hay, 4,044,250 tons. In 1920 the wool clip amounted to 4,751,000 pounds. In 1921 the farm animals in Pennsylvania were 549,000 horses, 45,000 mules, 951,000 milch cows, 691,000 other cattle, 856,000 sheep, and 1,339,000 swine.

Pennsylvania so far exceeds all the rest of the States in the value of its mineral products as to stand almost alone. This is due principally to the State's leadership in the production of coal. In 1919, 158,785 workers were employed in and about the anthracite coal mines, and 180,830 in and about the bituminous coal mines. In 1919 the output of anthracite coal was 87,838,024 short tons, and of bituminous coal, 147,085,781 short tons. Other minerals are petroleum, natural gas, iron ore (magnetite and hematite), and pig-iron. Pennsylvania has important quarries, cement works, and brick and tile works. The output of by-product coke in 1919 was 5,747,000 net tons. In 1919 the output of Portland cement was 26,222,000 barrels, value 42,479,640 dollars. Pittsburg, having abundant supplies of coal, has become the principal iron-work centre.

According to the census of manufactures in 1918, there were in Pennsylvania, 20,593 manufacturing establishments, with an aggregate capital amounting to 5,445,676,500 dollars, employing 110,000 salaried officials and 1,835,306 wage-earners. The salaries in the year 1918 amounted to 140,544,100 dollars, and the wages in the year 1919, 2,234,154,400 dollars. The value of the output was 9,374,279,800 dollars.

Statistics of the more important industries, or groups of industries (according to the census of manufactures of 1910), are given in THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK for 1916, p. 600.

The textile manufactures are chiefly worsted goods, woollens, hosiery, carpets, silk goods, and cotton goods.

Pennsylvania, owing to the abundance of tanning substances, is the largest leather producing State in the Union; 60 per cent. of the glazed kid of the United States is made in Philadelphia. In 1916 the leather industry employed 13,592 workers, earning a total wage of 9,336,100 dollars, the total product being valued at 155,973,800 dollars. In 1916 there were cotton mills employing 5,826 workers, earning a total of 3,193,200 dollars.

The total value of imports at the port of Philadelphia for the year ending June 30, 1920, was 219,167,601 dollars, and of exports 449,691,705 dollars. The steamship lines trading with the port are classified for the year 1919 as follows:—Regular sailings, 25 lines; occasional sailings, 11 lines; coastwise, 3 lines; oil, 7 lines; and local and inland, 9 lines. Fourteen hundred and forty-seven vessels arrived from foreign ports, with a tonnage of 5,660,666 tons, while 2,057 vessels arrived from coastwise ports, with a tonnage of 3,646,289 tons. Of the vessels arriving from foreign ports, 615 were American. In 1919 Philadelphia exported 430,175 tons of anthracite coal valued at 4,086,662 dollars, and 438,684 tons of bituminous coal valued at 3,076,788 dollars. On Dec. 31, 1918, Pennsylvania contained 12,872 miles of steam railway, and 4,870 miles of electric railway track.

Statistics on September 1, 1920, of banks and banking institutions are:—

	No.	Amount of Deposits	Total Assets	Deposit Accounts
		Dollars	Dollars
Mutual Savings Banks . . . . .	10	292,074,777	314,741,274	544,758
State Banks . . . . .	241	288,109,699	352,115,061	864,509
Trust Companies . . . . .	330	1,018,811,269	1,461,895,890	1,866,056
National Banks . . . . .	851	1,894,798,000	2,496,905,000	2,614,809
Total . . . . .	1,432	3,493,788,745	4,625,157,225	5,890,127

These figures do not include 2,342 Building and Loan Associations with 835,998 shareholders and assets of 400,828,586 dollars.

RHODE ISLAND.

Constitution and Government.—The earliest settlers in the region which now forms the State of Rhode Island were colonists from Massachusetts who had been driven forth on account of their non-acceptance of the prevailing religious beliefs. The first of the settlements was made in 1636; and their numbers and importance quickly increased, settlers of every creed being welcomed. In 1647 a patent was granted for the government of the settlements, and on July 8, 1663, a charter was executed recognising the settlers as forming a body corporate and politic by the name of the English colony of Rhode Island and Providence Plantations. On May 29, 1790, the State accepted the Federal Constitution and entered the Union as one of the 13 original States. The General Assembly consists of a Senate and a House of Representatives. The Senate has 39 members, besides the Governor who is ex-officio President, and the Lieutenant-Governor who is ex-officio a Senator. The House of Representatives consists of 100 members. Every citizen, 21 years of age, who has resided in the State for 2 years, and is duly registered, is qualified to vote for any State officer.

Governor.—E. J. San Souci, 1921-23 (8,000 dollars).

Secretary of State.—J. Fred Parker.

The State is represented in the Federal Congress by 2 Senators and 3 Representatives.

The State is divided into 5 counties and 39 cities and towns. The State Capital is Providence.

Area, Population, Education.—Area 1,248 square miles, of which nearly 181 square miles is water. Census population on January 1, 1920, 604,397. Population of Census years :—

Oats, hay, potatoes and sweet potatoes, pease, sorghum, and other products are grown, the physical conditions permitting a great diversity of crops. Peanuts are grown in the Tennessee valley. The cotton crop for 1920 covered 824,000 acres and yielded 810,000 bales, valued at 20,150,000 dollars. The tobacco crop (1920) from 117,000 acres was 85,410,000 pounds valued at 17,082,000 dollars. Fruit-trees and small fruits (notably strawberries) are cultivated There are important forest products from about 27,300 square miles of woodland. Stock-raising in the State is falling off. On January 1, 1921, the domestic animals consisted of 338,000 horses, 277,000 mules, 386,000 milch cows, 570,000 other cattle, 526,000 sheep, and 1,636,000 swine. In 1919 the wool clip yielded 2,052,000 pounds of wool.

The most important mineral product of Tennessee is coal. The coal-fields of Tennessee have an area of about 4,400 square miles. Other mineral products are pig-iron, copper, zinc, gold, sandstone, marble, and limestone.

The manufacturing industries include iron and steel working, but are mainly concerned with agricultural products. Flour-milling, lumbering, the manufacture of cotton-seed oil and cake, the preparation of leather and of tobacco are progressing. There are also textile manufactures. According to the results of the census of manufactures in 1910, there were in the State, 4,609 manufacturing establishments, with a total capital of 167,924,000 dollars, employing 8,417 salaried officials and 73,840 wage-earners. The salaries paid in a year amounted to 9,186,000 dollars, and the wages to 28,252,000 dollars; the cost of materials used amounted to 104,016,000 dollars and the value of the output was estimated at 130,217,000 dollars. The statistics of the more important industries in 1910 are given in THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK for 1916, p. 613.

The Mississippi and Tennessee rivers are natural waterways, and the State contains (1917) 4,075 miles of steam railway, besides 467 miles of electric railway (1919).

The bonded debt, August 31, 1919, amounted to 4,002,200 dollars. The bonds are held entirely by State educational and charitable funds. In 1919 the assessed value of real property was 2,060,602,360 dollars, and of personal property was 989,898,582 dollars.

Production and Industry.—Texas is one of the most important agricultural States of the Union. In 1910 it had 417,770 farms with an area of 112,435,067 acres of farmland, of which 27,360,666 acres was improved land. Total value of all farm property in 1911 was 2,218,645,164 dollars. In the arid region of Texas and New Mexico an area of 160,000 acres is to be reclaimed under the Federal Reclamation Act. There are at present 2,950,488 acres of irrigable lands in Texas, of which 536,234 acres were actually irrigated in 1914. The chief crops in 1920 were (in bushels) maize, 174,200,000; wheat, 15,925,000; oats, 44,100,000; rice, 9,554,000; potatoes, 2,340,000. The yield of cotton in 1920 covered 12,576,000 acres and yielded 4,200,000 bales, valued at 277,200,000 dollars. Other products are tobacco (134,000 pounds in 1917), cane-sugar, sorghum, vegetables, and fruits (especially peaches). The State has a very great live-stock industry; on January 1, 1921, it contained 1,187,000 horses, 792,000 mules, 1,184,000 milch cows, 4,547,000 other cattle, 3,069,000 sheep, and 2,427,000 swine. The wool clip in 1919 amounted to 14,986,000 pounds of wool.

Texas ranks second among the States in the production of quicksilver. Coal is also of great importance. Other mineral products are petroleum, natural gas, salt, cement, gypsum, granite, sandstone, and limestone.

In 1914 there were in the State 5,084 manufacturing establishments with an aggregate capital of 283,543,820 dollars, 16,261 proprietors, firm members, and salaried employees, and 74,853 wage-earners. The cost of material used in the year was 253,144,261 dollars, and the value of the output was 361,279,303 dollars. Statistics of some industries (1914 census) are as follows :—

Other important industries are petroleum refining (ranks first as to value of product), copper and smelting refining, manufacture of ice, food preparations, cotton goods, leather goods, and ground and roasted coffee.

A large trade passes through the port of Galveston, which is by far the most important outlet for the cotton grown in the United States, and as a commercial port it is now second only to New York. Imports in 1919, 17,704,906 dollars; exports, 467,699,216 dollars. A permanent causeway over 2 miles in length, to connect Galveston with the mainland, was opened to traffic in May, 1912. The level of the town has been raised so as to protect it from storms. The railways in the State (June 30, 1919) have a total mileage of 15,931 miles. There are 989 miles of electric inter-urban railway in active operation in Texas and 472 miles are under construction or proposed. There are also 91 miles of inter-urban lines operated by gasoline power.

There are 1,047 miles of navigable water in the rivers of Texas over which there was moved 1,867,158 short tons of traffic in the calendar year 1910. The long coast line with its good harbour facilitates traffic by sea.

British Consul at Galveston.—Alexander Spencer Perceval.

There is also a vice-consul at Galveston.

UTAH.

Constitution and Government.—Utah, which had been acquired by the United States during the Mexican war, was, in 1847, settled by Mormons, and on Sept. 9, 1850, organised as a Territory. It was admitted as a State into the Union on July 16, 1894.

The Legislature consists of a Senate and a House of Representatives; but the Constitution provides for the initiation of any desired legislation by the legal voters or such number of them as may be determined by law, and such voters may require any law passed by less than a two-thirds vote of each House of the Legislature to be submitted to the voters of the State before coming into effect.

The Senate (in part renewed every two years) consists of 18 members, elected for four years; the House of Representatives has 46 members elected for two years. Qualified as electors are all citizens, male or female, who, not being idiots, insane or criminals have resided one year in the State, four months in the county, and 60 days in the precinct in which the election is held.

Governor.—Chas. R. Mabey, 1921-25 (5,000 dollars.)

Secretary of State.—Harden Bennion.

There are 28 counties in the State. The Capital is Salt Lake City.

Area, Population, Instruction.—Area, 84,990 square miles, of which 2,806 square miles is water. The area of the Indian reservations in 1919 was 2,889 square miles, and the population, 3,048 Indians.

Census population on January 1, 1920, 49,396.

The population at the date of each of the Federal censuses was :—

Years	Pop.	Per sq. mile	Years	Pop.	Per sq. mile
1880	148,963	1·8	1900	276,749	3·4
1890	210,779	2·6	1910	373,351	4·5

In 1910 the population by sex and race was :—

—	White	Negro	Asiatic	Indian	Total

Total . . .	366,583	1,144	2,501	3,123	373,351

Of the total in 1910, 65,882 were foreign-born, of whom 18,083 were English, 3,963 German, 4,039 Greek, 7,227 Swedes, 1,657 Irish. In 1914, 3,387 immigrants arriving at United States ports gave Utah as their destination. Of these 934 were Anglo-Saxon, 908 Latin, 136 Slav, 768 Greeks, and the others were Jews, Mongolians, or cosmopolitan.

Of the total population in 1910, 46·3 per cent. was urban. The largest city is Salt Lake City with a population of 118,110 according to the census of 1920. Ogden in 1920 had 32,804 inhabitants, and Provo, 10,303.

Latter-day Saints form about 75 per cent. of the Church membership of the State. There are Catholics; Presbyterians. Methodists, Baptists, Christian Scientists, and Congregationalists in small numbers.

In 1910 the percentage of illiterates in the population was only 2·5, the number being 6,821, of whom 3,636 were foreign-born. School attendance for 20 weeks annually (10 consecutive), in large cities 30 weeks (10 consecutive), is compulsory on children from 8 to 16 years of age. In 1918 the 642 public elementary schools had 3,449 teachers and 110,193 enrolled pupils; 43 public high schools had 471 teachers and 10,097 pupils. A State normal school had 853 pupils in 1916 and 34 teachers; it is maintained in connection with the university. The Latter-day Saints (or Mormons) also maintain a Church Teachers' Summer School, which in 1915 had 15 instructors and 234 students. The same church also has missionary correspondence schools, which in December, 1915, had two instructors and 148 correspondent students. The University of Utah was organised 1850, and had 129 instructors and 3,431 students in 1918. Utah has a school of arts and sciences and a State school of mines. The Utah agricultural college (founded in 1890) has 86 instructors and 1,196 students. Both of these institutions receive annual grants from the State. The Mormon Church maintains the Brigham Young University at Provo, organised in 1875, which in 1918 had 75 instructors and 1,263 students; the Brigham Young College at Logan, organised in 1878, which in 1919 had 35 instructors, and 800 students; the Latter-day Saints' University at Salt Lake City, organised in 1890, had 47 instructors and 1,280 students; also 7 academies scattered throughout the State having 81 instructors and 1,749 students. Total expenditure on education (1918), 5,356,554 dollars.

Charity.—Apart from almshouses and asylums for imbeciles there are 13 benevolent institutions within the State. Eight of these are hospitals, one of which belongs to the Federal Government, one to Salt Lake City, and one to Salt Lake County. The State has an institution for the deaf, the dumb, and the blind, with 146 inmates in 1915; an industrial school with 141 juveniles under its control, and a mental hospital with 536 patients in 1915. There are three orphanages and various other charitable institutions (including seven hospitals) provided by private associations or religious bodies. On January 1, 1916, the almshouses had 219 pauper inmates. In 1915 the counties spent 196,311 dollars for relief of indigents.

Finance.—For biennium ending November 30, 1920, the revenue and expenditure were:—

Production and Industry.—Agriculture is the most important occupation within the State. In 1920 the State contained 29,075 farms with a total area of 4,233,811 acres, of which 1,691,595 acres was improved land. The total value of all farm property in 1920 was 222,736,620 dollars. In 1916 the rural population was 52 per cent. of the total population. The chief agricultural crop is hay (1,748,358 tons in 1920), but cereals are still grown in large quantities; in 1920 the yield of oats was 2,396,349 bushels; of maize, 937,375 bushels, together with 475,161 tons of silage; wheat, 176,003 bushels; and barley, 196,815 bushels. The production of potatoes in 1920 was 2,277,387 bushels; of tobacco, 165,000 pounds; apples and maple sugar and syrup are important.

Cattle raising, especially of milk cows, is one of the chief agricultural pursuits. In 1920 Vermont had 435,480 cattle on farms, or nearly one-third of all the cattle in New England. The value of livestock on Vermont farms in 1920 was 28,502,803 dollars. Vermont leads all the States of the Union in pounds of butter per capita, pounds of butter per farm, pounds of butter per cow, and in ratio of dairy cows to population. On January 1, 1921, Vermont had 275,000 milch cows, 186,000 other cattle, 84,000 horses, 91,000 sheep, and 105,000 swine. In 1919 the wool clip yielded 690,000 bs.

The forests of the State provide material for extensive timber and lumber trade, and flourishing wood pulp manufacture. Other industries are flour-milling, foundry and machine-shop work and the manufacture of hosiery and other woollen goods. According to the returns of the Federal census of manufactures in 1914, there were in Vermont 1,792 manufacturing establishments with an aggregate capital of 79,847,000 dollars, paying wages to the annual amount of 18,617,000 dollars, using raw material costing 42,706,000 dollars, and giving an output valued at 76,991,000 dollars.

The statistics of the more important industries in 1910 are given in THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK for 1916, p. 622.

The marble quarries, first opened in 1785, produce half of the marble of the United States. There are also granite quarries; slate and fibrous talc are likewise found. Metals occur only in small quantities.

There are (1917) 1,055 miles of railway in the State chiefly managed by the Central Vermont, Boston and Maine, and the Rutland. There are also electric railways with 102 miles of track. The lakes, rivers, and canals are also used for traffic with other States and with Canada.

VIRGINIA.

Constitution and Government.—The first English Charter for settlements in America was that granted by James I. in 1606 for the planting of colonies in Virginia. The State was one of the thirteen original States in the Union. On the outbreak of the civil war in 1861, Virginia, after long hesitation, decided to join the seceding States a course objected to by the western portion of the State, which in 1863 was admitted into the Union as West Virginia.

The General Assembly consists of a Senate and a House of Delegates, the former containing not more than 40 nor less than 33 members and the latter not more than 100 nor less than 90. Senators are elected for 4 years. The Senate contains 40 members. The House of Delegates contains 100 members, elected for 2 years. Qualified as electors are (with few exceptions) all citizens 21 years of age, resident in the State for 2 years and in the county, city, town, or precinct for which the election is held for 30 days, who have paid their State poll-taxes and registered.

The State sends to the Federal Congress 2 Senators and 10 Representatives.
